There is a grey frame house with neat white trim and old-fashioned verandas at 51 Queen's Crescent. Some alumni will remember it as a private home; W.M. Nickle, K.C., lived there, and Dean Matheson raised his family in it. Others will know it as home to a series of Institutes. Now it is well used and widely known simply as "the grey house", the heart of student services on campus.

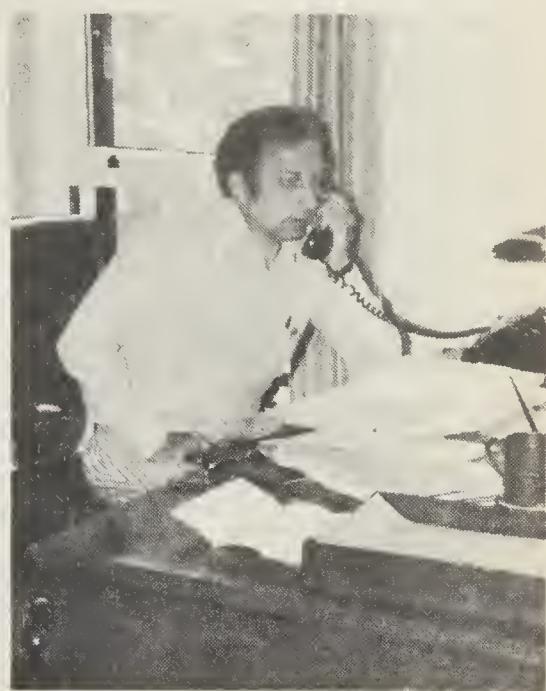

Surrounded by the massive concrete newness of Victoria Hall, the new music building (Harrison-LeCaine Hall) and Watson Hall, the grey house is an island of homey comfort, informality and warm personal concern. From it, Finn Bogstad co-ordinates a network of services available to all students, developed to help them deal with the particular concerns and needs of student years. He also maintains liaison with four denominational chaplains, the Dean of Women and officers of the AMS.

The term Student Services now covers a lot of ground, both literally and functionally:

- Career Planning and Placement is in a house at the corner of Union and University;
- The Day Care Centre, a licensed co-operative nursery, is at 169 Union St.;
- The International Centre is attached to the Students' Union;
- The Student Affairs Centre is located in the grey house itself. This is not only a drop-in centre, where a cup of coffee and a listener are always ready, but is also the core of several AMS-sponsored services — the Student Volunteer Bureau; the Birth Control, V.D. and Abortion Referral Centre; Teleclinic (a telephone referral service run by health science students); TAK (Telephone Aid Kingston, an empathetic answering service for people in distress); and the Centre for Drug Education and Counselling, with a 24-hour crisis service.
- The Student Health Service is across the street, in the St. Lawrence Building. A daily clinic looks after the health needs, physical and emotional, of 150 students a day. A doctor is on call around the clock, and convalescent bed care is handled, when necessary, by an infirmary in Victoria Hall.
- The Student Counselling Service is at 32 Queen's Crescent, above the Ban Righ Foundation for Continuing Education. Free psychological and counselling services are offered on educational, vocational and personal problems. Groups meet regularly to work on reading improvement, study skills, anxiety reduction, relaxation training, and human sexuality. While only a small minority of students suffer from serious psychiatric conditions, a Psychiatric Division stands by to deal with referrals from counsellors or physicians.

If you are the parent of a Queen's student, you may never know how much he or she uses the services of these skilled professionals. Neither do faculty members or university administrators outside the operation, because all counselling is confidential. One thing you do know: your student is in good hands at the grey house.

Four denominational chaplains, in addition to Padre Laverty, are at the service of students and staff. Left to right, they are Ed Shea (Roman Catholic chaplain), Eric Howes (Anglican), Ken Ghies (Lutheran) and Bill Dykstra (Christian Reformed). Each chaplaincy has its own identity and worship, but all co-operate in the counselling program, interdenominational retreats, etc. Each has regular office hours at the grey house.

At the licensed Day Care Centre, student, faculty and staff parents share with professionals in the care of about 35 children, aged six months to 4½ years.

The Career Planning and Placement Service, directed by Jim Kelly, is staffed by four experts in part-time, summer and permanent job placement. They offer a series of career seminars and group discussions, as well as individual guidance. The Centre's library is an excellent resource, too.

Dr. H.W. Greenidge, as director of the Health Service, puts students in touch with specialists, GP's and nurses who provide comprehensive out-patient care, including immunization, allergy injections, contraceptive advice and health counselling. No appointment is necessary, and an average of 150 patients file into the clinic five days a week.

The semi-annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association was held on October 3, coincident with Reunion Weekend celebrations. It was chaired by retiring president Russell J. Kennedy.

On the recommendation of the Special Nominating Committee, the following slate of officers was elected for the coming year: President, Eric G.A. Jorgensen, Sc. '49, Toronto; First Vice-President, Mrs. K.B. Parkinson (Wilda Baker), Arts '43, Kanata, Ont.; Second Vice-President, Ray M. Bassett, Arts '49, Toronto.

The following graduates were appointed to the Board of Directors for a term of one year: Mrs. J.J. Clarke, Arts '42, and D.C. MacLean, Arts '51, Pointe Claire, Que.; Mrs. Mary Collins, Arts '61, Sudbury, Ont.; Keith F. Eaman, Sc. '72, Montreal, Que.; H.A.T. Fleming, Arts '47, Kingston, Ont.; Dr. William James, Med. '63, and J.L. Rasmussen, Law '64, Ottawa, Ont.; E.G.A. Jorgensen, Sc. '49, Miss Catherine Paterson, Arts '70, and Ms. K. Segsworth, Arts '66, Toronto, Ont.

The Board also received the results of the annual elections, in which the following nominees were elected for three-year terms: R.M. Bassett, Arts '49, Toronto; Prof. C.H.R. Campling, Sc. '44, Kingston; Dr. W.A.L. McDonald, Med. '41, Trenton, Ont.; Mrs. K.B. Parkinson, Arts '43, Kanata; and J.O. Tweedy, Sc. '48 $\frac{1}{2}$, Ancaster, Ont.

The Directors dealt with nine important matters on their morning and afternoon agenda.

Murray Gill, Director of Alumni Affairs, reported on ways in which the Alumni Association might effect budget savings of the magnitude recommended in the report of the Principal's Committee on Financial Constraint. These measures included reducing staff and accepting commercial advertising in the Queen's Review. Subsequently, having heard the editor of the Review, Cathy Morton, report on the implications of accepting such advertising, the Directors voted approval of "accepting commercial advertising in the Queen's Review, subject to the discretion of the Editorial Review Board."

Mr. Gill and President Kennedy also reported that excellent progress is being made by the systems analyst and the Alumni Office toward the design of a computerized records system.

Principal Ronald L. Watts presented an address bringing the Board up to date on the financial problems facing the University, and John Gray, President of the Alma Mater Society, briefly outlined student activities and projects.

Alumni Fund Director Ernie Hurlbut reported that the 1974/75 Fund exceeded the previous Fund's totals in almost every area. He attributed much of the success to increased Telethon activities in early 1975.

As a Nominating Committee for the 1976 elections to the Board of Directors, the current Board appointed the president of the Ottawa Alumnae Branch and the presidents of the Belleville, Calgary, Guelph and Washington Alumni Branches.

Reports were given by Mrs. Sylva MacKay, president of the Alumnae Association; Prof. Bill Miklas of the University Committee on Athletics; Mary Alice Murray of the Convocation Committee; and Bob Poole, Alumni representative on the University Centre Committee.

Guests at the Directors' Luncheon included Principal Watts, Vice-Principal James M. Courtright, and Frank Tindall, respected coach of the Golden Gaels football and basketball teams, who is retiring next spring after 29 years at Queen's.

Reunion 1975

As the Whig-Standard put it, Reunion '75 was "a memory-lane weekend". Kingston weather was at its best, for 48 full hours of events attended by about 1,200 alumni and their spouses.

While the students were holding their homecoming pep rally on Friday evening, grads were gathering in Grant Hall to meet Principal Watts and Chancellor Michener. A reception bonus this fall was the presentation of a "fashion show" with historical commentary to mark the 50th anniversary of Ban Righ Hall.

Saturday started with a pancake breakfast at the Union and marched along with a box luncheon in the Bartlett Gym, a parade west to Richardson Stadium for the game with Varsity (we lost), coffee and donuts at McArthur Hall or birthday cake back at Ban Righ, and a variety of dinners and dances, on and off campus.

All grads from 1915 and 1925 were the University's special guests at both the game and the Reunion Dinner.

Several classes combined their celebrations: Arts '37 through '40 organized joint bus tours, cocktail parties and dinner; Sc. '58 and '59 combined forces with Arts '59, '60 and '61 for a big bash at the Kingston Yacht Club; and Med. '55, '56 and '57 dined and danced at the Cataraqui Golf and Country Club.

All classes from 1965 celebrated their 10th anniversary. Other classes that "came home" were Arts '22, '30, '55 and '70; Sc. '45 and '55; Med. '30 and Com. '75. Med. '46 celebrated one weekend later.

Sc. '45, a class already known for the zest it brings to Reunions, appeared en masse at the stadium with umbrellas in the Queen's colours, brought all the way from Taiwan by George Hale. Other alumni travelled thousands of miles from San Diego and Newport Beach in California, Daniel's Harbour, Nfld., Newcastle, N.B., and east from Victoria, Vancouver and Regina.

It's time to start on those 1976 newsletters, notices, room reservations, weather forecasts....

The End of the Tindall Era

The big news of the 1975 football season was not the accomplishment of the Golden Gaels, although they did make the play-offs, but the retirement of Frank Tindall as head coach after 29 years in the post.

Everything must come to an end, but it is still a wrench to realize that the Kindly Old Coach will no longer be in charge of football destinies at Queen's. An integral part of the scene for so long, he is as familiar a landmark as Grant Hall. The end of the Tindall era marks the end of a notable career.

It would be gratifying to report that the 1975 Gaels had won another championship, but it was not meant to be. The desire was there; the boys wanted very badly to give the Mentor a title as a going-away present, but they just weren't strong enough to pull it off. For one thing, they had in their league grouping Toronto and Ottawa, ranked either one or two in the nation all year (a ranking they richly deserved) and while the Gaels gave it the old college try, they just couldn't cope with the strength of the opposing forces. And injuries, bugbear of all coaches, new and old, hamstrung their best efforts.

So, the Gaels lost 26-0 and 32-10 to Toronto, 35-14 to Ottawa, and 17-14 to Concordia. Yes, that's right, Concordia, a combination of what used to be Loyola and Sir George Williams universities. This was a game Queen's appeared to be well on the way to winning, but there was a let-down in the fourth quarter.

Concordia also defeated McGill, so they were for real. In the win column were victories over Carleton (4-1), McMaster (16-3) and Bishop's (37-6). For Bishop's Gaitors, at Lennoxville, the Gaels produced their best offensive, a happy note for the end of the regular season.

For their pains, Queen's gained the doubtful privilege of meeting Ottawa in the play-offs, while Concordia drew Toronto. Queen's went down to defeat 57-26, but managed to score four touchdowns in a space of ten minutes late in the third quarter and early in the fourth. Concordia bowed to Toronto 43-24, after running up an 18-0 lead at the half.

Darrell Penner, co-captain of the Gaels, was named to the all-Canadian defensive team.

In Frank's first year, 1939, the Gaels had a 3-3 record, and in this, his last, 3-5. In between there were good years and lean years, with the good outnumbering the bad two to one. When Queen's played in the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association (OQAA), the Gaels made the finals 10 times out of 20 and won the championship six times. After more teams were admitted in 1968, Queen's won the championship twice more before the OQAA came to an end in 1970. In 1968, Queen's won the College Bowl, emblematic of the national football championship.

Over the 29 years, Tindall's Gaels won 111 games, against 84 losses and two ties, and out-scored their opponents 3,572 to 2,972.

The outstanding feature about Frank Tindall, however, is not that he managed to survive and to succeed in a highly vulnerable profession; what's outstanding is the manner in which he did it, the personality of the man himself, the impact that he had on the players, and the honour and respect he has brought to Queen's. The rapport he established with his players is extraordinary, friends on and off the field, and the relationship has been permanent. He is a born leader of men.

Many honours have come his way and more are on the agenda. Trophies have been named in his honour, presentations have been made around the league, and his praises have been sung far and wide on sports pages and telecasts. A very successful testimonial dinner was held by former players in 1968, and an even more ambitious affair is planned for May 15, 1976.

When Ted Reeve, who was the coach from 1933 to '38, retired from Queen's to try his luck in the Big Four, he wrote in his column in the Toronto Telegram: "The man who gets that job is a fortunate fellow. We hope he enjoys it as much as we did." Frank Tindall was that man, and not only was he fortunate, but Queen's also.

Principal Wallace said of him: "I don't know anything about football, but I know a man when I see one."

And so did all the people with whom he came in contact. To you, Frank Tindall, a hearty Cha Gheill! — H.J.H.

DIGGING IN

FOR PROJECT GREEN

This lively and dedicated group of 22 student volunteers camped for a weekend on Lou Bruce's Quebec tree farm and bagged 20 fine evergreens for the Grant Hall court project. Standing second from right is Karl Duttle, Queen's head groundsman.

An idea planted by an alumnus last spring came into full bloom this fall. Reading about Project Green, the student-initiated move to re-green the greying campus, Queen's grad Lou Bruce offered 20 mature trees from his tree farm near Shawville, Que. A brigade of 22 student volunteers, along with Karl Duttle, the University's head groundsman, made a weekend trek north on October 18-19. The interfaculty team dug around the trees and balled the roots in burlap, ready for lifting by crane onto a flatbed truck for transfer to the campus after the roots were safely frozen.

All but four of the trees are destined for the "court" between Ontario and Grant Halls and will be complemented by student-funded benches and lighting. The cost of trees to regreen this concrete area was estimated at $6,000 in 1974. The gift of trees and the volunteer labour saved the University about $4,500.

Lou Bruce, a former Queen's football hero and Ottawa Rough Rider, is a graduate of Arts, Phys. Ed. '56. He is owner-manager of an Ottawa plastics firm, Canus Equipment Ltd., as well as being a tree-farmer and Queen's supporter of long standing.

Dave Gordon, Sc. '76, founder and past president of Project Green, takes a breather after neatly roping this tree's roots, ready for lifting by crane.

Getting a 20-foot spruce ready for transplanting is heavy work. Richard Wyman, Sc. '78, is almost shoulder-deep in tree roots. This effort helped save $4,500.

Bill Nowell and Kith Muggu, a work team from Biology, demonstrate that the root trenches had to be dug wide as well as deep. Next step was to wrap the roots.

Steve Ostrom, Sc. '76, had the muscle needed to pull taut the ropes which bound the roots into big burlap balls. The trees came to Kingston on flat bed trucks.

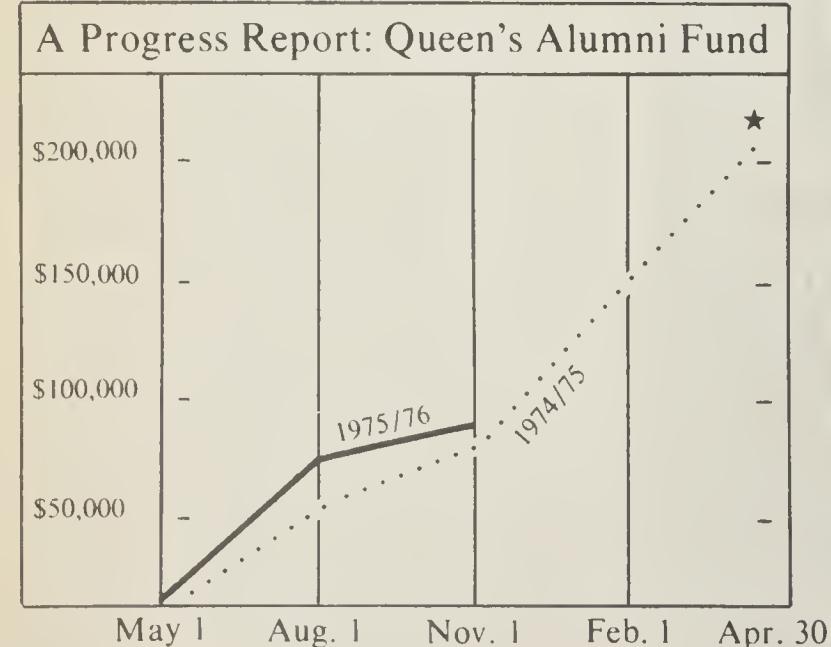

DO YOU PARTICIPATE ?

Last year's Alumni Fund established a record in annual giving — $211,835. This achievement was the direct result of a greater degree of participation on the part of the graduates and a record number of increased gifts. Our donor total of 5,620 was 610 higher than in 1974/75.

On May 1 this year, 25,000 graduates were asked to support the 1975/76 Annual Alumni Fund. By mid-November almost 3,000 personal gifts had been made, and the Fund reported a slight improvement over last year's performance.

To maintain this favorable trend until the Fund closes on April 30, the Fund Committee is again planning several Telethons for early 1976 and will soon be seeking the help of graduates in promoting more class involvement in annual Fund activities. In any one year, there are between 15,000 and 20,000 Queen's alumni who do not support the annual giving programs. A modest annual gift from each graduate of Queen's who is in a position to make one would quickly double the Annual Alumni Fund. This would do much to advance the Alumni Association's purpose of 'promoting the welfare and advancing the interests, influence and usefulness of the University.'

Our objective this year is $220,000 — less than $10 from every Queen's family. To reach this goal we need your help.

Dr. Morris Love to be Vice-Principal

'Cabinet Shuffle'

The Board of Trustees at its October meeting approved the reorganization of the present responsibilities of three Vice-Principals (Academic, Administration and Finance) between two Vice-Principals (Finance and Services).

Prof. G. A. Harrower, Vice-Principal (Academic), and Prof. R. J. Kennedy, Vice-Principal (Administration), will conclude their current terms on April 30, 1976, after six years of service, and will go on well-earned leaves before returning to academic duties. The conclusion of their terms will provide the occasion for a reorganization of these positions.

Prof. David Bonham, Vice-Principal (Finance), will continue to be responsible for the general financial administration of the University, including the office of the University Secretary, and will assume additional responsibilities for personnel and staff liaison, purchasing and food services, university information systems and capital development and financing.

Professor Bonham was appointed to his present position in 1971 after serving as Assistant Vice-Principal (Finance) for one year. Prior to that he was Executive Assistant to the Principal. He joined Queen's in 1965 as Associate Professor in the Faculty of Law and the School of Business, becoming full Professor in 1967. He is a member of the Law Societies of Saskatchewan and Upper Canada, and of the Institutes of Chartered Accountants in Saskatchewan and Ontario. In 1970 he was elected a Fellow of the Institute in Ontario. Vice-Principal Bonham is author or co-author of a number of professional publications and has acted as consultant in the fields of taxation and accounting. He holds Commerce, Arts, and Law degrees from the University of Saskatchewan, and received the degree of Master of Laws from Harvard University.

On May 1, 1976, Prof. H. Morris Love will assume for a five-year term the new office of Vice-Principal (Services). He will be responsible for the library, the Computing Centre, student services, the Registrar's office, university services such as printing, space allocation, parking, etc., the residences, housing and property management, cultural services such as the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, the Performing Arts Office, CFRC, etc., Queen's TV, the Donald Gordon Centre, physical plant and campus planning. In preparation for this reorganization, Professor Love relinquished his present responsibilities as Associate Dean in the Faculty of Arts and Science on Oct. 27, and in the interim period is on special assignment, reporting directly to the Principal. During this period, Professor Love will plan the redefinition of responsibilities, the consolidation of activities, and the elimination of apparent anomalies as called for by the Committee on Financial Constraint in order that changes aimed at reducing costs and improving efficiency may be brought into effect at the time he assumes office.

Dr. Love has been Associate Dean in the Faculty of Arts and Science since 1970. A member of the Department of Physics since 1952, he was made Associate Professor in 1957 and Professor in 1965. He is a specialist in surface physics and mass spectrometry, and has published a number of articles in his field. He taught at the University of Toronto before coming to Queen's and in recent years has held visiting appointments at the Chalk River Laboratories of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., the Radio and Electrical Engineering Division of the National Research Council of Canada, Ottawa, and the University of Southampton. Professor Love has also served as Chairman of Division IV (Physical Sciences) of the School of Graduate Studies and Research. He is a graduate of Queen's University, Belfast.

In making the announcement, the Principal expressed the University's gratitude for the service that Vice-Principals Harrower and Kennedy have each rendered to Queen's University in their present offices, during a difficult period of changing circumstances, and added his own warm personal appreciation for all the assistance they had rendered to him.

Around the Campus

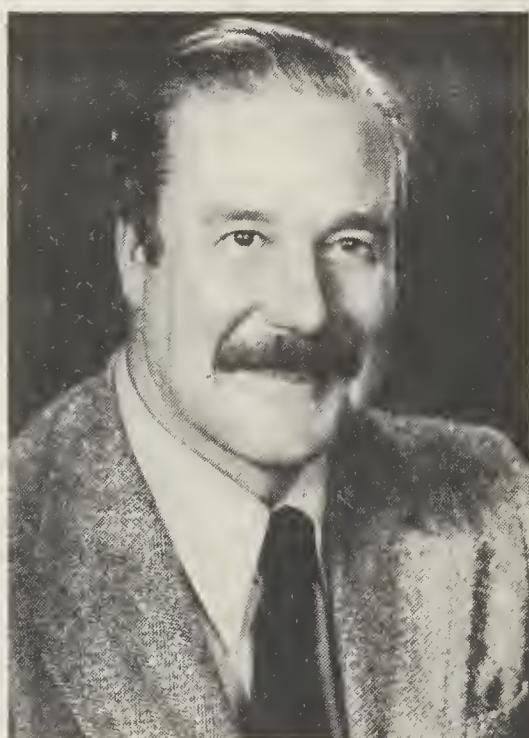

Dr. Boag appointed Dean of Medicine

On December 1, Dr. Thomas J. Boag assumed office as Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, succeeding Dr. D.O.W. Waugh. Dr. Boag, who was head of the Department of Psychiatry, was appointed for a term running until June 30, 1982.

In appointing Dr. Boag, Principal Watts commented on the strong support which was expressed by the Advisory Committee on the Deanship of Medicine, as well as in the Faculty and the University, for Dr. Boag's candidacy. The Principal added his personal pleasure that Dr. Boag had accepted the appointment and expressed his confidence that Dr. Boag would provide the leadership appropriate to the time of challenge and opportunity facing the Faculty of Medicine.

Dr. Boag has been at Queen's since 1967, when he took up his present position as head of the Department of Psychiatry and Psychiatrist-in-Chief of Kingston General Hospital. During that period he has also served as consultant at the other hospitals in the Queen's and Kingston Health Sciences Complex.

Born in Liverpool, England, Dr. Boag graduated in medicine from the University of Liverpool. After three years in the Royal Army Medical Corps, in which he was a captain, and some time at the Liverpool Royal Infirmary, he came to Canada in 1948 and spent his first year on the house staff at K.G.H. He then went to McGill to pursue postgraduate training and subsequently psychoanalytic training at McGill and on the staff of the Allen Memorial Institute of Psychiatry, Royal Victoria Hospital.

In 1961 he went to Burlington, Vermont, as Professor of Psychiatry, charged with establishing a department in the University of Vermont College of Medicine. While there he also set up psychiatric departments in the two teaching hospitals in Burlington and was the first Chief of Psychiatry in both.

He is a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Royal College of Psychiatrists, and the American Psychiatric Association. He is also a member of numerous medical and psychiatric organizations and has published a considerable number of professional papers in his field.

Since coming to Queen's, Dr. Boag has held membership in many committees of the Faculty of Medicine and K.G.H. He has been active on the University Senate and has chaired its Committee on Operations Review and the Nominating Committee. He has also chaired the University Health Council and served on the Principal's Committee on Financial Constraint, which reported earlier this year.

Dr. Boag has been active since 1967 in a number of provincial committees dealing with health research. He is currently chairman of the Advisory Board of the Ontario Mental Health Foundation, and chairman of the Specialty Committee in Psychiatry of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada.

His wife Lorna is a child psychiatrist at Kingston Psychiatric Hospital and also teaches at Queen's. Two of their four children are Queen's men and biologists: Peter, Artsci '74, and Graham, Artsci '78.

Aids for the handicapped being assessed by team

The Ontario Ministry of Health has awarded $62,000, spread over two years, for a study of the application of communication aids and environmental controls to the care of the handicapped. The program is headed by Prof. Denis W. Lywood, Director of the Bio-Medical Engineering Unit, and Dr. D.C. Symington, Professor and Head of the Department of Rehabilitation Medicine.

"We hope to measure objectively the psychological benefits such aids have to a patient," explains Professor Lywood. "We want to know if the patient using aids requires less care, whether aids make him happier, and whether they bring about a cost saving in the care of a severely physically handicapped person."

The project does not involve the design of new aids; rather it is an assessment of the contribution that existing aids can make to health care. The grant will provide an opportunity for severely handicapped patients in the Eastern Ontario area to experience the use of this relatively new equipment and to participate in the assessment of its value.

The Queen's study is part of a co-operative program between the two specialists' departments and will involve an electronics engineer and technician, physicians, occupational therapists, a medical statistician and a psychologist.

Fall Convocation in Grant Hall

At the Fall Convocation held on Saturday morning, Nov. 8, in Grant Hall, 250 students — most of them from the School of Graduate Studies and Research and the Faculty of Arts and Science — were laureated.

The graduating group was made up of students who worked for their undergraduate degrees during Intersession (spring term) and Summer School, plus graduate students who completed their theses after Spring Convocation.

The Convocation was addressed by the Principal.

Grant from Travelers

The University has received a grant under the provisions of The Travelers Alumni Grant program. The grant from the Connecticut-centred company is based upon the number of Queen's alumni now employed by The Travelers throughout the U.S. and Canada.

In a letter to Principal Watts, company President M.H. Beach explained that the program was established "to recognize the vital role played by universities in the advancement of our society."

"We hope," he added, "this grant will assist you in meeting the increasing financial burden facing educational institutions. Please accept our thanks for the fine contribution made by Queen's University toward the education of our people, as well as our best wishes for continued success."

Special Ministry grant for maintenance projects

Painting, minor alterations and the construction of walkways around new buildings are under way in parts of the campus, due to a special grant from the Ontario Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

At the request of the Ministry, Queen's compiled a list of maintenance jobs which had been shelved due to financial constraints. The government chose eight labour-intensive projects from this list and made a special grant of $261,000.

Because most of the work is indoors, it can be accomplished in the next few months. The three largest projects are the painting of building interiors where such maintenance is overdue, alterations where the Law library in Macdonald Hall meets Mackintosh-Corry Hall, and the installation of lockstone pathways around new buildings.

Other projects include the development of more seminar and teaching rooms in Humphrey Hall (Psychology), work in Old Arts to regain space needed for offices, minor changes to Jackson Hall (Engineering Drawing) for office space where Physical Plant workrooms were formerly located, and the addition of offices in Duncan McArthur Hall (Faculty of Education).

The overall freeze on provincial funding for major new buildings, declared in 1972, remains unchanged.

PEDAL POWER has changed the look of Queen's, and campus planners continue to scour their maps in search of places to build the additional bicycle racks needed. The pedallers' parking lot above is along a wall of Victoria Hall. Other popular hitching rails are at the Library and the Gym.

Belleville hospital to be affiliated with Queen's Belleville General Hospital is to have a Family Medicine Centre affiliated with Queen's. According to a joint announcement made in September, the Centre will be opened in 1977, in accordance with the policy of the Ontario Government and the College of Family Physicians of Canada.

The Family Medicine Centre will be located in the Cavell Block of Belleville General Hospital and will house several medical practices in which family physicians will teach young doctors. By 1979, a total of 15 doctors will be in training there.

Discussions about such an affiliation began in 1973, when Dr. R.T. Potter, Med. '39, then Minister of Health, announced a policy of sharing the teaching of health professionals between selected community hospitals and the facilities of university teaching hospitals. The concept is referred to as the "extended campus".

Queen's Department of Family Medicine became operational in 1973 when Dr. E.R. Haynes was appointed its first head. The department's activities are now centred at the new Hotel Dieu Family Medicine Centre, which opened in October.

Dr. H.G. Kelly, Med. '40, says he is "confident that this combined approach to the education of family physicians by the Belleville General Hospital, Hotel Dieu Hospital, and Queen's Faculty of Medicine will be a decided asset in family health care for the whole region."

Richardson Foundation Support

The Board of Trustees has announced that a grant of $30,000 has been received from The Mrs. James A. Richardson Foundation Inc. for the support of the Department of Family Medicine. The money will be used to recruit new members of faculty and to provide financial support for them during the first two years of their appointments, while they are establishing practices in Kingston.

National experts featured in resources workshops

"Who should get natural resources revenues?" That was the subject explored by Prof. Anthony D. Scott, a UBC resource economist, when he inaugurated a series of natural resources workshops at Queen's on Oct. 17.

The workshops, which are open to all interested faculty and students, are sponsored by the Centre for Resource Studies and the Department of Economics. Other experts who will visit later to give a total of 12 talks include Professors Irene Spry, University of Ottawa, John Helliwell, UBC, W.D. Nordhouse, Yale University, and Mr. M.C. Fraser of Noranda Mines.

Alumni interested in the series should contact Dr. George Miller, Director of the Centre for Resource Studies at Queen's (547-5957).

MPA degree offered through program of weekend study

New arrangements making it possible to obtain the Master of Public Administration degree through a unique weekend type of program have been announced by Dr. Ed Black, Director of the School of Public Administration.

The two-year course, called the In-Service Professional program (ISP), is oriented toward experienced public servants. Individual classes will be limited to about 18. The program involves monthly weekend sessions (including Fridays), two-week residencies in May, extensive self-study, and preparation of a public policy research report.

ISP students will cover the same material as full-time students. Some of the seminar work in the two programs will be integrated. Other courses will be specially mounted for the ISP students.

Graduate students in Public Administration at Queen's are expected to develop strong skills in data collection and interpretation, together with a multi-disciplinary orientation toward the analysis of public policy. The ISP students will be expected to build on their experience in the public sector, thus complementing the program's practical emphasis.

The first ISP class will begin work in the spring. Successful applicants will combine a creditable academic record with strong support from their departmental superiors. They will be expected to work quickly and intensively on both their continuing public service responsibilities and a demanding graduate program. Students will be expected to live and work together on campus during the weekends and the May residential sessions.

Those interested should apply to the Director.

Queen's book honoured

The Canadian Book Design Committee, sponsors of the national Look of Books exhibition, has awarded third prize to Voices in Exile: The Decembrist Memoirs, written by Glynn Barratt, published by the McGill-Queen's University Press, and designed by Peter Dorn, director of Queen's Graphic Design Unit.

Along with 31 others recognized for superior design, the Queen's book is included in an exhibition which is touring North America and Europe, with a stop at the Douglas Library, Queen's.

Campbell Soup fortifies library

This summer, the Campbell Soup Co. Ltd. presented Queen's with an unrestricted grant of $5,000 under its corporate aid-to-education program. Since that time, the Board of Trustees has allocated these funds to the acquisition of urgently needed library books.

THE KINGSTON AWARD FOR 1974 WAS A WHITE OAK, and when it was finally delivered to the campus this fall, Dr. Thelma Boucher, winner of the Kingston Alumni Branch's annual award, planted it near the entrance to Mackintosh-Corry Hall. With her are Murray Gill (centre), Director of Alumni Affairs, and Don Fulton, President of the Kingston Branch. Mrs. Boucher (Thelma Bogart), Arts '27, M.Sc. '29, LL.D. '73, is a nationally known gardening expert. The award in her honour was made to Project Green and is marked by a plaque at the foot of the tree.

In other gifts to Project Green during 1975, the Class of Arts '49 honoured the late Prof. K.G. Crawford; Commerce '75 paid tribute to their late classmate, Thomas Holloway; and Judith Mott, Arts '64, memorialized her late father, Harold Mott, Arts '40. The Campus Planning Committee reports that graduates from almost every decade and faculty have supported the regreening scheme through donations to the Alumni Fund and that several gifts have come from alumni overseas. A handsome book designed by Peter Dorn will be used to record all gifts of plants and trees, including those made in the past. Eventually the book will be displayed prominently in the new University Centre.

AMS protests profit-sharing

In October, the University began collecting 50 per cent of the bar profits from student events at which liquor is served. The action was taken in the administration's attempt to recoup the $22,400 expenditure it made on alterations (new exits, washrooms, fire escapes, etc.) to comply with revised rules set down by the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario (LLBO).

The revised regulations went into effect in January 1975. Queen's was granted a "canteen" licence, authorizing the University to control and administer the sale of alcoholic beverages on campus and to earmark profits to any group it sees fit. Previously, licences were granted to various sponsoring groups, event by event.

The administration's decision to impose the 50 per cent "tax", plus the fact that most campus pubs have had their maximum capacities reduced by the LLBO, have an adverse effect, according to the Queen's Journal, on the many campus events which traditionally depend on bar profits to break even. The AMS Outer Council has voted to present the issue in an upcoming referendum.

Student Exchange Committee hosted by Queen's member

The advisory committee of the International Association for the Exchange of Students for Technical Experience (IASTE) held its first meeting outside Canada when it convened at Queen's Donald Gordon Centre in October. Dr. Norman Kerr, Professor of Mechanical Engineering and a member of the advisory committee, acted as host.

IASTE was established in London in 1948 to help students find practical training in some 42 member countries in such fields as engineering, science, applied arts and technology (including architecture, forestry and agriculture). Canada became a member of this non-profit, non-governmental organization in 1953.

Of the 71 Canadian students given jobs in 18 countries through IASTE this past summer, 13 were from Queen's. Three of the 64 foreign students received by Canada from 19 countries came to Kingston.

The committee meeting at Queen's was to prepare for IASTE's general conference, to take place in Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, in January. Associate membership for the Philippines, Nigeria, Brazil and Libya will be discussed, along with full membership for Australia.

British bibliographer joins Disraeli Project

The Disraeli Project, under way at Queen's for the past two years, now has the help of a widely recognized authority on Disraeli bibliography, Robert W. Stewart. Mr. Stewart, a graduate of Oxford, has been for many years the archivist responsible for cataloguing and arranging the Disraeli archives at Hughenden Manor in England.

As executive assistant on the Queen's project, he is co-ordinating the work of the investigators and research assistants who are engaged in the preparation of the comprehensive edition of Disraeli's letters.

Studies of the former British Prime Minister's letters, most of which have been discovered only recently, are supported by the Canada Council and conducted under Dr. J.P. Mathews, Professor of English and Associate Dean of Graduate Studies.

O.T. grads surveyed

Queen's Occupational Therapy graduates and their fellow health professionals across Canada are being asked what they see as their role five to 10 years in the future. A study will be made of their responses to a questionnaire developed by Dr. James Maxwell, a Sociology Professor at Queen's, for the Department of National Health and Welfare.

With the advent of community-based health-care clinics, where occupational therapists will be working outside the hospital setting, their absence will require the aid of assistants to assume their hospital responsibilities. The role of the assistant therapist could parallel that of the registered nursing assistant.

According to Professor Maxwell, assistants currently are being trained in a variety of settings, including in-hospital courses. "The training is not standardized, and so the occupational therapist must learn what to expect of the assistant." Through his survey of all members of the Canadian Association of Occupational Therapists and any other practising therapists, Dr. Maxwell is looking for practitioners' guidance on the kind of uniform training desirable to bring about higher quality care and greater availability of that care.

Doubles Directorships

Dr. Edwin R. Black, Director of the School of Public Administration, has been named Acting Director of the Institute of Intergovernmental Relations for 1975-76. He succeeds Prof. R.M. Burns, who has retired as the Institute's first director.

Making the announcement, Principal Watts spoke of his gratitude to Professor Burns for "guiding the Institute's development and providing it with the solid foundation which it now enjoys. The future of the Institute will owe much to the direction given to it by its first director over the span of a decade."

Dr. Black, who has been at Queen's since 1967, has published research studies on Canadian politics in numerous journals and collections. His most recent book, Divided Loyalties: Canadian Concepts of Federalism, was recently published by McGill-Queen's University Press.

Senior citizens settling in as students of Sociology, Politics and Spanish

(From an article by Debbie Coyne, Queen's Journal, Sept. 30)

Senior citizens at Queen's University represent a relatively new and hopefully growing sector of the student population. A decision by Queen's Senate, endorsed by the Board of Trustees, waived the payment of tuition fees for people over 65 wishing to pursue courses at Queen's, beginning in September 1975. This move is highly commended by Alfred Gross, a senior citizen now taking a course in Sociology.

In an interview with the Journal, Mr. Gross said that his wife and children began urging him to register after the decision was announced. With mixed emotions he agreed to enroll and underwent the "slalom course" at the Arena on registration day.

Entering a lecture hall full of "youngsters" was like crossing a new threshold. After several lectures, though, Mr. Gross feels as if he is just another Queen's undergraduate. The lectures are "thought-provoking and pleasant" and he no longer feels separated from the rest of the students.

Mr. Gross is grateful to Queen's for providing him with the opportunity to undertake this endeavor. Furthermore he hopes that in future the number of senior citizens at the university will increase as people begin to deliberately fit such a project into their retirement plans.

Mrs. Mildred Hunter, a former real estate broker, is a student of Canadian politics and hopes to eventually work towards a degree. She is enthusiastic about her studies and, despite health problems, has found it fairly easy to adjust to the university atmosphere. Too many people tend to stagnate after retirement, and Mrs. Hunter thinks that Queen's is now providing an ideal opportunity for senior citizens to move and grow again.

A student of the Spanish Department, Mrs. Helen Travers, feels very privileged to be able to attend the university. She admits, though, that 47 years have passed since her high school days and she is finding it difficult to acquire good study habits. However, Mrs. Travers enjoys her classes and is finding the experience very worthwhile.

The opening of university facilities to senior citizens is a progressive step towards a well-rounded student body. It is to be hoped that senior citizens will take increasing advantage of this opportunity and that they will find it a useful and challenging experience.

Arts students grateful for gift from Arts '34

In lieu of holding their 40th anniversary reunion last fall, the Class of Arts '34 decided to make a gift to the Faculty of Arts and Science. Class President Andrew B.M. Bell of Ottawa and Dean Duncan Sinclair got together and agreed that the gift of $635 should go toward the purchase of three rare and classical books needed to round out the education of Art History students.

The most important was published in 1696 and contains 86 engravings and plates dealing with Vatican artifacts collected during the tenures of Popes Martin V through Alexander VIII. The gift also includes a German book of 1911 about Frank Lloyd Wright's early buildings and a richly illustrated book of Odilon Redon's prints, published in Paris in 1923.

Books from German Consul

A collection of technical books has been presented to the Sociology Department by Consul Ursula von Hagens of the Consulate-General of the Federal Republic of Germany, in Toronto.

The books are from an exhibition of scientific literature presented by the German Research Association at the Eighth World Congress of Sociology, held in Toronto last year. Specifically, the gift consists of an 11-volume political lexicon and an atlas of the socioeconomic regions of Europe.

At the Branches

Busy Season in Toronto

The Toronto Branch held an open meeting on Sept. 29 at the home of Mrs. Lynn Gaetz and elected officers for 1975-76. Alan Broadbent, former Rector of Queen's (1969-72), succeeds Kathy Segsworth, Arts '66 (LL.B.), as president. Backing him up are Dr. Margaret Whitfield, Med. '66, vice-president; Gabe Takach, Sc. '66 (LL.B.), secretary; and Richard Boxer, Arts '70, treasurer.

The executive voted to mount a spring TELETHON in Toronto to help wind up the Annual Fund, following a successful pattern of combined communication/solicitation used in Kingston, Ottawa and Montreal branches.

In early November, the Toronto alumnae held a Sunday afternoon tea and coffee party at the home of Eunice MacGregor in Islington.

The Luncheon Program continues, but in a new location — the Royal York Hotel. Recent speakers have been publisher Jack

McClelland, Toronto's Mayor David Crombie, and economist Walter Gordon. On Friday, Dec. 12, the guest speaker was former Principal John J. Deutsch. Only those who indicate an interest in receiving notices will be mailed news of upcoming speakers in this program. (Call Kathy Owen, 445-0908.)

Annual Kingston Crowd-Pleaser

There was a full house again when the Kingston Branch held its annual Harvest Country Supper and old-fashioned hoe-down in the village of Verona on Oct. 10. Turkey supper at 7:30 was followed by square-dancing called (and, if needed, taught) by Sandy Sanderson. Dress was country-style — jeans, plaid shirts and full skirts.

Kick-Off in Hamilton

The Queen's-McMaster football game on Oct. 18 was the event which brought the Hamilton Branch together for a new season. Gael supporters celebrated their 16-3 victory at the Rathskellar pub in McMaster's Refectory.

A new executive has taken office, following the decision last spring for all men and women grads to merge into one Hamilton Alumni Branch. Joint presidents are Sandra Black and Barry Young. Other officers are Jane Chown, past president; Larry Dolecki, vice-president; George Kinloch, recording secretary; and Ann Franz, treasurer. The Branch also has nine directors.

Other fall events were a Ladies' Pot Luck and the annual sherry party. Hamilton's popular dinner dance at the Estaminet is set for March 6, 1976.

Cocktails in Montreal

On Nov. 1 a lively group of about 60 enjoyed the season's first get-together for cocktails at the home of Eve and Walter Benger, Westmount. Ian Vessie, Shirley Cohen, Ian Downey and Barbara Rogers were organizers.

Ottawa Takes Richmond

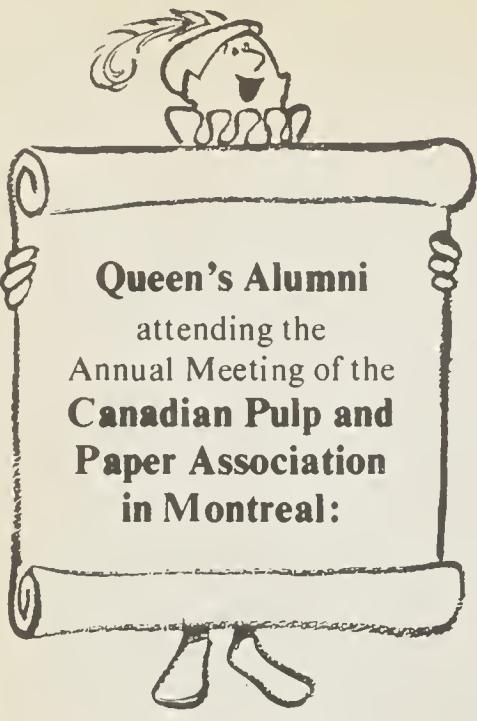

The Ottawa Branch's country supper is becoming an annual success story. It was held on Nov. 7 at the Richmond Arena Community Centre and featured square-dancing after dinner. Convenor was Bette Flindall.

The Ottawa Alumnae Branch and friends held a fall coffee party the following afternoon at the home of Mrs. J.A. Atkinson. Money was collected in support of the Marty Memorial Scholarship, and several alumnae who are members of the University Council and/or the Alumni Board of Directors reported briefly on their recent meetings at Queen's. Alumni Director Murray Gill and Mrs. Gill were also present to bring campus news. Co-convenors were Janet New and Adele Quarrington, president.

Principal to Peterborough

Principal Ronald L. Watts was the guest speaker when the Peterborough Branch held a dinner meeting at the 401 Inn on Nov. 7. Currently the Branch is surveying its membership about support for a possible Peterborough County Queen's Alumni Bursary. Organizer Thomas E. Cole of Lakefield hopes to capitalize a fund of $7,500, which would provide an annual award of $500.

Vancouver on the Rocks

The Vancouver Branch organized an evening of curling, relaxation and socializing at the Arbutus Club on Nov. 8. The Branch reserved four sheets of ice and held a fun round robin so that everyone could curl, whether they were learning, progressing, or at the show-off level. Organizer was Richard Simon.

President Bruce Howe is surveying Queen's people in Vancouver to see how many would be prepared to spend $3 - $4 for a booklet listing the names, class years and addresses of all alumni in the city. Those interested, who haven't yet replied to his questionnaire, should contact Bruce at 4715 West 2nd. Ave.

Reception in New York

In conjunction with the Consul General of Canada, Mr. Bruce Rankin, the New York Society held a reception so that alumni and friends of Queen's could meet Principal Watts. The event was held at the Canadian Consulate on Nov. 25, and featured a meeting with an

For Your Information...

The A.M.S. is big business. According to 1975-76 budget figures, total revenue is $104,275. The bulk of that revenue — $87,400 — comes from a fee charged to all students and pegged to the Consumer Price Index. This year the A.M.S. levy is $9.20, compared with $8.20 last year.

As student interests have expanded, so have student interest fees. Here's the way they add up following several referenda in the past two sessions:

FOUNDERS' AVENUE — PROJECT GREEN 1881

An impressive ceremony was carried out at Queen's on April 27 and 28, 1881, when 27 maple trees were planted along "Founders' Avenue", from the limestone gate on Stuart St. at the head of George St. to the main entrance of the Old Arts Building. The year was the 40th anniversary of the founding of Queen's College. Each sapling is said to have been planted by a relative or a representative of a founder.

Although his name was not on the list of founders in the Royal Charter, Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's first Prime Minister, was included in the project, and with good reason; he was an active participant in the planning of the College, and he was a highly influential friend of the fledgling institution.

The trees have flourished and the avenue is one of the most attractive prospects on campus.

Dear Alumnus:

It is now clear that Queen's Capital Program 1970-75 will exceed its $6.5-million objective when all existing pledges are redeemed. We are writing to thank you warmly for your contribution to the campaign -- particularly for your support of the University Centre, which the Alumni Association undertook as a special project within the overall program.

Many alumni are associated with businesses and industries which also made valuable contributions. We believe strongly in the interdependence of business, industry and the universities; we trust that you will be reassured, as we were, to know that many fine companies share this view.

The construction program is virtually completed and the new but modestly designed buildings are serving their purposes efficiently. We are pleased with the results and are deeply grateful for your help, which has been a vital part of this success story.

We look forward to the continuation of your friendly and helpful interest in the affairs of the University.

With every good wish,

Yours sincerely,

L. G. Greenwood

Special Group Offer on

THE new ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA

a revolutionary new Home Learning Center

An important announcement for Members of the Alumni Association

ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA offer to members an opportunity to obtain the new ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA at a reduced price, a price considerably below the normal retail price available to any individual. You will also receive as a special bonus, your choice of additional educational materials.

The new ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA — now expanded to 30 volumes — is not just a new edition . . . but a completely new encyclopedia which outmodes all other encyclopedias. Never before has so much knowledge, so readily accessible, so easily understood — been made available as a complete home library.

The new edition of Britannica is reorganized to better serve the three basic needs for an encyclopedia. First, the need to "LOOK IT UP" is handled by the Ready Reference and the Index. These ten volumes are a complete index to everything in the set. At the same time, they serve as a 12-million word short entry encyclopedia that is helpful to look up accurate information quickly.

Second, the need for "KNOWLEDGE IN DEPTH" is fulfilled by the main text, a 28-million word, 19 volume collection of articles arranged logically which provide full and authoritative information for the student, for research in business, or for new insights into new fields of knowledge.

Third, the need for "SELF EDUCATION" is met by the Outline of Knowledge and Guide to Britannica, a unique volume which acts as a giant study guide, more comprehensive and more detailed than a college course outline.

The new ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA is more useful in more ways to more people.

Members who would like to receive further details on this exciting Group Offer are invited to fill out and mail the postage paid reply card.

This offer is available for a limited time only, and may be withdrawn without further notice.

If the card is detached, please write to Britannica Special Group Offer, 2 Bloor Street West, Suite 1100 Toronto, Ontario M4W 3J1

Principal's Report 1974-75 Now Available to Alumni

The Principal's Report to the Board of Trustees on the session now past is available to alumni on request, through the Alumni Office. (Alumni who are members of the University Council or the Cha Gheill Society will receive a copy automatically.)

In a foreword on "External Influences", Dr. Ronald W. Watts has this to say: "It is a custom well established by my predecessors that the annual report of the Principal should place the ongoing activities of Queen's University squarely within the context of the external factors which have an important bearing on the conduct of our affairs. Last year Dr. Deutsch pointed out that as real resources continue to dwindle, the process of selecting priorities was becoming not only more urgent, but also more painful. The experience of the year just past has confirmed his point.

"We have had, however, not only to seek ways of making do with less; we have had to face closely related fundamental questions about the nature of future relationships with governments, about province-wide planning and 'co-ordination', and relations with our partners in the educational enterprise, the schools. If, therefore, this year's report dwells at uncustomary length on the external environment in which we work, it is because the uncertainties of the world around us seem now to press more urgently and more variously than ever before."

Dr. Watts devotes six "chapters" to topics of external influences, including "The Federal Interest".

In addition, his first annual report as 15th Principal of Queen's University includes these subjects: Academic Matters, Health Sciences, Student Concerns and Services, Physical Facilities and Capital Financing, Financial Operations, Ceremonies and Celebrations, Visitors and Special Lectures, and Milestones (obituaries and staff changes).

From the President:

A Message About Advertising

Fellow Alumni:

In this issue of the Queen's Review, there appear for the first time several pages of commercial advertising. I should like to take this opportunity to explain the circumstances leading up to our decision to accept such advertising.

As I am sure you are aware, government grants, which provide 80 per cent of the operating costs of the University, have failed to keep pace with the rate of inflation. As a consequence the University has been faced with the problem of having to reduce expenses drastically, while at the same time deploying most effectively the resources of the University in order to achieve its academic goals.

In December 1974, the Principal's Committee on Financial Constraint was appointed to study and report on the implications of government funding policies and to recommend possible approaches which might be adopted in order to meet financial and academic objectives.

The Report of the Committee on Financial Constraint was published in May 1975. The Report was extensive, but the message was quite clear: all departments must reduce operating expenses. The Alumni Association, which is funded by the University, was no exception. It was recommended that the Association undertake to achieve an overall reduction in expenditures of 8 per cent.

Recognizing its responsibility in this respect and wishing to co-operate with the University to the fullest extent possible, the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association asked the Director of Alumni Affairs to prepare a budget report for presentation to the Board at the semi-annual meeting on October 3, 1975. The report would reflect an overall reduction of 8 per cent and show clearly the implications of such a reduction on alumni activities.

The Director's report recommended that the position of Field Secretary, which is now vacant, be temporarily left vacant and that the Queen's Review either accept commercial advertising or reduce the number of issues.

Your Board of Directors felt strongly that contact with the alumni constituency should be maintained at as high a level as possible, and voted to accept commercial advertising rather than sacrifice issues of the Review.

I hope that you will understand and support us in our decision.

Sincerely,

President,

FROM WOMEN'S EYES
on December 12, 1975*

From Women's Eyes

What a glorious occasion this is for us women! But I must say that as a woman I am glad to see that this gathering is not exclusively female — that you have allowed some men to see us in our glory and to admire the work of Canadian women artists.

Of course this exhibition is appropriate in several respects. This is International Women's Year, though with only 19 days to run. And the beginnings of your beautiful Art Centre are due to the generosity of that impressive lady, Agnes Etherington. The reputation of her gallery and of the Art Department of Queen's University has spread far and wide. Several of our leading painters — though men — have been your artists - in - residence: Goodridge Roberts, and the beloved André Biéler, who in 1941 organized the first conference of Canadian artists. Under him, and later under Ralph Allen, was gathered a fine permanent collection of paintings by Milne, Borduas, Dallaire, Riopelle and Shadbolt, to name but a few; and now you have Michael Bell, who has done such splendid work on the earlier artists of Canada, including women.

And since we have returned to the subject of women, much is owed to MOBILIZATION DAY 1914, painted in 1928 by Mary A. Eastlake (1864-1951). Her oils and pastels focus on themes involving women and children, whether in Canada, Britain, the Continent or Asia, countries where she studied and worked.

Frances Smith, mainstay of your staff, and to the two who have organized this exhibition.

Mesdames Dorothy Farr and Natalie Luckyj font état, dans le catalogue de cette exposition, des nombreuses difficultés qu'ont éprouvées nos premières femmes artistes pour obtenir le perfectionnement désiré ainsi que le statut professionnel qu'elles méritaient. Ce problème du 19e siècle n'était heureusement pas l'apanage exclusif de notre pays. Comme en témoignent leurs nombreuses œuvres exposées ici, nos femmes se sont hissées très haut dans le domaine de l'expression artistique, non seulement par leur persévérance, mais d'abord et avant tout par leur sensibilité et leur esprit créateur.

Perhaps I may go further and suggest, on the basis of my experience abroad, that Canadian women have been somewhat more prominent in the arts than those of other countries. This, I believe, has been due to the quality of their vision. Emily Carr was, if anything, a stronger painter than any of her contemporaries, except Lawren Harris. In more recent times, our best known portrait painter has been Lilias Torrance Newton. Probably our most interesting primitives have been the Bouchard sisters of La Malbaie. Mabel May, Esther Warkov, Joyce Wieland — and especially for me, the Quebec painters whom I knew in Paris: Ferron, Gervais, and Letendre — easily hold their own with the men.

Je reconnais d'un seul coup d'œil sur ces murs plusieurs tableaux empruntés à Rideau Hall pour cette exposition. Il m'est très agréable de retrouver mes vieux amis dans un nouvel environnement.

What I most appreciate in this collection is the evidence of what the authors of the catalogue discern as the feminine contribution to painting: a special sensitivity to the human being in its various relationships and emotions. I think this is true and I thank heaven that after all there are still differences between the sexes in spite of unisex clothes and coiffures.

Thank you, Mr. Principal, and all of you, for inviting me to an event that makes me proud to be a Canadian woman. I take pleasure in declaring the exhibition open.

Women's Year Tribute to Queen's — Her Art Centre, Artists and Art

SHOOTING THE RAPIDS, c. 1869, by Frances Ann Hopkins (1838-1918). Called more sensitive than Krieghoff, she travelled the northwest seated by her husband in a Hudson's Bay trading canoe, never losing her fashionable blue bonnet.

International Women's Year, 1975, focussed attention on the status of women in many fields. One of the areas not fully investigated before was the historical presence of the woman artist in Canada, and two young art historians on the staff of the Agnes Etherington Art Centre—Dorothy Farr and Natalie Luckyj—set out to make a contribution. After sifting the names of 900 painters, designers and sculptors, they decided upon a visual survey of women painters from 1670 to 1970. With the help of Curator Frances Smith, they assembled 82 paintings by 45 artists who, they felt, had made or were making a positive contribution to the history of painting in Canada, sex distinction aside. FROM WOMEN'S EYES opened in December.

The works were selected primarily for their aesthetic values, in the hope that themes and conclusions would emerge spontaneously. The exhibition's catalogue shows they were right.

"In general," they write, "women painters have tended to choose psychological and narrative themes rather than action subjects or 'the empty landscape tradition.' This is not in keeping with the major trends of Canadian painting. . . . One must conclude that women painters have been more willing to grapple with the presentation of delicate human relationships and strong emotions than have other Canadian artists."

Although all Canadian artists have had difficulties, women painters have endured more than the usual inequities in gaining acceptance. Why did they lag for so long behind the front rank painters? The catalogue suggests several reasons. In fact, the book's general history section and its detailed commentary on each work make it a worthy addition to the bibliography of Women's Year. Art critic Kay Kritzwiser in Toronto's Globe and Mail says, "The catalogue (designed by Peter Dorn) is a delight — direct, simple, readable, a very good buy for $5.00."

Unfortunately, the exhibition will not travel from Queen's. "For its historic framework," says Miss Kritzwiser, "it deserves to, but more so because it opens eyes to the often shuttered past."

With other visitors at the opening of the Art Centre's extension on December 13, Chancellor Roland Michener (centre), his wife, Principal Watts and Mayor George Speal tour the new gallery. Paintings are from the Permanent Collection.

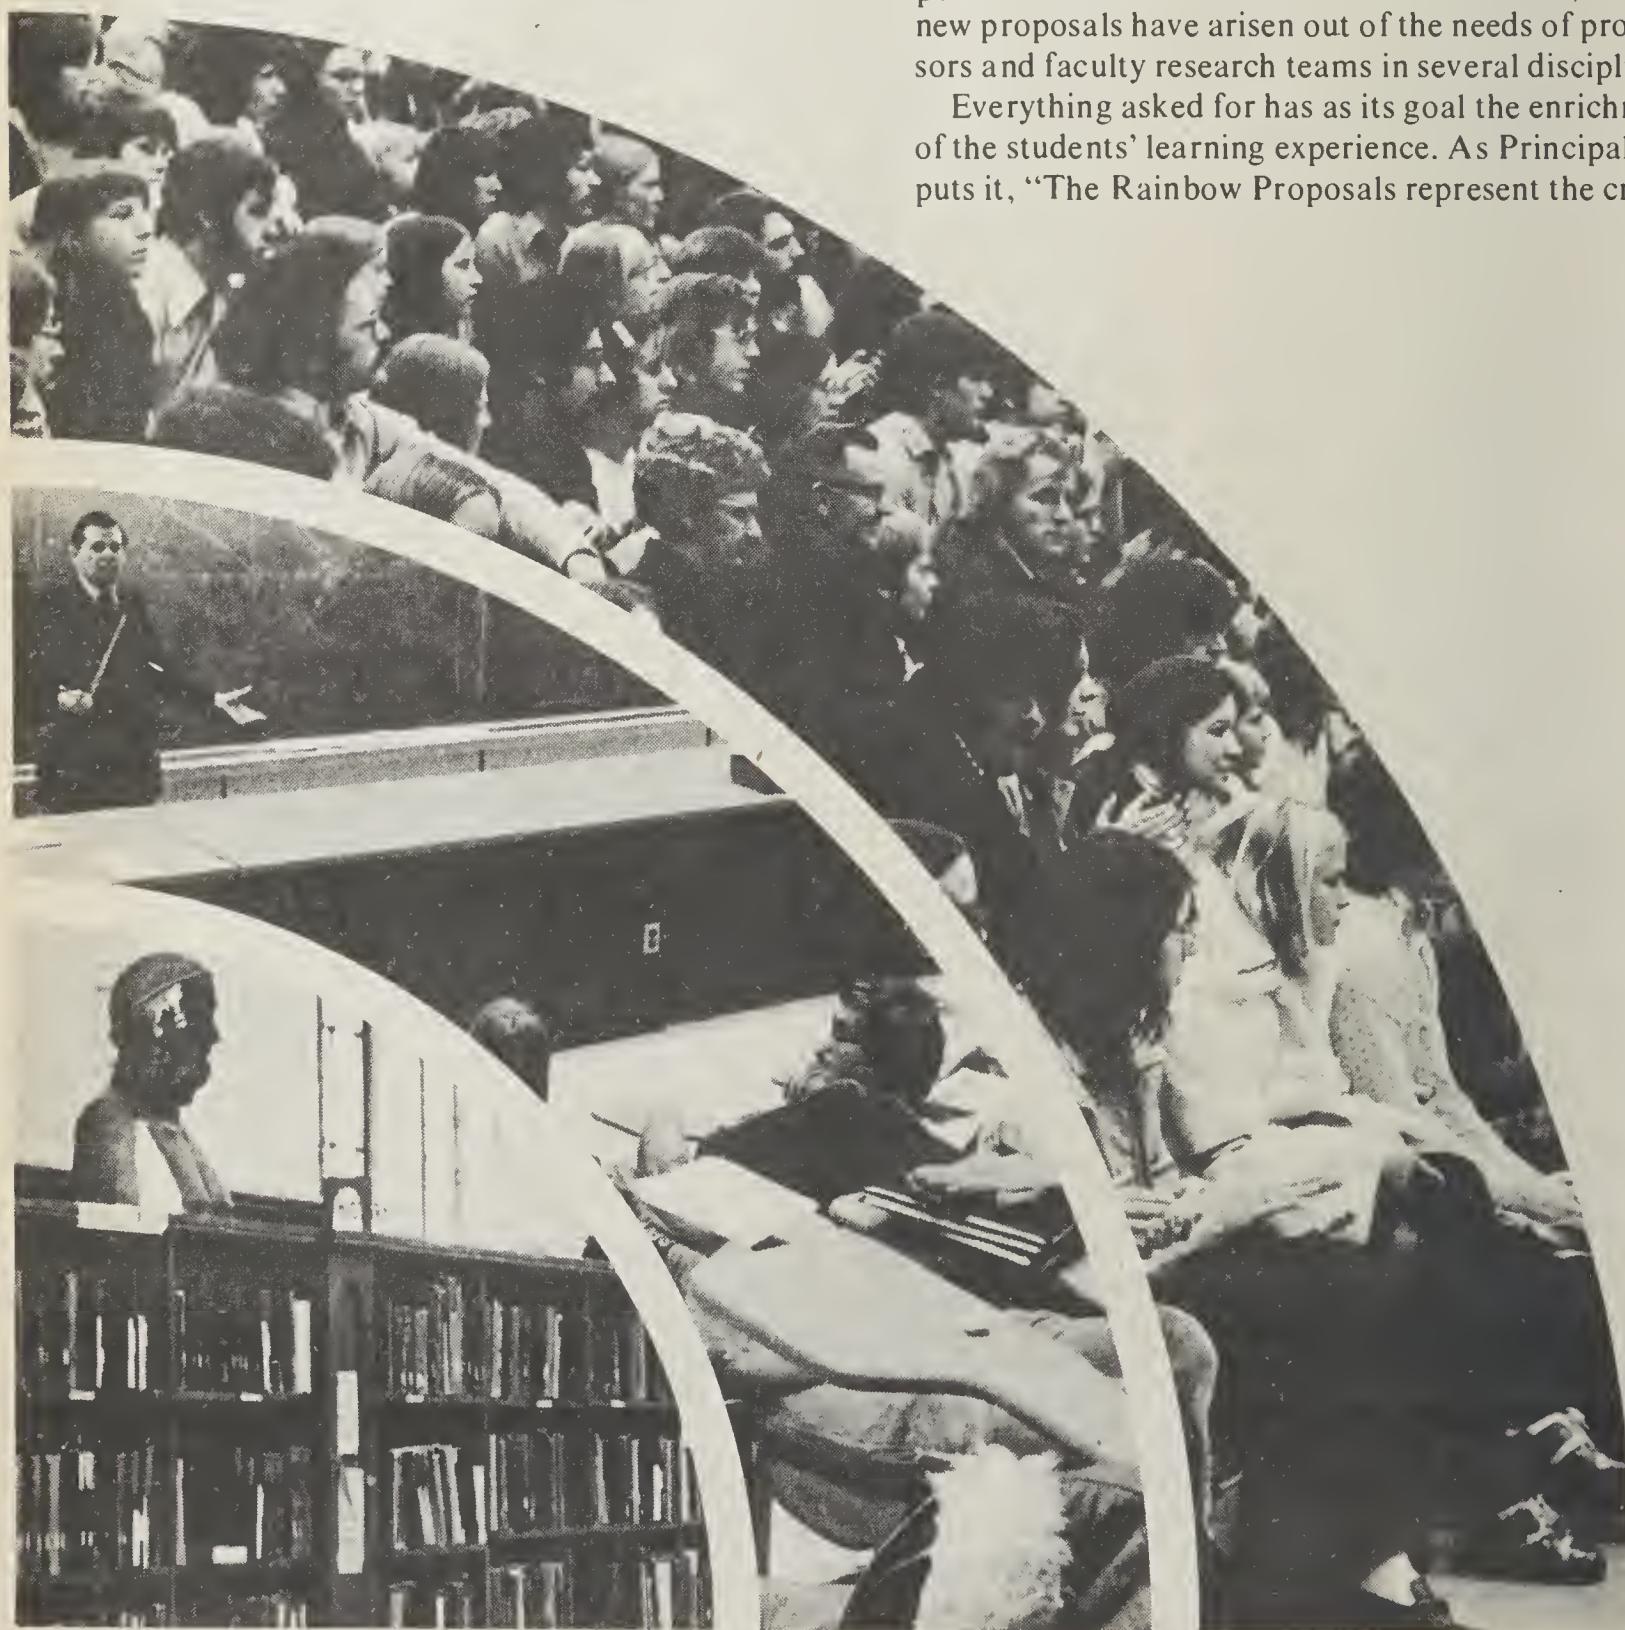

The new brick extension, largely financed by the National Museums Corporation, has two storeys. One houses a large gallery, storage space for the Permanent Collection, and rooms for crating, framing and shipping. Upstairs are studio-labs for students in the art conservation and restoration program, unique to Queen's in Canada.

Mme. Leger (second left) officially opened the exhibition of women's paintings on December 12. With her are Director Michael Bell and the two staff members who organized the show: art historians Natalie Luckyj and Dorothy Farr.

Rainbow Proposals

There is a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. At least, Queen's has found, happily, more than $300,000 at the end of some Rainbow Proposals.

The Rainbow Proposals program was announced last winter and launched among private and corporate benefactors in May 1975. The goal is to raise private money for equipment, books, academic visitors and renovations for which there is no other source of funding. The collection of proposals, each no longer than a page of type and each with a clear-cut price tag, offers potential donors an opportunity to choose for their financial support a specific area of activity from various departments of the University.

In the November - December 1974 issue of the Review, the first 13 Rainbow Proposals were outlined briefly. Since then, some have been "bought" by supportive Canadian businesses and benefactors, and other new proposals have arisen out of the needs of professors and faculty research teams in several disciplines.

Everything asked for has as its goal the enrichment of the students' learning experience. As Principal Watts puts it, "The Rainbow Proposals represent the creativity, enthusiasm and practical good sense of many departments."

Obviously, a number of Queen's friends agree with the goals, and James M. Courtright, Vice-Principal (Development and Information), recently made the following progress report to the Queen's Fund Council meeting in Toronto:

PROPOSAL 0001 -- 50,000 Instant People (Computerization of Alumni Records). Just over $1,000 of the $49,000 required for this scheme has been collected through various alumni gifts.

0004 -- The Sound of Music (Installation of the Leonard Brockington Memorial Theatre Organ). Two alumni have given $125 toward the target of $22,500 needed to install the 2,000-pipe organ in the Jock Harty Arena. The organ was a gift from Odeon Theatres.

0005 -- Unlocking Metals' Secrets (Hydrometallurgical Lab Equipment). Noranda Mines Ltd. and Shell Canada have each donated $10,000 towards the $43,000 cost of a liter pressure reactor, a stainless steel reactor, other equipment and building modifications.

0006 -- Rock Group Needs More Space (Redevelopment of the Geological Museum in Miller Hall). Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. has made a gift of $1,000 to this major project.

0008 -- Shock Treatment (Up-to-Date Electronic and Electrical Lab Equipment). Noranda Mines Ltd., supporters of Rainbow 0005, have also given Queen's $7,000 for one complete undergraduate communications lab. Four more such teaching stations are needed.

0009 -- "It's the Land, Scarlet ... before it's gone with the wind" (Additional Land to Enhance Ecological Teaching and Research at the Biology Field Station on Lake Opinicon). The price for this Rainbow is $70 per acre (with a goal of 1,000 acres), and to date some two dozen donors, several of them former Biology students, have given Queen's close to $10,000.

0011 -- The Spanish Connection (Furnishing La Casa). The Holiday Inn of Kingston has given $300 and five other non-graduate donors have contributed $1,500 towards Mediterranean-style furnishings for the University house used as a Spanish and Italian cultural centre. The goal is $11,800, which includes an informal basement coffee house.

0012 -- Parlez-vous Technical? (A French Translators' Library). Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. single-handedly made this Rainbow a reality with a gift of $2,750.

0016 -- Help for the Broken-Hearted (Equipment and Operating Assistance for the Cardiology Division of the Department of Medicine). Response has been most gratifying, probably since heart disease is of such wide and deep concern. A total of $111,000 has been contributed by three benefactors: Physicians Services Inc. Foundation ($30,000), an anonymous donor ($55,000), and Mr. T.P.H. Molson of Montreal and his brother, Senator H. de M. Molson ($25,000). Coca Cola Ltd. also contributed $1,000 in this area for a specific piece of equipment. This important cardiac study is the only one of its kind in Canada today. No special research patients are needed, since all measurements are done on heart patients being treated at K.G.H. The results lend themselves to immediate clinical applications.

0017 -- Turn over a New Leaf (Project Green). This student-initiated scheme to re-green the campus was recently added to the list of Rainbows so that outside donors could add their support to that from Queen's family. Project Green is thriving, due largely to student pledges of $1.00 each per year for five years, to a separate $10,000 project funded by Robert L. Dunsmore, graduate and former Trustee, and to gifts of more than $5,000 from other alumni, members of the Parents Association, and individual classes.

0020 -- Give Us the Tools and We'll Finish the Job (Construction of a Fluidized Bed Reactor). The Department of Chemical Engineering got its tools in toto, thanks to a $10,000 gift from Shell Canada.

0021 -- Help Maintain the Statistician's Status Quo (Support for a Senior Statistician). What was asked for was salary for a visiting specialist to work for six months in Queen's STATLAB ($11,500). To date, Bell Canada has supported this project with a $3,000 gift.

0025 -- An Actuarial Science Course. Empire Life Insurance Co. has made a major contribution to finance this Mathematics Department Rainbow: $4,000 annually — hopefully for at least ten years. (Continued)

"Most of the building projects on campus are completed. Now our full effort is turned to providing proper facilities and atmosphere for the students, teachers and researchers in these buildings."

In addition, Du Pont of Canada has made a gift-in-kind of equipment valued at $18,000 -- an Hitachi Spectrometer for the Chemistry Department. A gift of $5,000 has been pledged by Gulf Oil, but not yet assigned to a specific Rainbow.

The Garfield Weston Foundation, learning that the future of the Kingston Institute of Pastoral Care was threatened by its very nature as a non-profit service, notified Queen's Theological College of a $30,000 pledge of support before this Rainbow was even numbered. The Institute is directed by Rev. A.J. MacLachlan and is affiliated with the Theological College, which has now received the first instalment of $10,000.

This grove of evergreens between Grant Hall and Ontario Hall is a happy ending to the story of Lou Bruce's spruces in the January — February Review. Their planting is part of Rainbow Proposal 0017, better known as Project Green.

One of the encouraging side-effects of the Rainbow program has been the advent of personal visits by prospective benefactors. For example, five representatives of various Molson companies and committees recently spent a day on campus. The delegation managed to check out four Rainbow Proposals in some depth, talking to the professors involved and visiting various sites. Personal inspection tours from some banks, oil companies and foundations are anticipated in the next few weeks.

As the foreword to the Rainbow Proposals book points out, "Most of the building projects on campus are completed, and our full effort is now turned to providing proper facilities and atmosphere for the students, teachers and researchers in these buildings."

"No community of learning can rest on its past achievements," says Vice-Principal Courtright. "Rainbows are promises for the future. Queen's is proud of its past, but must also stand ready to equip its students to meet the challenges of the next decade. The proposals demonstrate areas of specific need and represent a cross-section of Queen's activity. With help, these Rainbows will become realities."

Anyone interested in examining the Rainbow Proposals should write for a copy to the Vice-Principal, Development and Information, Queen's University, Kingston, Ont. K7L 3N6.

Campus asked to 'Turn Off for Queen's'

Those old enough to remember the worst of the depression years at Queen's are thinking these days of that superb budget-balancer, Dr. W.E. McNeill, and his almost legendary campaign to switch off lights, use pencils down to the stubs, re-use envelopes, ration thumb-tacks, and turn down the heat till it was almost off at night and entirely off all weekend.

Why? Because Principal Watts is calling for the staff to "Turn Off for Queen's". In January, brochures and signs sprang up overnight like blossoms 'mid the snow, reminding all employees of the need to save electricity and fuels. The campus effort to conserve is not new, only the campaign to heighten awareness on a wider scale.

Since 1973 Physical Plant has reduced light levels in corridors and service areas; installed timers to shut off ventilating fans during silent hours; scheduled the night cleaning teams to switch off lights as buildings are emptied; and continually inspected underground steam lines and manholes to detect leaks. They have found that lowering temperatures 10 degrees F. at night saves about 3 per cent of the daily heating cost. Physical Plant's efforts so far have reduced the consumption of energy per square foot of floor space by 12 per cent since 1973.

In the technician's terminology, Queen's used 51.5 energy units in 1972 to light, heat, cool and ventilate every square foot of floor space. The conservation program since 1973 has reduced consumption to 45.4 units. The new, wider campaign hopes to enlist everybody's help to reduce consumption to 40 units by 1977.

At present, the cost of utilities constitutes one-third of the Physical Plant budget and 2.25 per cent of Queen's operating budget. From 1973 to '75, the average cost of oil increased 146 per cent, gas 43 per cent, and electricity 21 per cent. Although Queen's floor area increased by only 11.4 per cent, the total energy bill went up 48 per cent from $728,000 to $1,078,000.

As Dr. Watts pointed out in an open letter to the Queen's community, saving 12 per cent of a bill exceeding a million dollars represents a considerable saving. "If the entire university becomes conservation-minded," he said, "each of us, as an individual, can make a contribution and the total effect will be substantial. It will leave more resources available to our primary functions as a university."

What are staffers being asked to do? One can almost see the spirit of Dr. McNeill rubbing his hands together in approval.

The guidelines call for showers to be limited to five minutes, and preferably three. Students in residence are not to let the tap run constantly while washing, shaving, etc., Offices are to set certain hours of the day for using equipment such as copying machines, typewriters, calculators, and such -- and ideally should avoid early afternoon as "on" hours. Drafty windows, doors or unused fireplaces are to be reported. Laboratory air hoods and water-using equipment are to be shut off when not in use. Faculty and administrators are to learn which blinds and curtains on certain south and west exposures can insulate buildings from outside heat or cold. And everyone is to come up with other conservation ideas.

Being light-hearted is still allowed, and one staffer has quipped that with Ontario turning off the tap, it only makes sense for Queen's to switch off the lights. Or, as another put it, "The job you save may be your own."

A.M.S. President Replaced

Ian Nordheimer, Com. '73, Law '76, who began the session as A.M.S. Vice-President (Operations), was promoted to the presidency in mid-November. After a complicated procedural and constitutional hassle that overshadowed most other fall happenings, the A.M.S. Court on Nov. 3 had declared that the position of President was vacant, ruling that John Gray was ineligible to hold the position because he was no longer a registered Queen's student. Mr. Gray had offered to stay at Queen's and devote full time to his A.M.S. responsibilities.

According to Mr. Nordheimer, the A.M.S. Constitution was revised so that the presidency could be filled by appointment rather than by campus-wide election "to minimize the disruptive effect of allowing the A.M.S. to be without a president."

Democracy and the Smoker

After a heavy exchange of pros and cons in the campus press and vivid tales of headaches, itchy eyes and poor concentration, Queen's Senate has officially ruled on smoking in class. The wording is formal, but the message is clear: "Where not otherwise prohibited by official regulations, it is agreed that smoking be permitted in teaching areas during teaching time, and in the Senate, only by unanimous consent of the students and faculty concerned."

Since the December Senate meeting, copies of the motion have been sent to every member of faculty, with the request that it be enforced.

Four Rhodes Scholars. Oxford University is surely the subject under discussion among Douglas Hutchinson and Chancellor Michener (seated) and Chesley Crosbie and Principal Watts.

Two 1976 Rhodes Scholars

Two of the 11 prestigious Rhodes Scholarships allotted annually to Canada have been awarded to students in Arts and Science at Queen's. Chesley Crosbie of St. John's, Nfld., is in his fourth year of Political Studies. He is the son of John C. Crosbie, Arts '53 (LL.B., Dalhousie), a Newfoundland Cabinet Minister.

The winner for British Columbia is Douglas Hutchinson of Vancouver, in his final year of Philosophy. Coincidentally, both have applied to Oxford's Balliol College for Master's studies in Philosophy.

Personal Gifts to Library

Prof. Frank Knox, just before his death in January (see p. 26), presented the Douglas Library with about 600 volumes, mainly economics and history books.

Historian Dr. A.R.M. Lower has added Magnum Opus: The Character of Kingston to the collection bearing his name, and Chancellor Roland Michener has added to the collection he established at the time of his installation. His gift numbers about 200 volumes, many of them presentation copies of Canadian local histories, some of which are very sumptuously bound and most of which were inscribed to him as Governor-General.

Dr. Berry's Pygmies: Little People, Big Problems?

Dr. John Berry of Queen's is one of two psychologists co-ordinating a comparative study deep in the heart of what used to be called "darkest Africa". The project has been under way in the Central African Republic since last January and involves Pygmies and Bantu. Researchers are probing not so much what makes them different sizes, but what makes their ways of life so diverse. The two peoples occupy the same geographic region, but present contrasting eco-cultural patterns. Researchers also plan to study the effects of the outside world on both cultures.

Four subject groups are involved: the traditional Pygmy, who lives by hunting and gathering; the sedentary Pygmy exposed to other cultures; Bantu farmers; and Bantu living in towns among other cultures.

The international research team of eight specialists -- two of them Canadian -- expects to complete its field work by 1978 and will present its findings to the National Institute of Mental Health and the Canada Council.

Theological College Alumni Hold 83rd Conference

Dr. Keith Clifford of the University of British Columbia's Religion Department was the Chancellor's Lecturer when Queen's Theological College Alumni held their 83rd annual conference on campus in October.

For his series of four lectures at the three-day session, Dr. Clifford chose the theme "1925 and All That". Under it he explored the issues that brought about the establishment of the United Church of Canada 50 years ago.

Professor Clifford is a past president of the Canadian Society of Church History and is currently a board member of the Corporation for the Publication of Studies in Religion in Canada.

The annual gathering also included other lectures and seminars, as well as times for worship. Dr. C.H. Parker, Queen's Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament, presented "Reflections on Israel". Dr. Duncan Sinclair, Dean of Arts and Science, spoke on "Science and Man". Women in the group moved to the Ban Righ Foundation for a seminar led by its director, Helen Mathers, and Dr. W.F. Banister, Professor Emeritus of Practical Theology. Their topic: "Why Not?" The alumni also shared in the induction of Rev. Robert Mumford as new Professor of Practical Theology.

Along with some 100 graduates of the College from across Canada, Kingston area ministers, Queen's students and faculty, and members of the general public were welcomed to the conference events.

The enrolment picture: 44 per cent women

As of Dec. 1, total full-time enrollment for 1975-76 was 10,112 — 9,041 undergraduates and 1,071 graduate students. Queen's long-range target was slightly exceeded because a higher percentage than usual of those offered admission accepted. All faculties and programs had to turn away applicants. There were 12,250 applications for 2,200 first-year places alone.

The percentage of women has risen in almost all programs except Education. The number of women students in all years of Engineering has gone from 68 to 117, due largely to a 50 per cent increase in women registered in first year.

Women now represent 44 per cent of total registration at Queen's compared with 42.1 per cent in 1974-75.

Citizenship of faculty

Noting that the issue of citizenship of professors in Ontario universities had been raised again in the provincial legislature, Principal Watts recently reported the following facts to Queen's Senators:

- (1) Since 1972, Canadian citizens on Queen's faculty have increased from 65 to 69 per cent;
- (2) Of the remainder, 13 per cent are British, 9 per cent are American and 9 per cent are of various other nationalities.

Queen's overriding policy, he added, remains unchanged -- i.e., Queen's students should have the benefit of the best staff available.

Buildings' merit studied

The Committee on Campus Planning has established a Subcommittee on Buildings of Architectural Merit, charged with examining the architectural and historical significance of buildings owned by Queen's — other than those designed and built for university purposes. The result will be an inventory of those buildings which merit consideration when any future development proposal calls for major changes or demolition.

Anyone wishing to submit views to the Subcommittee should contact the chairman, Dr. D.R. Taylor of the Physics Department.

Province-wide salary proposal shelved by OCUFA

As the University Council was told at its annual meeting, an ad hoc working group of six Ontario university presidents and faculty association members were promoting province-wide determination for academic salaries. Queen's professors were opposed to the proposal from the beginning. It was recently reported to the Board of Trustees that the working group has "regretfully abandoned" its proposal.

In announcing its decision OCUFA (the Ontario Confederation of University Faculty Associations) emphasized that it will press the Ontario Council on University Affairs to consider ways in which academic salaries in Ontario may be adjusted with full consideration of the criteria of equity for academic staff, stability within the universities, and the maintenance of institutional diversity.

Recent staff changes

David N. Ellis, well known to graduates since 1966 for his administration of undergraduate loan funds and the Ontario Student Awards Program on campus, has been named Assistant Registrar (Admissions). He succeeds Harry Sterne, who retired at the end of January after almost nine years at Queen's.

Mr. Ellis's former post of Assistant Registrar (Student Awards) has been filled by Mrs. Doris Laughton (formerly Doris Brebner), who was administrative assistant to the Dean of Arts and Science for eight years.

Beginning July 1, Dr. H. K. Krausse will head the Department of German. He has been a member of the department since 1964.

Prof. G.R. Wyatt, Head of Biology, has asked permission to return to full-time teaching and research. Prof. A.E.R. Downe, M.A. '54, Ph.D. '61 (B.Sc. Alberta), will be Acting Head of the Biology Department until June 1977.

Dr. W.E. Powles has been named Acting Head of the Psychiatry Department pending the appointment of a successor to Dr. T.J. Boag, who left the department to become Dean of Medicine. Dr. Powles has been teaching at Queen's since 1965.

Dr. Istvan Anhalt, an internationally known composer, has been reappointed Head of the Music Department for a second five-year term. Another reappointment is that of Dr. D.A. Jardine, Sc. '52, M.Sc. '54 (Ph.D., Delaware) as Head of the Department of Computing and Information Science, a post he has held since 1973.

Search committees are currently in session to advise the Principal on a Dean of Women, Director of the School of Physical and Health Education, and heads for Chemistry, Physiology and Psychiatry.

Mrs. R.O. Earl is shown with the portrait of her husband in Earl Hall.

Portrait of Dr. R.O. Earl Presented to Biology

A portrait of the late Dean R.O. Earl, Professor and Department Head in Biology at Queen's for 25 years, was unveiled Nov. 29 in the lobby of the building which bears his name.

The portrait, painted by Elizabeth Harrison, was presented by Dr. Earl's widow, the former Olga Somerville, Arts '14. Mrs. Earl also gave the Biology Department the golden key with which she opened Earl Hall in 1965 and the George Lawson Medal in Botany, awarded to Dr. Earl in 1970.

Dr. Earl was Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science from 1951 to 1959. He died in 1972.

An apple for the teacher

The Engineering Society recently presented Golden Apple awards to four professors -- all nominated by their classes -- in recognition of their teaching ability and their outstanding interest in engineering activities.

The awards, in the form of real apples, gold-plated, went to Professors Jim Bennett of Electrical Engineering, whose special interests are energy conversion and power systems; Hugh C. Evans, a nuclear physicist; H.J. Kummer, a mathematician specializing in the foundations of physics; and C.A. Mulvenna of Engineering Drawing, whose particular interests are design (remember Queen's urban car?) and hydraulics.

Team up to raise more money

The A.M.S. Committee Investigating Money-Raising Programs is tentatively proposing telethons, the sale of posters and sweaters, and the institution of a lottery which alone could raise $50,000 for the Library.

The Committee is also looking at ways in which students could help the Alumni Association set up a "Class Agent" program. This program involves selecting a member of each graduating class and making him responsible in future for contacting 50 of his classmates to communicate news of the University's specific financial needs and appeals.

Chairman Jim Henderson's report concludes that "students could make a more active contribution to the alumni programs."

Debating Union revived

Last spring, it was enthusiastically announced that "debating is alive and well at Queen's" after dwindling to nothing in the early '70's. In less than a year, Queen's Debating Union has moved back into the big leagues -- and to prove it has a thousand - dollar grant of approval from the Friends of Queen's Inc. in the U.S.

In the 1974-75 session, Queen's debated with McGill, Hart House, St. Lawrence University in New York State, R.M.C. and Princeton. In November 1975, a Queen's team—club president George Gregory and Monte McMurchy, both of them studying history and philosophy — set out for the Princeton Invitational Tournament, the most prestigious debate in North America. They won two and lost three against 38 teams from 18 colleges. To get there, the team used their persuasive skills to secure funding from Padre Laverty, Vice-Principal Jim Courtright, John French at CKLC radio, The Whig-Standard, the AMS, and members of the Political Studies Department.

Things are moving fast now. With their grant from American alumni and benefactors, Queen's Debating Union was able to accept invitations to four major spring tournaments in the U.S.: at Columbia, Yale, Harvard and Chicago.

Many alumni will be aware that this University has a long tradition of skill, success and even excess in this art, and will wish its revivors well. Prof. C.E.S. (Ned) Franks of Political Studies, a vigorous student debater in the late '50's, is now faculty advisor and occasional judge for the club. He attributes the decline of debating at Queen's over the past few years to a social change "where confrontation replaced discussion and internal monologue replaced argument." About 55 students have shown interest in the "new" Union, and weekly meetings are attended by a regular core group of about 20.

Dunning Trust Lectures feature eight Canadians

Canada towards the Year 2000 was the theme of the annual Chancellor Dunning Trust Lecture series, which began on Jan. 14 and continued intermittently until Feb. 9.

Historian Donald Creighton opened the five-part series with a lecture on "The Individual and the Welfare State". On Jan. 20, artist Harold Town and Louis Applebaum, Executive Director of the Ontario Arts Council, spoke on "Creating a Climate for Creativity".

Economist Eric Kierans tackled "The Canadian Economy" on Jan. 30. Continuing on Feb. 6, Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party of Ontario, and John White, former Ontario Cabinet Minister, lectured on "Humanizing Government Policy". The last lecture in the series was "Official Languages in Canada", presented by Keith Spicer, Commissioner of Official Languages for the Government of Canada.

The Chancellor Dunning Trust was established in 1946 by an anonymous donor as a tribute to the Hon. Charles A. Dunning, former Chancellor of Queen's. It was the hope of the donor that the "inspiration of a life of public service will help future students to do their part in service to humanity".

Sailing championship to Queen's squad

Queen's sailors ended an undefeated season by capturing the Intercollegiate Sailing Championship for the second year in a row. Royal Military College provided a fleet of 420's for the regatta. In two days of competition with ten races, the Queen's crews defeated RMC, Waterloo, Carleton, Toronto, and Collège Militaire Royal. Their victory gives the team a crack at the North American intercollegiate championships to be held in June at the New York Maritime Institute on Long Island Sound.

Queen's, which is ideally located on one of the best dinghy racing areas in America, was able to draw on a fine pool of sailing talent this year. Three of the eight competitors have won acclaim outside intercollegiate circles. Terry McLaughlin, a first-year Math student, won the Canadian Laser Championship last summer and came fourth in the World Youth Sailing Championship when he was 15. Jeff Boyd, third-year Math, was 1975's runner-up Laser champ in Canada and placed 13th in the 1974 World Laser North American Championships and fourth in England's Prince of Wales sailing week last summer.

The Queen's sailors operate as a club, since there is no athletic budget to support them as an official team.

'Macbeth' as a Teaching Tool

The well-known banquet scene. Costumes and set were designed by Gavin Semple. The production crew was from the Dramatic Presentation course. Special music composed by Prof. David Keane enhanced the unreal, ghostly qualities.

Professors and student teachers at Queen's Faculty of Education combined several goals in their work to prepare a November production of Macbeth at McArthur Hall. High school students within a 75-mile radius of Kingston had a chance to see what goes into bringing Shakespeare's work to life.

The high school students visited the campus to watch a rehearsal in action, and members of the cast travelled to perform at schools for those too far afield to make the trip to Queen's. Lady Macbeth and Macbeth, played by faculty members

Lorna Wilson and David Kemp, enacted the same scene several ways so that students could choose which presentation they preferred. The three witches took to the road for some performances as well.

"It was an ambitious undertaking," says Andrew Orr, director of Macbeth and associate co-ordinator of student teaching for the Faculty. "We decided to attempt it because Shakespeare is a part of the curriculum in many high schools, and we could give students an opportunity to see a live performance of one of the plays." Professor Orr regularly presents workshops for secondary school teachers on "The Teaching of Shakespeare", an area of particular interest to him.

The response to his idea was strong. More than eight schools asked to be visited, and large blocks of tickets were ordered by various classes for the five-day run of the play.

Backstage, the production crew (responsible for stage managing, lighting, props, make-up, costumes and set construction) was made up of Bachelor of Education students who are earning a degree credit in Dramatic Presentation. Costume and set designs were by Gavin Semple of Queen's Drama Department.

Prof. David Keane of the Music Department composed original music to reflect the historic setting of the play and also to enhance its unreal and ghostly qualities. He relies heavily on electronic equipment in the Music Department to produce the special effects.

The result was a fine co-operative and educational effort.

Leave without pay may cut salary costs

The University, in a further attempt to cope with financial pressures, recently offered members of faculty and staff a chance to leave their jobs for one or more months each year. They would receive no salary, but would retain their entitlement to pension and other fringe benefits.

The administration believes that such an arrangement may be of considerable advantage to staffers who want to follow professional pursuits, such as consulting (outside their responsibilities to Queen's), spend additional time with the family, or extend their vacations.

Periods of reduced responsibility will be approved only where there will be "no excessive harm to the work of the department or faculty concerned."

Prof. Frederick W. Gibson

Dr. Gibson to finish Queen's history book

The Trustees have asked Dr. F. W. Gibson of the History Department to complete the history of Queen's University begun by the late Dr. Hilda Neatby.

At the time of her death in May 1975, Dr. Neatby had written 18 chapters covering the period up to the retirement of Principal Fyfe. She had intended to write two more on the Wallace period and a third lengthy one covering the years from 1951 to the present.

Professor Gibson, who was an academic colleague of the Saskatchewan historian during her five years at Queen's, plans to complete the new history for publication by the McGill-Queen's University Press in 1977.

Shuttle service chartered

For the safety and convenience of students, the University has chartered a bus to shuttle between the main campus and the west campus after the city bus service stops at night. Every half hour, from 11:30 till 1:00, the bus leaves from a glassed-in shelter at Union and University. It stops to let students on or off anywhere along the one-mile route on Union St.

The shuttle is best appreciated at exam time, when most students spend extra time in the Reading Room.

The charter is a bonus to Queen's Bus-It program, which lets full-time students ride all regular city bus routes simply by showing their student cards. Under an agreement with Kingston's Public Utilities Commission, students pay $3.00 each toward Bus-It annually and the University pays another $2.00.

Students boost own fees

The students voted on five issues in a pre-Christmas referendum. They approved an increase of 75¢ in the Student Interest Fee to cover Community Services, but said "no" to an annual adjustment pegged to the Consumer Price Index.

They also voted to increase the Athletic Fee from $20 to $25 for next year, and established a fee of $7.50 to provide funds for the capital repairs and maintenance of the Physical Education Centre's facilities.

The Student Health Service received a strong showing of support. Voters overwhelmingly approved its continuation, and raised the Student Health Fee from $6 to $10 to maintain the present level of service.

To rid themselves of the 50 percent levy on profits from licensed premises and events on campus, students voted to pay 50¢ each for four years. This fee will reimburse the University for $22,800 spent on improving pub facilities to LLBO standards. The University has refunded all money collected under the levy since September.

All these changes in fees have gone to the Board of Trustees for approval.

Queen's researchers study interschool sports programs

A research contract of $37,500 for a study of the role of interschool sports programs in Ontario secondary schools has been awarded to Queen's. The Ontario Minister of Education requested proposals for such a study and chose that of Dr. Donald Macintosh, Director of the School of Physical and Health Education, and Prof. Allan King, Faculty of Education.

Questionnaires will be sent to 100 selected secondary schools, followed by detailed interviews with representatives of about ten of the schools.

The investigation should determine the extent to which the original objectives of the interschool sports program are being met, considering the effects of inflation, especially on travel and officials' costs. Considerations include the time a secondary school teacher must devote to coaching interschool teams and the effect on the program of the emphasis on developing elite athletes.

The Ministry expects a final report in December 1976.

A Reminder About Queen's Weekend University

A weekend of courtly 16th century music launched Queen's new Weekend University in February. (Details were published in the September-October issue.) Four more seminars are planned for weekends in March and April in the unique setting of the Donald Gordon Centre for Continuing Education.

The Centre, which opened in November 1974 and is named for the colourful Canadian banker-economist who was a long-time Queen's Trustee, has as its core the historic stone mansion known as "Rosedawn."

Queen's graduates are especially invited to spend a meaningful weekend under one roof, digging into a favourite subject with faculty experts (including the Principal and Dr. John J. Deutsch). Upcoming seminars deal with film appreciation and the application of politics, economics, law, philosophy and sociology to current Canadian situations.

The weekends begin with a reception and dinner on Friday evening and end after lunch on Sunday. The all-inclusive fee — lodging, meals, seminars, films, concerts, etc. — is $100 per person or $175 per couple. For Kingston alumni and their friends who don't wish to use the overnight accommodation at the Centre, there is a special reduced rate of $60 per person. For information, contact Dr. H.O. Helmers, Director, Donald Gordon Centre, Queen's University, Kingston, Ont. K7L 3N6 (phone 1-613-5529).

Dear Editor:

It makes one proud to be a graduate of Queen's when he reads a story like the one on page 20 of the July - August Review ("Kingston Revives the Memory of a Modest Black Graduate"). It is not so much the fact that you have honoured a man who gave the University a generous gift that gets through to a person, but the fact that, from the very beginning, Queen's had never shown any racial prejudice. We love to boast about our "Democracy". It is good to see that democracy has been lived out in one small part of this highly competitive world.

And it was good to see, in U.N. Women's Year, four women on the list of those receiving honorary degrees.

C.W. TOPPING, Arts '12
Emeritus Professor of Anthropology and Sociology, University of British Columbia

Dear Editor:

Dr. Donald Mathers, who died in 1972, was Head of the Department of Religion and Principal of Queen's Theological College. He had taught at Queen's since 1953. His portrait, painted by Sharon MacLennan, will be unveiled this spring.

It was felt that it would be meaningful for the cost of the portrait to be covered by friends and former students, and the plaque mounted on the frame will have a simple statement such as "Donated by Friends".

Donations may be made to Queen's Theological College, earmarked for the portrait, and receipts will be sent. If less than the cost is received, the College's Board will make up the difference; if more than needed is received, the excess will be transferred to the Donald Mathers Memorial Fund, which sponsors an annual lectureship in his name.

In view of the fact that some members of the Alumni have already contributed to the Memorial Fund, this should be regarded not as an appeal, but simply as notification of a project in which many readers will be interested.

DR. ALEX M. BRYANS,
Kingston, Ont.

Dear Editor:

In your interesting and timely article on John Buchan's Centenary (Sept. - Oct. 1975), you do him some injustice by referring to The Marquis of Montrose as a novel. It was, in fact, his most distinguished biography and established Buchan as a professional historian. It is still generally regarded as the best Life of Montrose yet written. There can be no doubt that this colourful, courageous and tragic figure of mid-17th century Scotland made a special appeal to Buchan's sympathies, and he readily infected his readers with his admiration for the ideals for which The Great Marquis fought and ultimately met his untimely death.

As one who avidly read Buchan's novels as a schoolboy in Scotland, it is gratifying to realize that Queen's has been entrusted with the custody of so much of his writing.

At the Branches

Cold Season, But Some Hot Discussions

Toronto's luncheon program continues to flourish because of its topical and provocative guest speakers and the spirited discussion periods. The Jan. 16 meeting featured Laura Sabia, Chairwoman of the Ontario Council on the Status of Women. (Of International Women's Year, she said 'they ripped us off with our own money'.) On Feb. 20, the speaker was the former Auditor-General of Canada, Maxwell Henderson.

Reserved tickets for these Hotel Toronto luncheons are $5.00, but alumni can just appear at the door (University and Richmond) for $5.50. Call Kathy Owen at 445-0908.

Also on Feb. 20, Toronto held a Pub Night at the Embers Hotel.

Dr. Watts Heading West

The annual tour of the Western Branches is being made this year by the Principal himself, and alumni along his itinerary are making plans for an April visit.

Dr. Watts will be in Winnipeg on Sunday, April 25, in Regina on April 26 to address a noon meeting, and that same evening (Monday) he'll be with the Calgary Branch. Tuesday is his date with alumni in Edmonton, followed by visits to Vancouver (April 28) and Victoria. On Friday, April 30, he will be guest speaker at the Canadian Club in Victoria ("Ivory Tower or Public Utility?")

With the portrait of Col. 'Sam' McLaughlin looking on with benign approval, the first Kingston Branch volunteers pitch in to help out with the voluminous mailing of the Annual Fund appeal. Shown at work in the McLaughlin Room (left to right, by rows): Mrs. Kay Slack (face hidden), Mrs. J.W. Ambrose and James E. Wright; Mrs. Sheila Mayo and Sherrilyn Jeffries of the Alumni Office, Mrs. Doris Doubleday and J.L. Murray; Mrs. Reggie Moncur (Alumni Office Manager) and Mrs. Helen Bronskill. These alumni volunteers and others not shown saved the Alumni Association considerable time and money.

Heeding the Call for Help

The busy Kingston alumni shown in the photo have made Queen's very proud. They responded to an unusual appeal sent to Branch members by Murray Gill, Director of Alumni Affairs. He wrote that:

"No departments have been spared in the University's attempts to reduce expenses, and the Alumni Office is no exception."

"From time to time, the Alumni Office must stuff envelopes with various letters, brochures, etc. This is a time-consuming manual task and generally requires the clerical staff to drop what they are doing and pitch in to get the job done. Regular work invariably suffers.

"We would welcome any volunteer assistance that might be available from anyone interested in spending an hour or so in the Alumni Office, helping us in the above fashion."

The response was generous and encouraging; the Whig-Standard even saw it as a news story, and the first crew found themselves local celebrities. Since then, teams of alumni — largely organized by Mrs. Kay Slack — have pitched in on two major mailings requiring two days each.

FRIENDS OF FRANK FUND

Gaels Lose; Alumni Still Win

Maybe the grads' cheering section is a jinx; Queen's hasn't won one of the games featured in the Kingston Branch's Hockey Night since the annual event was launched in 1972. On Jan. 20 the Gaels narrowly lost to Ottawa, 4-3. However, it was still a good evening, featuring a cash bar and buffet supper for 60 in the McLaughlin Room before the game.

A Little Mid-Winter Wine

Tuesday, Feb. 24, brought an informal evening of wine-tasting and cheese nibbling for the Montreal Branch. The event was held at La Maison Secrestat in Dorval and was hosted by J.E. Seagram and Sons.

This week (March 1-3) several members are canvassing their fellow alumni by phone in the Branch's major effort of the year to raise funds for the University. Only those who have not contributed to the Annual Fund are contacted in the TELETHON.

Saturday, April 24, is the date set for the reception and presentation of the prestigious Montreal Medal. Further details will be mailed.

Mark the date on your calendar now. Further details will appear later.

Frank Tindall is officially retiring this year, ending a long and brilliant career as head football and basketball coach at Queen's, spanning the years 1939 to 1975. The dedication and leadership he has shown during that time is without peer, and his record may never be surpassed. But perhaps an even more significant contribution made by this man has been the friendly counsel he has given the countless hundreds fortunate enough to have come into contact with him. His compassion, sense of fair play and dry sense of humour will always be remembered.

As a fitting tribute to celebrate this special occasion, the University is planning a dinner in his honour to be held on campus, Saturday, May 15, 1976, and it is expected several hundred friends will be in attendance for a memorable evening with the coach and his family. (See the notice on page 11).

Several presentations are currently being planned for this special evening, but it occurred to some that there are a great number of graduates and friends and well-wishers who would like to be able to make a special presentation to Frank.

In order to accommodate this swell of appreciation, a FRIENDS OF FRANK FUND has been established and a committee has been formed to administer same. It is intended that all contributions will become part of the Fund and that the total will be presented to Frank on this night in a form to be determined by the committee.

Gifts should be forwarded to FRIENDS OF FRANK FUND, c/o Royal Trust, 100 Princess St., Kingston, Ont.

Flower Power in Earl Hall

Jack Webb, Earl Hall's chief technician, works on a display of green and coloured leaves preserved in his new formula.

A new formula which will preserve the colour and shape of flowers and leaves — perhaps forever — has been developed by technician Jack Webb in Queen's Biology Department, and news of it has sparked lively interest among teachers, the press and several commercial enterprises.

One December morning the Toronto Globe and Mail carried a front-page banner story about the discovery. Within hours, calls from news people and companies offering to buy the formula were thicker than fruit flies in the genetics lab. Global Television chartered a plane and had a news team on campus by noon. Television, radio and press interviews, both national and local, have since spread the news and the University is investigating the patent possibilities. The inventor has specified that he wishes any honour or profits to go to the University, not to himself.

Mr. Webb, who has worked at Queen's since 1966 and is now chief technician in Earl Hall, discovered the preservative in his spare time after a professor's inquiry about four years ago. Working with Prof. Michael Bristow and using orchids from the department's greenhouse, he tried to find a way of preventing the natural fading and curling of the blooms after picking. The purpose was to help students examine minutely the botanical properties of orchids with real specimens that would last longer than a few hours.

(Those kept in jars of fluid turn a sickly uniform white.) Queen's now has fragile-looking orchids that can be passed from hand to hand for study, or even dropped on the floor, without damage. Some blossoms treated three years ago still look as bright as flowers on the plant.

The specimens are lowered into a dehydrating, carbon-fixing solution and left overnight. When removed, they are fragile and slightly stiff. A fine plastic spray-coating protects them from deterioration caused by humidity.

The preservative could revolutionize the teaching of botany, and already the Science Centre in Toronto and the National Museum in Ottawa have borrowed the formula to preserve specimens of native plants, particularly wildflowers.

Further experiments by Mr. Webb and Professor Bristow have shown that leaves can be preserved indefinitely, both in the green and the coloured states, even when they are exposed to sunlight for long periods. They say this has never been achieved before. The formula has also worked on tent caterpillars and has kept the needles on conifer twigs.

The possible applications for florists, herbariums, souvenir manufacturers and schools around the world boggle the imagination. Should the sale of the formula prove possible, Queen's may yet have a novel way of combatting its financial difficulties. Now that's a preservative!

Botany student holds two fresh-looking orchids — one preserved two years ago.

Can you picture a Queen's Rowing Team in international competition?

In recent years Canadians have become considerably more sports conscious. Whether in the capacity of spectator, competitor or fitness enthusiast, most have accepted sport as an integral part of our lives.

We are now demanding more of sport. We are concerned with its excesses: its violence, its emphasis on winning at all costs and its commercialism. We are also more selective about the sports we choose for ourselves. We look for activities that we feel comfortable with and that satisfy our particular needs.

The dramatic increase in the popularity of squash, tennis, orienteering, cross-country skiing and rowing can be traced in large measure to these new attitudes towards sports. Of these, only rowing is not presently provided in the Queen's athletic program.

Recently a group of interested individuals commissioned a report on the feasibility of establishing a rowing club in Kingston in association with Queen's. Such a facility would not only give Queen's men and women an opportunity to participate in the sport, but could also provide Canada with an additional source of oarsmen of international calibre. The report, which is now nearing completion, is being prepared by Doug Clark, a Canadian rowing coach who has had considerable experience in the development of new rowing facilities and programs.

At the moment, prospects for such a project look good, for a number of reasons. There is a nucleus of students and faculty currently at Queen's who have extensive rowing experience, and the initial reaction at the campus has been extremely encouraging. In addition, the Kingston community, all set to host the Sailing Olympics next summer, is in a good mood and a good location to welcome another water-oriented sport.

The present objective is to establish and maintain the club with funding from private and governmental sources, and the report will deal with this possibility.

Your comments on the project are invited and should be forwarded to either Bruce Alexander, 94 Hillsdale Ave. W., Toronto, Ont. M5P 1G3, or Michael Davies, The Whig-Standard, 306 King St. E., Kingston, Ont. K7L 4Z7.

Dr. R.L. Jeffery

Dr. R.L. Jeffery Was Mathematics Head

Emeritus Professor of Mathematics, Dr. Ralph Lent Jeffery, B.A. (Acadia), M.A., Ph.D. (Cornell), D.Sc. (Acadia, St. Mary's), LL.D. (McMaster, Assumption, Dalhousie, Memorial), F.R.S.C., Wolfville, N.S., died on December 13, aged 86. He had served as head of the Department of Mathematics at Queen's for 18 years, and Jeffery Hall was named in his honour.

A native of Overton, N.S., Dr. Jeffery was a drop-out in the eighth grade, and entered a co-operative fishing and farming business with his father. He became interested in studies again when a night school was started in Yarmouth. After serving as a high school principal, he obtained his B.A. at Acadia in 1921, at the age of 32, and later his M.A. and Ph.D. at Cornell.

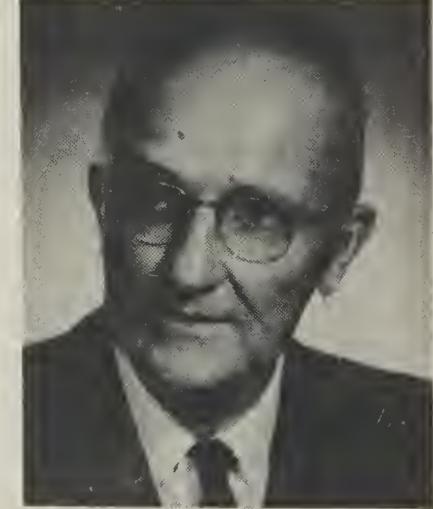

For nearly 20 years Dr. Jeffery was Professor of Mathematics at Acadia, during which time he gained a national reputation for mathematical research. In 1943 he accepted an appointment as head of the Mathematics Department at Queen's. Later he became chairman of the Board of Graduate Studies before retiring in 1960. Among his accomplishments was the establishment of the Summer Research Institute at Queen's, which brings together mathematicians for constructive study and research, an organization that has been adopted in several countries.

Dr. Jeffery was the author of many papers and monographs, and his textbooks have been used throughout the world. He was a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, a membership he valued most of all, and for one year was president of the science section. He was one of two honorary members of the National Council of the Canadian Mathematical Congress and president for four years.

Jeffery Hall, a $2,160,000 mathematics building, was named in his honour at the official opening in 1969. The building is located on University Ave.

Dr. Ronald L. Watts, Principal of Queen's, commented: "His colleagues and former students will remember Dr. Jeffery as a man with a tremendous capacity for work. Jeffery Hall, which houses Queen's Mathematics Department, will continue to be the active scene of a lasting memorial to his academic skills, his zest for life, his warm sense of humour, and his contribution to Queen's."

Dr. F.A. Knox

Economist Frank Knox: 'One of Skelton's Boys'

Frank Albert Knox, B.A. '23, LL.D. '65, F.R.S.C., emeritus professor and eminent economist, died in Kingston on Jan. 25. He was 81.

A native of Orono, Ont., he taught public school in Oshawa and Orillia and served with the Canadian Infantry overseas (1915-19) before coming to Queen's as a student of history and economics. He studied under O.D. Skelton, whose knowledge of Canadian economy and politics had gained respect among his Queen's colleagues and in government circles. Later, Frank Knox would become known as "one of Dr. Skelton's boys, that group of highly selected citizens, the intellectual élite of the Dominion" who left their mark in this same field.

He was offered a lectureship at Queen's the year after graduation, and in 1924 he began a career in teaching which was to span 40 years. He managed to combine his lecturing with graduate work at both Harvard and the University of Chicago. Though he was head of the Department of Political and Economic Science for many years, he found time to serve on several government commissions. In 1955 he was named chairman of the Committee of Inquiry into the Economics of the Gold Mining Industry. He was also widely known to the business world through his editorship of The Journal of the Canadian Bankers' Association and his expertise on international trade.

Tributes to his clear-headed but soft-spoken approach to his subject have appeared in a variety of publications: "One of the great lecturers," he has been called; "unmistakably Canadian" ... "never retreats into the academic ivory tower" ... "an air of complete integrity" ... "a tranquil, sane voice sounding in these chaotic times".

In 1965 Queen's awarded Frank Knox an honorary LL.D., citing him as an excellent teacher who remained an eager student and predicting that graduates of this University, wherever gathered in numbers, would sooner or later exchange glowing memories of Economics 4. He also held an LL.D. from Toronto (1964) and Fellowship in the Royal Society of Canada.

Commenting on his death, Principal Watts said: "Professor Knox was a superb teacher. I deeply admired and respected him as a colleague and as a personal friend. There are countless students who look back on his course in Economic History as a general education in itself, and many others who will remember him as an outstanding Queen's man and Canadian."

Festival for a Country Doctor

Dr. Harold Morris Gardiner, Med. '27, has had a signal honour from the community he has served as general practitioner for 46 of his 72 years. For 1975, the village of Minto, N.B., chose "Thanks to a Country Doctor" as the theme of its three-day summer festival, and Premier Richard Hatfield was on hand to make him a "free citizen."

Dr. Gardiner, originally from Seeley's Bay, Ont., interned at Saint John's General Hospital and moved to Minto in 1929. He did a lot of compensation work at first, mostly orthopedic surgery on miners, but adds that he has delivered just under 5,000 babies -- in some cases four generations of the same family. He recently gave up obstetrics, and at 71 he decided he had had enough of working nights. Now he's semi-retired -- which to him means regular office hours, five days a week. A Call from California

Mrs. Quentin Burke would like to have more Queen's visitors. She's the former Ellen (Klunk) Ingham, Arts '52, and no wonder she's lonely! In her part of the frontier, the summer temperature goes up to 118 degrees. The Burkes have lived for the past 11 years in Holtville, a small city in the reclaimed desert area of Southern California, just 12 miles from the Mexican border. Quentin publishes the weekly Holtville Tribune. Ellen reports that winter is sunny and pleasant, suited to the growing of lettuce, carrots, etc., for export. But in summer, temperatures often soar above 100 degrees for five months in a row.

They seldom see friends from Queen's days, but 1975 was a banner year, they write.

On an August trip to Las Vegas, they spent a day with Dave and Mimi Forrest (Muriel Benson), Arts '53, of Toronto, and, in October, Alex Kenner, Sc. '51 (M.B.A., Harvard), dropped into Holtville during leave from his Royal Bank posting in Nassau.

Leigh Ronalds Has a Sanctuary at St. Sauveur des Monts

R.W. "Leigh" Ronalds, Arts '49, is enjoying that rare pleasure of watching a dream come true. Three years ago the long-time Montrealer and printing executive bought an old French-Canadian farmhouse in the parish of St. Sauveur, along with 28 acres of fields and forest. It changed his life.

First, he renovated his farmhouse. Today a dozen uniquely designed and winterized homes stand on circular sites in what Leigh calls "Le Sanctuaire". A little way down the parish's main road, a 100-acre project called "Sans Souci" is under way, complete with lakes, streams and a panoramic view of the Laurentians. A maximum of 106 homes are planned in the area, but all existing ski and hiking trails will be protected and maintained. There will be one lake stocked with trout and one for boating and swimming.

Mr. Ronalds and his two partners in Black Hawk Development Ltd. believe city dwellers want to get out in the country, away from smog and noise, not just for the summer but permanently. "But we aren't intending to chop up the quiet, wooded countryside into a bunch of square lots and get out with a quick profit," Leigh adds. "We're still going to keep this country."

Our Christian Feminists

In November, 90 Christian feminists representing six denominations met at Bolton, Ont., to explore the radical compatibility of Christianity and feminism. Kingston was well represented by three of the four women who received their Master of Divinity degrees at Queen's Theological College in 1973: Rev. Ruth Studd, Arts '70; Rev. Betty Jean Klassen (B.A., Manitoba, M.R.E., Union Theol. Sem.) and Rev. Marion Stewart, Arts '62.

They participated in workshops centred on the theological background of feminism and ministry, liturgy, sexism in the church (still a matter of disillusionment and deep concern), and on the overall relationship of feminism to world liberation.

Mrs. Studd is now librarian at Queen's Theological College, Mrs. Klassen assists her husband, Rev. John Klassen, pastor of St. Margaret's United Church in Kingston, and Mrs. Stewart lectures in Hebrew at Queen's.

'Anjali': How a Phys Ed Grad Became the Toast of India

Graduates of Arts and Phys Ed at Queen's in the early '60's often do a double-take when they realize that the classical Indian dancer billed as "Anjali" at their local theatre is former classmate Anne-Marie Groves, Arts '63, PHE '64, now Mrs. Tony Gaston.

She first encountered Indian dance forms when she went to the city of Chidambaram in 1964 as a CUSO volunteer. With a background in ballet and modern dance, she was able to make the transition quickly. In fact, she was already performing when she returned to Canada in 1966. She danced at Expo '67 and at the Cultural Olympics in Mexico in 1968. Except for summer tours of Canada and England, she spent the next five years back in India, with a Commonwealth Scholarship and a Canada Council bursary. There she added to her repertoire, won warm acclaim from Indian audiences, and studied Sanskrit to read ancient dance texts. When the Prime Ministers of India and Canada conferred in Ottawa in 1973, Anjali was asked to perform.

With her husband as narrator, she has since danced across Canada, including a performance in Grant Hall last fall, collecting kudos for her Eastern grace. Currently Anjali is studying Indian sculpture and dance at Oxford. She hopes to teach in a drama school, but also intends to continue performing.

Diane S. Matthews, Com. '75, is an external auditor with Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. She is based at their head office in Ottawa, but audits various C.M.H.C. regional offices from coast to coast.

G. Bruce McMahon, Sc. '71, recently graduated as a chartered accountant and is working with Sperry Gyroscope Div., Sperry Rand Canada Ltd., Ottawa, Ont. Mr. and Mrs. McMahon (Deborah Dobenko), Arts '74, live at 28 Hogan St., Unit 6, Ottawa.

Robert Mossman, Com. '75, is a computer programmer with Systems Dimension Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Morris K. Mott, an all-star Hockey Gael in 1970-71, is playing hockey in Sweden's top league this year on a team called Frolunda. He and his brother Darwin are Frolunda's top scorers and after 12 games were the best plus-minus players. Morris, who is popular with the Swedish press and public, formerly played right wing with the California Golden Seals of the N.H.L. He is still working on his doctoral thesis in history.

Dwight E. Nedow, Arts '71, has become an agent for Crown Life Insurance Co., 800 Princess St., Kingston, Ont.

E.A. (Rick) Reilly, Law '72 (B.A., Alberta), is a solicitor attached to Syncrude Canada Ltd., Edmonton, Alta.

Bryan W. Robinson, Sc. '71, Fredericton, N.B., has been appointed District Manager, mining and construction sales, Atlantic Region, Ingersoll-Rand Co. Ltd. He joined the company in 1971 as a sales engineer and subsequently gained a wide range of experience in the industry's Atlantic Region.

Barbara M. Sampson, Arts '75, Kingston, Ont., has received a Canada Council award to pursue studies at a Canadian university for a Master's degree in French literature.

Bonny May Trimble, Ed. '75 (B.A., Wilfrid Laurier), Deep River, Ont., is teaching Grade 3 in EMO, located between Fort Francis and Rainy River in Northwestern Ontario.

David M. Tulett, Sc. '75, is a mine planner at International Nickel's Copper Cliff South Mine, Sudbury, Ont.

Susan K. Turner, Arts '75, is administrator of Tayview Nursing Home, Perth, Ont. She plans to return to university in the near future.

Dr. David Walker, Med. '71, has been admitted as Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians of Canada and is now a member of the Faculty of Medicine at Queen's University. Dr. Walker and his wife (Lynn Kaufman), Arts '71, are living in Sydenham, Ont.

Richard D. Worsfold, Sc. '70, is a research engineer at the Centre for Cold Ocean Resources Engineering, Memorial University of Newfoundland in St. John's.

How much energy do we need to enjoy life?

WE DRIVE big cars, use throw-away products, flick on heating and air conditioning switches with thoughtless abandon. We're on an energy binge and shortages are inevitable if we don't cut back on our growing consumption.

That's one argument for conservation. There are others: soaring capital costs, environmental impact, social distortion...

THE SIMPLE TRUTH is that we cannot live in the future as we have in the past. If we continue to gobble up energy at recent rates of increase, we'll need twice as much of it in just 12 years. We won't have it!

In terms of oil and gas production, our best years appear to be behind us. Most of our readily accessible hydro-electric sites are now in use. Coal deposits are difficult and costly to develop. Other forms of energy—biomass, solar, wind and nuclear for example—will have a role to play, but can't be depended upon to solve all our problems.

Conservation is the only energy option open to us which can work quickly and at low cost.

The goal: a saving of 40% by the year 2000.

A 20% cut in projected consumption by 1985 is a saving equal to 75% of our current oil imports. A 40% reduction by 2000 equals the output of 10,000 conventional oil wells or 55 nuclear stations.

This will not mean drastic changes in lifestyle. It's possible with modest savings in daily living, industry and transportation.

Is all our consumption and convenience really worth the price?

Other countries seem to have found comfortable standards of living without extreme energy consumption. In Sweden, a highly-industrialized country with a climate and living standard like ours, they use one-third less energy per person than we do.

France, Germany, Finland, the United Kingdom, Denmark and Italy all use less than half our energy per person.

By saving energy we can not only avoid future shortages but also improve our quality of life.

Efforts to lower consumption—through smaller cars, more mass transit, better built homes, more efficient industry, less waste production, more personal effort—will all save energy. And help our environment. And help to fight inflation. And help to make us more selfreliant and appreciative of simple pleasures.

In short, energy conservation can improve our overall quality of life.

Yes, it will take some effort because we've grown accustomed to waste. But is there any sensible alternative? If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem.

Get involved with energy conservation.

It's kind of nice to stand out.

Which is what Carrington Canadian does. But for many more good reasons than merely the look of the bottle. Carrington is distilled in small batches, aged and mellowed in seasoned oak casks; it's light in look and smooth in taste. Carrington, it's special, and, in our opinion, like no other whisky in the world.

A whisky of outstanding quality.

COVER: Dr. John J. Deutsch, Com. '35, LL.D. '74, Principal from 1968 to 1974, died on March 18 at the age of 65. On pages 2 through 7, the Review salutes him as a great Queen's man, professor, Principal, economist and Canadian. Cover design by Peter Dorn.

John James Deutsch

February 26, 1911 - March 18, 1976

We pay tribute here to the memory of John Deutsch who, over 40 years, was first student, then successively at intervals, teacher, Vice-Principal and Principal of Queen's University. Few Canadians have had their knowledge and wisdom so urgently sought across Canada, and across the western world. We all know well enough the recognitions and high respect he won. And we know why he could do so much so well. He went quickly and surely to the heart of any problem, armed with vast knowledge and guided by an invincible common sense. We are deeply grateful that, for so much of his life, his unusual abilities, unflagging industry, and humane understanding were at the service of this university.

We honour a man who in his early life made his own way resourcefully and who never, at any time, seemed to be hampered by the psychic wear and tear which often afflicts those carrying enormous burdens of responsibility. He was entirely free of the pride and impatience which often marks the superior mind in its dealings with those who are less quick and penetrating. He was serenely at peace with himself and quietly confident of drawing a strong bow in any engagement, no matter how stern.

We honour him as one who could "walk with kings nor lose the common touch", one who had an absorbing interest in his fellow creatures of all ranks and ages and could enter into their world without condescension. The only lack we found in him was a lack of pretension, and we honour him for that, too.

We grieve over the untimely death of a great Canadian, offer our deepest sympathy to his family, and hope that their memories will see them through the dark days. We cherish the distinction he brought to his university, and are thankful that peaceful death came soon when he suddenly reached his terminal infirmity.

Commemorative Words by Dr. J.A. Corry, delivered at a Memorial Service in Grant Hall on March 24, 1976

Surrounded by his academic colleagues, students, honorary graduates, and well-wishers from universities and governments, John James Deutsch was installed as Vice-Chancellor and 14th Principal of Queen's University on November 8, 1968.

The new Principal with an old friend, former Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, the first Brockington Visitor to Queen's, in 1968-69.

The Principal was a good audience for his well-known Queen's contemporary, actor Lorne Greene, Arts '37, laureated in the spring of 1971.

"It was not only his brilliance and fine mind which drew people to him, but also his forthright and modest manner, and his readiness to meet people on equal terms. Queen's can be very proud of him, as I am proud of him."

—The Rt. Hon. Roland Michener

"John Deutsch was one of our greatest Canadians. His work in the university field made academic history for Canada."

—Dr. J.B. Stirling,
Chancellor Emeritus

"The lives of many have been profoundly touched by his warm personal interest, his sound scholarship and his contagious concern for the collegial traditions of the university."

—Principal Ronald L. Watts

The Principal's visits to Alumni Branches were a mutual pleasure. Here he and his wife Stephanie (to his right) pose with the late Dr. Sammy Shenkman, Med. '33, and Mrs. Shenkman at an alumni reception in New York in 1969.

Dr. Deutsch introduces the Prime Minister to Reeve Peter Beeman at Kingston Township's airport. Mr. Trudeau came to receive an LL.D. at the Principal's installation in 1968.

On Color Night 1974, Dr. Deutsch was moved when he became the first Queen's Principal ever honoured with a plaque in recognition of his encouragement of athletics. With him: Karen Carson and Colin Loudon.

At another Color Night (1972), the Principal joined in a rousing chorus of Oil Thigh, with Mrs. Stewart Webster, wife of the Dean of Student Affairs, and Patrick Riley, AMS President, Arts '72.

"Those of us at the Economic Council who have known him and his work particularly closely...recognize in him a leader of great vision combined with wisdom and common sense."
—André Raynauld

"John Deutsch was probably the most remarkable and certainly the most practical of the great Ottawa mandarins."
—Peter C. Newman

"Working at the interfaces of the governmental, academic and economic power centres of his time, the unassuming and genial Dr. Deutsch was the quintessential Canadian chairman of committees, a formidable architect of consensus...A policy engineer of top stature, he understood how to make things work."
—The Montreal Gazette

Principal's tribute brings smile to Mrs. Stirling at Chancellor's retirement dinner, April 1974.

At Reunion 1972, the Deutsches greet Sc. '47 grads, back for 25th anniversary.

May 24, 1974: His last Convocation as Principal and Chancellor Michener's first.

"...One of the makers of his times in Canada."
—Montreal Gazette editorial

Below Dr. Deutsch's portrait, mourners lined up in Grant Hall to sign a Book of Remembrance, flanked by an honour guard of gowned students. The names will be part of Queen's Domesday Book. Dr. Deutsch is buried in the Principals' plot at Cataraqui Cemetery, along with Principals Grant, Gordon, Wallace and Mackintosh.

The funeral, held in St. Mary's Cathedral on March 23 and celebrated by Archbishop Joseph Wilhelm, was an impressive, moving farewell to Dr. Deutsch. The casket was draped with the Queen's flag, topped by the Order of Canada medal. Colleagues in their academic gowns formed a colorful procession. Queen's Choral Ensemble sang the mass splendidly, with Prof. Norman Brown as organist and Queen's own Pipe Major Peter Richards piping the recessional. The service was videotaped by Queen's TV and was broadcast live over CFRC.

Some well-known friends leaving the Cathedral: Drs. J.A. Corry, J.B. Stirling and Roland Michener, Senator Carl Goldenberg, the Hon. C.M. Drury, the Hon. John Turner and Mrs. Agnes Benidickson. Most of them were among the 13 honorary pallbearers.

The Dilemma

From an address given by Dr. Deutsch to a symposium on the Dilemmas of Man, November 1974:

"The dilemma of modern man lies in the choice between the acceptance of human tragedy on a large scale and the acceptance of the prolonged sacrifices involved not only in the distribution of wealth but also in the willingness to engage international co-operation on the scale needed.

"The latter is perhaps the most vital requirement of all. Yet, because of modern man's obsession with national sovereignty, he finds it difficult to understand or grasp this necessity.

"There is no cause to succumb to the modern doomsday-sayers, but there is a critical need to exercise our will, including our political will, and to recognize our inescapable interdependence on this shrinking planet."

The Memorial

To perpetuate the memory of John J. Deutsch and his interest in the study and development of public policy, it is proposed to establish a John Deutsch Memorial for the Study at Queen's University of Economic Policy. Originally conceived and discussed with him to honour his retirement at Queen's, the work will help promote the study and discussion of public policy in Canada. His deep interest in students, in research on policy matters and in improving the quality of public discussion of Canadian issues will be reflected in the use of contributions for the following three purposes:

- To provide scholarships for students undertaking graduate research on economic issues related to policy problems.
- To provide support for workshops and symposia that will bring together at Queen's people from governments, private institutions and universities. It is expected that these opportunities for discussion and learning will lead to occasional conferences, the published proceedings of which will contribute to public debates. Examples of such conferences that the Queen's Institute for Economic Research has organized in the past are the monetary conference last August on issues relevant to revisions to the Bank Act, the conference in 1970 on inflation and the Canadian experience, and the conference in 1969 on the 25th anniversary of the Bretton Woods Agreements.
- To provide support for scholars from Queen's and elsewhere to pursue economic research at the University.

Queen's wishes to help preserve the memory of a man whose distinguished career helped so many and whose contributions ranged widely and deeply in Canadian public life.

IN OTHER WORDS: "If, in aspiring to the excellence in citizenship and high level of achievement that this country needs from her university graduates, we who are now students can approach the standard set by Dr. Deutsch, we will have been more than successful and Canada can be assured of a secure future." — Jamie Avis, President, AMS

A bumper year for participation

Faceless but graceful, freshette Celeste Jennings, along with Karen Russell (both from Ottawa), took championship honours in the Synchronized Swimming Duet event.

This past season, 500 students, male and female, played for Queen's in intercollegiate athletics, including a large number of freshmen who will provide the nucleus for future strong teams. Queen's entered 43 teams in 19 men's sports and 17 women's sports, thereby continuing to support the ideal of "broad participation in quality programs".

A swimmer, John Pearson of Toronto, was named winner of the Jenkins Trophy this year as the graduating student who has brought the most honour to Queen's by his athletic and scholastic ability. A girl who participated in several sports — Marg Bartlett of Montreal — was awarded the PHE Alumnae Trophy as the final-year woman student who has brought the most honour to Queen's through her athletic and scholastic achievements.

Pearson was named the top rookie on the swim team back in 1972-73 and last year won the MVP Award. He was also a member of the relay team that set two Ontario Universities Athletic Association (OUAA) swim meet records.

Marg Bartlett is an all-round athlete. Among the sports in which she has participated are ice hockey, field hockey, Nordic skiing, Alpine skiing, squash, tennis and basketball.

The other major awards which were made at Color Night in March were as follows: team): Willie Wing, Gananoque, Ont.

R.A.F. Trophy (outstanding member, basketball team): Derek Swinnard, Moncton, N.B.

Queen's Track Alumni Trophy (the individual who has made the greatest contribution to track and field): Tony Verhoeven, Kingston.

The Gaels Water Polo Trophy (the player on the water polo team who has made the greatest contribution through performance, leadership and sportsmanship): David Kay, Willowdale, Ont.

Gymnastics Trophy (the gymnast who has made the greatest contribution through his performance and team spirit): Tom Yovanoff, Toronto.

Jack Day Trophy (the wrestler who has contributed most to the sport): Al Stewart, Dundas, Ont.

Queen's Synchronized Swimming Team won its fourth consecutive championship in the OWIAA. Team member Laurie Morrison, Peterborough, was an individual champ for solo and figure events. The Golden Gals Curling Team won their second annual championship with three freshmen curlers skipped by Sheryl Keely of Kingston.

The Clark Trophy (outstanding swimmer): John Pearson.

MEN'S ATHLETICS

The male athletes won their share of championships, but not in the so-called "major sports" — football, basketball and hockey. They did make the play-offs in football and hockey, and in the latter they lost in the quarter-finals 2-1 to Toronto, the ultimate Canadian champions.

They won championships in soccer and curling, and were strong runners-up in track and field. In fact, they had many individual championships in track and field and in swimming. In rugby the team went to the Canadian finals for the second time in two years. In water polo, the Gaels were East Section winners.

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS

Two team championships returned to Queen's. For the second consecutive year the OWIAA Curling Trophy was won by the Golden Gals. The Synchronized Swimming Team won the laurels for the fourth consecutive year.

Individual championships were also won by four first-year "Q" winners: Vicki Cleworth for solo figure skating; Laurie Morrison for solo and figures events in Synchronized Swimming; and Celeste Jennings and Karen Russell for the Duet Event.

Squash and figure skating teams placed a strong second; the basketball team won the OWIAA semi-final play-offs up to the finals; the badminton team placed third in a 10-team league; the volleyball team placed second in the East Division, qualifying for the finals; the ice hockey team qualified for the play-offs, losing to the eventual OWIAA champions, as did the fencing team.

The speed swimming team qualified five swimmers at the OWIAA championships and they represented the association team which won the CWIAU championships.

Paul Memorial Trophy to Bews champions

The John Paul Memorial Trophy was awarded for the first time at the Bews Intramural Program's award dinner on March 16. It was won by Commerce '76, which amassed the most points for Bews participation, an historical first for a Commerce unit.

The trophy was donated by relatives and friends of John David Paul, B.A. '75, who was killed in a car accident in July 1975. He had been an enthusiastic Bews organizer, official and all-round sportsman, and held a Silver Pin in his own right.

FOOTBALL COACH

As this is written, the University has just announced that Doug Hargreaves, Arts '60, will succeed Frank Tindall as football coach. He is expected on campus in June. Garney Henley, the outstanding professional player with the Hamilton Ti-Cats, changed his mind after having accepted the post and instead will be coaching the Ti-Cats. Details of the Hargreaves appointment will be carried in the July-August Review. — H.J.H.

Letter

Verona, Ont.

Dear Editor:

I received a copy of the January-February Review from my niece, Mrs. David Brind of Geneva, N.Y.

I was intrigued by the Grey House and its uses, and I thought you would be glad to learn more of its history. It was built by my father, David Murray, in 1900. He had studied architecture at Varsity, and this was his first "brain child". My brother and I and two sisters were born there.

Queen's Cres. was called Alice St. in those days, and where Ban Righ Hall stands was an old ruined stone school house. The road was not paved. Across the street from us lived Dr. Knight, and the Misses King next to him; Dr. Goodwin lived nearer University Ave. all old Queen's names. A great-uncle of mine, Dr. John Clarke Murray, taught for 10 years at Queen's before going to McGill.

It is a strange coincidence that this house should be the only one to survive in this block, because I am a writer and my book The Friendly Village is in the library at Queen's, and in federal and provincial archives.

A Report on the Roy Fund

The James A. Roy Memorial Fund now stands at $7,383. Contributions are still being received, and it is hoped that eventually $10,000 will be reached.

The fund has made possible the James A. Roy Memorial Scholarship in English. It will be awarded annually to the student entering the fourth year of a B.A. (Honours) program with a major or medial concentration in English who, achieving a good overall standing, also places highest on the aggregate in at least two courses in Modern British Commonwealth or Canadian literature. The current value is $445.

A MASTERPIECE OF APRIL FOOLERY — When it came time for Sc. '76 to meet the annual engineers' challenge for April 1st, they came up with this traffic-stopper. Working overnight, they cut a car nearly in two, wrapped it around a hydro pole, and then welded it shut again. For an extra filip, they installed two square wheels made of concrete. The Sc. '76 crest painted handsomely on the hood was lost to a trophy hunter early in the day. The prank was pulled near the corner of Union St. and University Ave., opposite the Union. Provincial grants for 1976-77 give Queen's 'a fighting chance'

Queen's share of Ontario's operating grant of $651 million for universities in 1976-77 will be $42.7 million.

Under a new formula, the grant is based two-thirds on 1975-76 enrolment and one-third on 1974-75's. The former "slip-year" formula was based entirely on the previous year's enrolment and was a tremendous incentive to growth for many universities.

According to Principal Ronald L. Watts, the significance of the new formula is that it puts less weight on additional enrolment and allows more for covering increases due to inflation. Although the provincial grant to Queen's is 13.5% higher for next year, operating revenue will still amount to about 2% less than is required, due to inflation and anticipated enrolment.

Since tuition fees (which account for about 15% of Queen's total operating revenue) are frozen for '76-'77, the net increase in revenue from the provincial grant actually will be about 11%, Dr. Watts points out.

That 11% has to cover two areas: increases in teaching staff and facilities to accommodate 4% more students next fall, and a regular inflationary increase of about 9% in the cost of goods and services. The net result is that Queen's will be operating with 2% less than it actually costs to run the university.

Dr. Watts is hopeful and encouraged, nonetheless. Despite the belt-tightening necessary, he points to the improvement over last year's financial situation. "We're losing ground," he observes, "but not at the previous rate of a 4% to 5% annual loss. It is an improvement in our relative situation. We now have a fighting chance of maintaining the quality of education."

He stressed to the campus community that the need for the kinds of economies envisaged in the 1975 Report on Financial Constraint would not lessen.

No Supplements Here

As an older, well-established university, Queen's did not share in the supplementary grants of $3.5 million to Brock, Lakehead, Laurentian and Trent "as emerging universities". There were also extra grants of $3.8 million to four universities for bilingual programs.

Reflections on the Global Level

The global level of funding for Ontario universities — $651 million — is an increase of 14.4% over last year. This indicates that the government gave high priority to universities, the percentage increase being substantially above the general level of increase for other provincial expenditures.

According to the Principal, it also indicates that Ontario recognized that its spending per student was substantially lower than other provinces'. He credits the OCUA (Ontario Council on University Affairs) with correctly interpreting to the government the plight of the universities.

The many belt-tightening recommendations made by the Principal's Committee on Financial Constraint last summer were based on the assumption that the increased grants for students would match inflation. Despite the "measure of relief" in the current grants, this assumption turns out to have been optimistic.

Prospects for a Thaw

For several years, tuition fees have been frozen by the provincial government. That's why the suggestion from many alumni that Queen's bail herself out by raising tuition fees was futile; any university raising its fees simply had the amount deducted from its provincial grants.

Last fall a report to the Ontario government by Maxwell Henderson urged tuition hikes of 65%. Despite protests from many quarters, especially from student groups concerned about accessibility, it seems that tuition fees may be unfrozen by 1977-78.

Dr. Harry Parrott, Ontario Minister of Colleges and Universities, told Carleton University crowds in February that the government believes the cost of education should be shifted back onto the individual student, so that tuition fees cover about 18% of the universities' operating expenses.

Earlier in the same month, the Council of Ontario Universities, on which Principal Watts sits, firmly rejected a recommendation from its own subcommittee to increase tuition by 25% over two or three years. "It was thrown back for revision," the Principal says. The university community awaits further developments, since the coming of spring brought no formal notice of a thaw in the tuition freeze.

Labelled by the photographer "Queen's from the West", this picture of the University campus was taken by Judge H. A. Lavell, Arts '88, in 1891. Shown is what is now known as the Old Arts Building, with the Science Building, now called Carruthers Hall, on the left. Blocked from view are the Old Medical Building and Summerhill, the Principal's Residence. These four buildings comprised the entire campus at that time.

C. 1905 — Kingston Hall, the New Arts Building, was made possible in 1900 by the generosity of the City of Kingston. It was completed in 1902. Grant Hall was built in 1903-04 by means of contributions from students, staff and alumni. The Old Arts Building is in the background. This view is taken from a postcard in the Alumni Archives.

This view, taken from the new extension to the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, shows the Old Arts Building in the background. On the left, barely visible through the trees, is the New Arts Building, Kingston Hall, which blocks from sight Carruthers Hall. In the immediate foreground is University Avenue, which cuts through the main campus. Leading to Old Arts is a new walk-way, which replaces the road that used to be in front of Kingston Hall. The greensward on the right is the Lower Campus, subject of a bitter controversy a few years back when there was a plan to use it as a site for a new physics building. Staff, students, and alumni protested vehemently, an alternative was found, and the space is still available as a green area for sports and recreation. However, the grass now covers a two-level parking garage, blasted out of solid limestone, with spaces for 660 cars.

C. 1915 — Kingston Hall as seen through the gates donated by the Class of Arts '10, with Old Arts in the rear. The gates stood in this location for 60 years, until their removal to the eastern entrance to the campus off Arch St. near Summerhill.

Surviving members of the Class of Arts '10 gave their approval to the new location. Through the pillars (left) may be glimpsed a vintage car. Through the grillwork (right) is a horse and buggy. Parking as a problem still lay far in the future.

AMS elections for 1976-77

Student government may have a 118-year history at Queen's, but it's still up to date. A woman vice-president is part of the new AMS executive elected to serve until March 1977.

Jamie Avis, President, is a graduate of Arts '72, now in second-year Law. He's 26, a Kingstonian, and a former AMS Education Commissioner. Paul Steep, 21, is Vice-President (Operations). He's a native of Guelph, now in third-year English, and a former AMS Internal Affairs Commissioner. Kathy Wood, Vice-President (University Affairs), is 21, comes from Newburgh, Ont., and is in third-year Economics. She's a Golden Gals hockey player, a former AMS Constable, co-director of Info Bank and a member of the Day Care Committee.

The new triumvirate defeated two other teams of candidates, including a nine-member slate of socialists.

In a concurrent referendum, the students voted against giving their "employees" a raise. Although they have approved increases totalling $16.60 in their student interest fees for next fall, they defeated a proposal to raise honoraria for fellow students who administer the Queen's Journal, Tricolor and the AMS itself.

Major grant for research into national security

A five-year grant totalling $250,000 has been given to Queen's Centre for International Relations by the Department of National Defence. Similar grants were made to four other Canadian universities as part of a new National Defence program to encourage research into national and international security.

According to Dr. Nils Orvik,

Director of the Centre for International Relations, "The grant to Queen's will support research into problems related to the north, the North Atlantic, and Western Europe insofar as they concern Canadian security. We will also study the role of the military in today's society, dealing broadly with certain civilian aspects of national defence and the military establishment."

Queen's project is expected to involve close co-operation with Kingston's three military educational institutions: Royal Military College, the National Defence College and the Canadian Land Forces Command and Staff College.

The Centre for International Relations was established last year as an interdisciplinary institution and grew out of an informal branch of research within the Department of Political Studies. Its first major study — Canada's relations to the European community — is being supported by the Donner Canadian Foundation.

Nursing students confer at Queen's for first time

More than 300 nursing students from across Canada were on campus Feb. 6-8 for the eighth annual conference of the Canadian University Nursing Students Association (CUNSA.)

SITE OF COMPLEX FOR BASIC SCIENCES AND MEDICAL LIBRARY

Excavation began on Feb. 9 for another stage of the federally funded Health Sciences Complex — a section tentatively labelled the Basic Medical Sciences/Library Complex. The $16-million, 11-storey structure is taking shape at George and Stuart streets. Various wings of Kingston General Hospital may be seen in the background. The first phase of five storeys (two of them below plaza level) are expected to be ready by April 1978. The facilities to be housed in the new building have been needed and anticipated since the early 1960's.

cific areas shared their knowledge through a series of discussion groups.

Two of the sessions were held in Grant Hall and were open to the public.

Rehab Therapy students try cooking for books

Queen's Rehabilitation Therapy students decided to take direct action on a problem affecting them because of general financial constraint on campus. In February they held a bake sale in the Union to buy library books.

The School has been plagued by difficulties in locating source material important to several courses. Some books owned by professors are filed in the doctors' reading room at Kingston General Hospital which closes at 5.00 p.m. This material cannot be removed from the building. A second problem is that rehabilitation therapy books go out of print quickly, due to the relatively small demand for them.

Professors have tried to alleviate the situation by photocopying relevant chapters of books for their classes, but paper costs and current restrictions on power use have virtually eliminated the practice.

NRC helping physicists build new spectrometer

The National Research Council (NRC) has given Queen's $182,000 to build a two-dimensional electron velocity spectrometer. The University is providing an additional $40,000 for the two-year project, to be conducted by Prof. Alec T. Stewart and researchers Barry Mc-Kee and Robert J. Douglas, all of the Physics Department.

Others involved in developing the new spectrometer will be Drs. William Henry and Shigeo Saimoto of Metallurgical Engineering, Dr. V.H. Smith and Tom McMullen of the Chemistry Department, and Malcolm Scott, another physicist.

"Our results could have many practical applications in the development of new materials for use in industry," says Dr. Stewart, former head of the Physics Department.

"Once the spectrometer is completed and in operation, it will open a floodgate of information on metals which could create an unprecedented advance in metallurgical research."

The grant is considered particularly significant because NRC's budget has been frozen by the federal government.

Corpuscle Cup competitors were really out for blood

The Corpuscle Cup has had a transfusion of enthusiasm. For alumni who weren't on campus around 1960, it should be explained that Corpuscle Cup is not a disease of the blood, but rather an award for giving it away in a competition sponsored by the Engineering Society. When students donate blood to the Red Cross, a record is kept of their faculty and year. The cup is awarded on the basis of maximum percentage participation by class. It was won this year by Med. '79, with 56.6% of the class donating.

The Transfusion Service Plaque, a companion piece for competition among faculties, was won by Phys Ed, with 29.9% of the School participating.

Both the cup and the plaque were donated in the late '50's by the Red Cross, but competition lapsed in 1963. That year the Corpuscle Cup was won by Med. '69, with 98.6% class participation.

Credit for reviving the competition goes to third-year Engineer Paula Luck, who happened upon the trophies among some old files when she was organizing the 1975-76 campus blood clinics.

A record total of 1,650 pints resulted from the three-day Corpuscle Cup clinic in Victoria Hall in February. This figure beat Queen's and Kingston's old record of 1,300 pints, donated in the campus clinic last fall.

Queen's hears from friends in the U.S.

Several gifts totalling $51,000 were received in February from the Friends of Queen's University, Inc., based in New York City.

The disbursements include $15,000 (from the Franklin Bracken Foundation) for the medical library now under construction; $25,000 for the Principal's Special Fund (from Dr. George E. Lewis); $8,000 for the International Centre; and the remainder in various quantities to the Barsky Prize in Ophthalmology, the E. Diana Blake Trust, Queen's Debating Union and the Chaplain's Fund.

Tricolor Awards to three

The Tricolor Award, the highest non-academic, non-athletic award that can be received by a Queen's student, went to only three people this spring.

John Palmer, a talented and well respected musician in final year Music, was saluted for his contribution to the community through his dedication to music. In addition to playing with six of Queen's classical and popular musical groups, John directed Queen's Musical Theatre this year.

Ian Nordheimer was cited for his "long, strong and stable" involvement over seven years — four in Commerce and three in Law. Ian held almost every position possible in student government, climaxed by the AMS presidency this year.

Peter Lane, a fourth-year medical student, won for his "often controversial but always purposeful and dedicated" work as AMS External Affairs Commissioner, in which he broadened the AMS's orientation considerably. He created Tele-clinic, worked with the Aesculapian and John Howard societies, and was a student Senator on the Committee for Academic Development.

Two merit Basmajian Award

The annual Basmajian Award, presented to a member of the Faculty of Medicine for meritorious contribution to medical research, has two recipients for 1975-76: Dr. Roland J. Boegman, Pharmacology Department, and Dr. Derek V. Cooke, Department of Surgery.

The award was established by Dr. John Basmajian, former head of Queen's Anatomy Department, in memory of his parents, Mihran and Mary Basmajian.

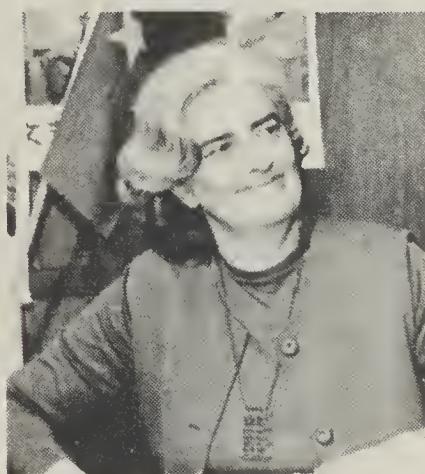

Dr. Cooke, who came to Queen's in 1973, has been working for some time on rheumatoid arthritis, particularly the mechanisms which cause the disease and their role in its persistence. He received the Royal College Medal in Surgery in 1972 for research in this field.

Dr. Boegman is studying the biochemistry and physiology of muscular dystrophy (MD), what alterations occur in muscle membranes when MD is present, and how the nerves affect the muscles in the diseased state. He has been engaged in this project since coming to Queen's six years ago.

Last year's winner was Dr. Jerry Simon, Med. '62, a gastroenterologist studying liver disease.

Some Encouragement From Your Alumni Fund Committee

The January-February Review reported the favourable progress of the 1975/76 Alumni Fund as it passed the halfway point on Nov. 1. This trend has continued despite the interruption of mail service, and the Fund Committee is confident that last year's record totals will be equalled by April 30.

Dean Evelyn Reid

Dean of Women Reappointed

Mrs. Evelyn Reid has been re-appointed Dean of Women for a further three-year term on the recommendation of a search committee which had been meeting since last summer. She was first appointed in 1971 to succeed Dean Beatrice Bryce.

Before making its recommendation, the advisory committee gave extensive consideration to a review of the changing role which the post might fill in a time of transition within the University. One recommendation was that the Dean's activities should extend beyond the residences.

During her term as Dean, Mrs. Reid has taken a broad interest in the role of women within universities. Other developments which mark her tenure include the establishment of French-speaking floors in Victoria Hall, a German Table in Ban Righ Dining Room, Ban Righ Firesides, and 'Galerie Victoria', a series of informal discussion groups and seminars with faculty members.

A number of Fund activities have helped to maintain this momentum:

- Since Dec. 1, 1975, 35 graduates have joined Queen's Cha Gheill Society. The membership has now reached 920 — 92% of our goal of 1000.

The Fund Committee will continue to seek increased support of this program through periodic special mailings.

- More than 100 graduates have enrolled recently in the Regular Annual Donors Group, which has now grown to include 700 Queen's alumni. Members receive one Fund reminder each year. This replaces the normal mail appeals and helps reduce printing and postage costs. If you would like to make an annual contribution at a specific time, please advise the Alumni Office. The Fund Committee will welcome your participation.
- During February and March, Alumni Branches in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa organized and conducted successful Fund Telethons. Your Alumni Fund should receive at least $10,000 from these projects which were designed to assist with the '75-'76 wind-up.

Queen's is particularly grateful for the enthusiasm and help of the 100 volunteers who gave of their spare time to make the calls and thus ensure success.

- Several classes are considering special giving programs to coincide with significant anniversary years. Science '45 has launched an appeal to its members for funds to increase the capital account of the Science '45 Memorial Scholarship Fund to at least $10,000. This amount would provide the recipient with annual tuition fees.

The Fund Committee's proposals for increased involvement of classes in our annual giving programs have been endorsed by the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association. Detailed plans are now being made and the Committee will soon be seeking the active co-operation of permanent Class Executives and individual graduates.

The first mailing of the 1976/77 Alumni Fund is scheduled for May 3. Approximately 27,000 graduates will be asked to help the University by making a gift.

Participation in annual giving reached 22.5% in 1974/75. This is slightly above the national average. The Fund's performance can be improved only with your thoughtful help on a regular basis. Please consider the fact that much of what you enjoyed at Queen's was provided by those who had gone before.

University Centre named for former Principal Deutsch

By unanimous decision of the Board of Trustees, the new University Centre has been named in honour of John J. Deutsch, who was Principal from 1968 to 1974. The Centre includes the former Students' Memorial Union, and now involves enlarged and renovated facilities stretching from Union St. north to the corner of Clergy St. and University Ave., and bounded on the east by the Physical Education Centre, to which it is connected.

Designed for student and staff use, the John Deutsch University Centre will house a coffee shop, a new dining room, meeting rooms, Alumni Association offices, the International Centre, offices for the A.M.S. and other student organizations, an underground pub, a bank, and the graduate student residence. Covered walkways and skylights are among the most attractive features.

The ground-level pub is expected to open this month. The transfer of kitchen facilities for the new coffee shop and dining room will follow. All sections should be in use for the new fall term.

"In giving the university centre this name, the Trustees reflected the university community's wish to show the high esteem in which Dr. Deutsch was held and to recognize his encouragement of the project from its earliest stages," says Principal Watts. "His interest and concern for students at Queen's will be remembered by all who use the John Deutsch University Centre for years to come."

Prof. D.B. McLay named Associate Dean (Studies)

Dr. D.B. McLay will be Associate Dean (Studies) in the Faculty of Arts and Science for the next four years, succeeding Prof. Peter Platenius.

Professor McLay, a graduate of McMaster and U.B.C., has been a member of the Physics Department since 1962. His special research interest has been molecular spectroscopy, and he was responsible for implementing new courses on the Physics of Energy Resources and the Physics of Music. His service on academic committees both inside and outside Queen's has recently included the chairmanship of undergraduate studies in Physics.

Prof. W.R. Lederman honoured by Victoria

Prof. William R. Lederman, first Dean of Law at Queen's, received an honorary LL.D. at a special April convocation marking the founding of the University of Victoria's Law Faculty.

He was in distinguished company. Fellow recipients were the Rt. Hon. Bora Laskin, Chief Justice of Canada; the Hon. Nathaniel T. Nemetz, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of British Columbia; and Daniel Marshall Gordon, a senior B.C. lawyer and widely known legal scholar. Dr. Lederman was chosen to give the convocation address.

Professor Lederman, Q.C., FRSC, (B.A., LL.D., Saskatchewan; B.C.L., Oxford) is a native of Saskatchewan who came to Queen's in 1959. He stepped down as Dean of Law in 1968 but stayed on as a professor who is often on 'loan' to McGill, New York University Law School, Osgoode Hall and the Centre for Research in Public Law at the University of Montreal.

The Dean of the University of Victoria's new Law Faculty, Murray Fraser, began his teaching career at Queen's. In setting up his new school, he called on Dr. Lederman as a seasoned advisor.

A new film about Queen's is in the works and should be finished in time for showing to freshmen during Orientation this fall.

The film is being made by a group of students in the Film Studies program and is being supported by donations from various organizations on campus, including the Alumni Association and the AMS. Tentatively titled Profile: Queen's, the film will be about 20 minutes long, 16 mm and in colour.

With an eye to high school students who are thinking about coming to Queen's, the film will try to offer an analysis of the role of the university in the broader community. And the filmmakers feel they have a purpose that goes beyond Queen's.

According to Mike MacMillan, the second-year student who organized the project, "In an age of financial constraints and cutbacks, and threatened tuition increases, we felt it was time for a serious questioning of what the university is doing, where it is going, and why."

Alumni Award for Excellence

Prof. Stuart Ryan, Law, is teacher of the year

Prof. H.R. Stuart Ryan, Q.C., of the Faculty of Law is the second recipient of the Alumni Award for Excellence in Teaching. The award was established in 1974 to recognize faculty members whose knowledge of their field and whose ability to impart that knowledge is clearly outstanding. The 1975 winner was Prof. William Gilbert of Mechanical Engineering.

Professor Ryan will receive a cash award of $1,000 plus a certificate of merit at the Law Faculty Convocation on Saturday afternoon, May 22. The presentation will be made by Eric G.A. Jorgensen, Sc. '49, national chairman of Queen's Alumni Association.

Professor Ryan, 66, came to Kingston in 1957 as a founding member of Queen's Faculty of Law. He had spent many years in private practice in Port Hope, Ont., where he was also chairman of the Board of Education and Mayor of the town. In addition to his teaching responsibilities, he wields tremendous 'extracurricular' influence as Chancellor of the Anglican Church of Canada (Diocese of Ontario) and a life member of the John Howard Society.

Currently, he teaches courses in Land Transactions, Criminology, Problems of Relational and Group Responsibility and Legal History. Since coming to Queen's, he has also taught seven other courses.

His nominators for the Alumni

Award — all students — referred to him as "a human encyclopaedia of the law." "His keen interest in and enthusiasm for numerous areas of the law always rub off on his students," they added, "and he encourages a high level of student participation in the teaching/learning process."

The nominators also pointed out that Stuart Ryan sets a high standard by implicitly demanding the most that each student is capable of contributing to his studies, that he assigns papers which challenge the imagination and intelligence, and that his success in motivating his students is reflected in their above-average grades and extremely low failure rate in courses he teaches.

His gifted style of communicating was described as neither patronizing nor pretentious, but logical and straight-forward always. The nominations also praised his out-of-class accessibility. "The student who enters Stuart Ryan's office is never dealt with hastily or hustled out without a full hearing. He treats each student as being his most important consideration at that particular moment."

Last year the Law Students' Society initiated the Robinson-Ryan Award, so named for "the sizeable contribution of Professor Ryan to the development of the Legal Aid Society and (his) much-appreciated advice and fostering of student participation."

In the Law Library, student consults Professor Ryan, an obliging counsellor and "a human encyclopaedia of the law", according to nominations.

Wins A.E. McRae Award

Roy Kirkpatrick, Arts '73, Med. '77, is the 1976 winner of the A.E. McRae Award in Social Engineering ($740). Founded by A.E. McRae, Sc. '14, LL.D. '54, the award is presented annually to the student who, prior to the beginning of his or her graduating year, has developed and exhibited the greatest capacity in leading the student body.

Roy, a native of Burlington, Ont., is President of the Aesculapian Society this year. Last spring he received the Tricolor Award, both for his work on the Aesculapian Society and the AMS and for his continuing involvement with Camp Outlook, a volunteer agency which he helped found so that Queen's campers can help underprivileged Kingston teenagers during the summer months.

Journal editor elected

In a return to tradition, the Queen's Journal's new editor was elected to the position. Terry Collins, a third-year Commerce student from Toronto, has held several positions on the Journal since 1973 including business manager and associate editor and is well known for his cartooning. He also served on the Alumni Fund-Raising Committee (an AMS liaison group) and made students more tradition-conscious this year through an entertaining weekly column called "Souvenirs", gleaned from the Alumni archives.

The method of selecting the editor was changed back this spring. Instead of the AMS choosing an applicant, contributing members of the Journal staff voted for publicly announced candidates. With 51 voting, Terry defeated the team of Giles Gherson and Nancy Bowes, 28-23. There has been a trend in recent years towards co-editors, and Terry succeeds one such team: Sarah Yarnell and Dan McClelland.

He hopes to gather more feedback about the Journal in future, and is setting up an editorial review board.

Campus Contrasts: The New and the Renewed

The buildings in this view of the campus, looking west from University Ave., all date from the 1960's and are a combination of brick (the Art Centre studio, left), concrete (Watson Hall, centre) and limestone (Victoria Hall, far right). This is a favourite student path from Leonard Field.

These familiar limestone landmarks line the east side of University Ave.: the Douglas Library (1924), left, Ontario Hall (1902), and Grant Hall (1904) just behind it. Though they maintain their original architectural integrity, the Library now extends several stories underground (for stacks) and Ontario Hall is being entirely renovated inside for art programs.

At the Branches

London Didn't Hibernate

The London Alumni Branch chose Valentine Day for a wine and cheese party. It was a friendly, informal evening event, hosted by Dr. Lionel Reese, Med. '48, and his wife Shirley.

A week later the Alumnae got together for a dessert and coffee party at the home of Kay Dolan, Arts '24, and her sister Margery, Arts '31. Chris (Marsh) Townsend, Arts '70, showed slides of Kenya. The alumnae also began planning a spring excursion to the Stratford Festival.

Hamilton's Hopping

The Hamilton alumni have found a reliable way to beat the winter blahs. On March 6 the Branch held a dinner and dance at The Estaminet on Burlington's lakeshore. For drinks, smorgasbord and dancing, the cost was held to $10 per person and it was first-come, first-served for the 120 tickets available.

Now that they've beaten winter, the Hamiltonians are planning to celebrate spring with a "bash" this month (May).

Kingston Warms Up Winter

The Kingston Branch was "in the family way" for a fun night on ice, March 13. The two-hour party got under way at the Jock Harty Arena at 7:30. A 50c admission fee included costume competitions for the youngsters, a display by three of Kingston's promising young figure-skaters, free-style family skating and refreshments. About 75 alumni and their children came to the party and had such a good time that more family-style entertainment may be offered in future.

The Peter Plan for California Grads

Queen's alumni joined graduates of other Canadian universities on March 12 to hear Prof. Lawrence J. Peter address the third annual reunion of the Canadian Universities Associated Alumni of Southern California.

Thousands of readers have made "Parkinson's Law" and "The Peter Principle" part of their vocabularies, but few realize that the genial satirist was born and raised in Vancouver, studied in the Department of Education at UBC, and was a professor there until moving to Los Angeles in 1967 to teach at the University of Southern California (USC). Dr. Peter recently published a new book called The Peter Plan.

The alumni met with him over drinks and snacks at USC's Town and Gown lounge. The annual reunion is organized by the Canadian Consulate General in Los Angeles. Last year's guest of honour was Queen's graduate Lorne Greene.

Washington Up to Date

Dr. D. H. Connor, Med. '53, and Mrs. Connor (Norma Miller), Arts '53, invited members of the Washington Branch to a reception and buffet supper at their home in Chevy Chase, Maryland, on April 10.

Special guests from Kingston were the Director of Alumni Affairs, Murray Gill, and his wife, who brought the alumni and other friends of Queen's up to date on campus news.

Kingston Award to RMC

For the first time, the annual Kingston Award for outstanding service to both Queen's and the community has been made to an institution rather than an individual. On May 3 the Kingston Branch saluted a brother university, Royal Military College, on its 100th anniversary. The award was presented by Past President Mrs. Kay Slack, Arts '40, to RMC's Commandant, Brig.-General Turner, at a reception held in Wallace Hall.

Montreal Medal to Artist

The Montreal Medal was awarded to André C. Bieler, LL.D. '69, Emeritus Professor of Fine Art, at a reception held April 24 at the Beaconsfield Golf Club in Pointe Claire. The medal has been awarded annually since 1939 to "Makers of Queen's" — men and women who have made meritorious contributions to the honour of the University.

André Bieler, once Queen's artist-in-residence, is a member of the Royal Canadian Academy and an artist of great versatility and international renown. His outstanding contribution to Queen's was his conception and early direction of the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, which now enjoys national distinction and federal support.

Letters

Toronto, Ont.

Dear Editor:

As one of a sizeable number of graduates earning my keep within the advertising process, I take umbrage with the fact that the President of the Alumni Association thinks it necessary to apologize because the Review has decided to accept paid advertising messages.

Advertising is a legitimate and legal process of communication used by many organizations, large and small, including Queen's University, to both inform and to sell. In addition, many fine publications have grown and flourished with the help of advertising.

The concern should be with the type of advertising accepted and carried and not with the fact of acceptance itself.

J.N. MILNE, Sc. '35,
Managing Director,
Institute of Canadian Advertising

Toronto, Ont.,

Dear Madam:

When I received the March-April issue of the Alumni Review I was delighted to see that you devoted a number of pages to the splendid exhibit "From Women's Eyes".

As you have doubtless been informed, the exhibit did, at the last minute, travel from Queen's. It was exhibited in the main Ontario Government office complex at Queen's Park, Toronto. This last-minute arrangement was the direct result of the Globe and Mail art critic, Kay Kritzwiser's, comment to the effect that the exhibit was very worthwhile, of particular interest to women — but would not travel from Queen's.

Laura Sabia, Chairman of the Ontario Status of Women Council, considered this was a dreadful waste of effort! The exhibit was obviously unique. She immediately wrote to the Minister of Government Services, the Hon. Mrs. Margaret Scrivener, suggesting that the exhibit be brought to Toronto, to Queen's Park, as soon as the Harold Town Retrospective Exhibit closed. Mrs. Scrivener must have acted immediately on the request: only a very few weeks later "From Women's Eyes" opened — and was every bit as impressive as Miss Kritzwiser had suggested.

MARY (LAZIER) CORBETT, Arts '63,
M.A. '69,
Executive Officer,
Ontario Status of Women Council

(Editor's Note: The Review is pleased to admit that the conclusion of the article "From Women's Eyes" proved to be in error. Through the encouragement mentioned above and the generous co-operation of the lenders, the exhibit was on view from Feb. 25 through March 28 in the Macdonald Block, Queen's Park.)

Dr. P.T. McIlroy at 84: a colorful career recalled

On his 84th birthday last October, Dr. Patrick T. McIlroy, M.B. '16, M.D. C.M. '21, was able to look back on almost 60 years of medicine. According to the New Hampshire Sunday News, he wished his children "nothing finer than to have lived as colorful a life as he has." (One of his children is Dr. Richard McIlroy, Med. '46.)

Dr. McIlroy was born near Poland, Ont. and attended schools in Kingston, although most of his adult life has been spent in the United States, where he is licensed to practice in three states: New Hampshire, New York and Connecticut. In February 1915 he joined the Canadian Army Medical Corps as a member of the Queen's University dressers, and was on the high seas in March when Germany declared submarine warfare. By 1916 he was a Captain. Once in England, he was detailed to work as a lab technician in a Red Cross hospital quartered on the estate of Lord Astor. There he met both his wife and Sir William Osler, whom he describes after working with him as "one of the greatest physicians since Hippocrates".

One of his postwar appointments was as pathologist at Sing Sing "in the days of Two-Gun Crowley, Murder, Inc. and many others who were household names at the time." Dr. McIlroy became a diplomate of the American Board of Pathology in 1952. He has been in Danbury, N.H., since 1970, but illness forced his 'early retirement' when he was barely 81. Among the patients he recalls treating are singer Marian Anderson, LL.D. '62, actress Elizabeth Taylor's father, and Boris Karloff, "who needed a blood count."

Dr. Wilfred Pocock and his two careers

"My heart fills with gratitude that I lived long enough to see some dreams come true." That was one of the reactions of Dr. Wilfred Pocock, Med. '19, to his 80th birthday last September, a milestone celebrated by friends and well-wishers at the Emsdale Community Hall in Ontario's Muskoka district.

Dr. Pocock practised medicine over a 2,000-square-mile rural area in the east Parry Sound and northeast Muskoka districts for 50 years after his overseas medical service. He was saluted at the community party as one of the last of the dedicated horse-and-buggy (and snowshoe, sleigh and paddle) doctors. He now lives in Huntsville, Ont.

He has had a parallel career as a writer, and the Douglas Library has been the grateful recipient of his books, manuscripts and other literary records. His latest work is an historical novel, The Three Gifts, seven years in the writing and four in translation to French as Le Rêve Impossible. The French edition, which was recently recommended by the Library Association of Paris, is distributed by Librairie Dussault, 8955 Blvd. St-Laurent, Montreal, Que. H2N 1M6.

HELP OUR HANDS ARE TIED

There are many times when Queen's alumni come into the Alumni Office in the Students' Union looking for a friend's or classmate's address — sometimes to pay them a visit or to circulate a newsletter, or round up the class for a special reunion. Our job is to help as much as possible with the organization of such newsletters and reunions, but our hands are tied if we simply don't know where a graduate or former student has moved.

As soon as mail is returned from a particular address, our records are checked against the relevant telephone book, Might's City Directory, or professional directory (engineers, lawyers, teachers, etc.). If these sources fail to provide the new address, the Addressograph plate of that individual is pulled from the active files and placed in a "Lost Trails" file. Then we begin writing to whatever friends or relatives an alumnus has listed with us at the time of graduation. Despite these efforts, there are still many alumni we haven't been able to trace.

Over the next few months, we plan to publish names of Lost Trails in the hope that you may recognize an old friend and help put us back in touch. In addition, we would like to make a special appeal to all alumni to remember us when you mail notices of address changes.

You may be interested to know that for the next few months we will be converting our alumni files to computer tape. This will mean that in future any changes or additions to your records will need to be entered only once to change all the files in the office. Under the present system, we have four separate files that require updating when new information arrives. We keep track of every time your name is mentioned in the notes in the Review, every time you make a donation to Queen's, and we maintain a carded list of every graduate, dead, living, or lost, as well as the active file used for mailing the Review, Branch notices, class newsletters, Fund appeals, etc.

Not only will data entry be easier, but data retrieval as well. To help with this conversion, we will be hiring Queen's students for the summer. From September on, we will be testing and transferring all procedures to this new system. We anticipate a smooth transfer, but we will need your help and may also need your patience during the change-over period.

It's kind of nice to stand out.

Which is what Carrington Canadian does. But for many more good reasons than merely the look of the bottle. Carrington is distilled in small batches, aged and mellowed in seasoned oak casks; it's light in look and smooth in taste. Carrington, it's special, and, in our opinion, like no other whisky in the world.

A whisky of outstanding quality.

REPORT OF THE CHAIRMAN

The Annual Alumni Fund for 1975-76 has closed, and I am pleased to announce that the Fund not only moved ahead again, but set a new giving record of $217,795. The Fund Committee regards this strong response as a true vote of confidence in Queen's and the leadership provided by Principal Watts and members of faculty.

Though overall participation declined slightly this year, success was assured by the large number of alumni who made first-time or increased gifts and by the volunteers who organized the Alumni Telethons in Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa. They built on the sustaining core of the Alumni Fund — the 930 graduates who made individual contributions of $100 or more as members of Queen's Cha Gheill Society and the 800 members of our growing Regular Annual Donors Program. Our aim is to maintain this upward trend of the Fund in future — a task which will require the help of all Queen's alumni.

I ask every member of the Queen's family to support our programs of voluntary giving to the University. Modest gifts provide most of the funds we receive, and many more are needed.

On behalf of Queen's and the Alumni Association, I wish to express warmest thanks to the 5300 Queen's men and women whose help in 1975-76 enabled us to report a new high in annual giving.

QUEEN'S

COVER: Gerald S. Graham, Arts '24, confessed to friends his two dreams about Queen's: receiving an honorary degree (which he did May 21) and appearing on the cover of the Review (which he now does). It has been said of Dr. Graham that "there are few historians of empire in the English-speaking world who have not been influenced, personally and directly, by him." And who influenced the Sudbury boy who went on to grace the most influential chair of Imperial History in the Commonwealth? The six Queen's men who share his 'honorary cover': (top to bottom) Professor R.G. Trotter, W.A. Mackintosh, Duncan McArthur, O.D. Skelton, W.E. McNeill and J.O. Morison. The Person behind the Professor

"Far too frequently," points out author KATHLEEN GRAHAM, "when great figures like Dr. Neatby die, few personal recollections are printed to secure for posterity their personal characteristics." To remedy this situation, Mrs. Graham here presents some reminiscences drawn from her warm 30-year friendship with Hilda Neatby.

Kathleen Graham, B.A. (Man.), M.A. (Sask.), is married to Prof. W. Roger Graham, head of the History Department at Queen's. She has been a journalist for many years, specializing in book reviews (The Regina Leader-Post for 20 years, The Globe and Mail for five years). She has contributed talks to the CBC's Points West program and is now awaiting publication of her biography of Ada Leverson, Wilde's Disciple.

Apart from her keen intellect, her most salient feature was that she never gave up and therefore, as she grew older, she perceived precious qualities in life which, denied her in youth, were now hers. "One of the most wonderful things about being my age," she told me as she neared 70, "is that I can give my love to everyone and no one minds."

As a young woman it would have been unthinkable, if not impossible, for Hilda Neatby to say "I love you" to a man. She would not have thought it proper unless he had first declared his and, given her formidable intellectual capacity, no man, apparently, dared. Indeed, proper was one of her favorite words. I discussed many social problems with her over the years and invariably, whether it was over the best way to return an informal cup of coffee with a hospitable neighbour or the seating arrangements for a head table at a formal dinner, she would exclaim, when we arrived at what seemed to her the best solution, "That would be perfectly proper."

Her long years as schoolmistress had made her conscious of the pursuit of excellence, and etiquette was only one manifestation of her desire to attain it in all things. Teaching had also ingrained the habit of criticism deeply within her, and this reached its finest pitch with So Little for the Mind. So deeply embedded had this habit become, however, that she often spoke thoughtlessly of the personal appearance of some of our many friends.

On one occasion, at a meeting of the Learned Societies, I mentioned to her that I noticed that a middle-aged colleague of hers had adopted the current fashion of hair styles for men and was wearing his greying locks very long. "Yes, he looked perfectly dreadful. I should have liked to take the scissors to him," she snapped.

At these same meetings she drew my attention to a rather unusual costume worn by a young woman — a costume which Hilda did not regard as quite proper. Since this same young woman had told me just the day before that she thought Dr. Neatby had one of the most beautiful faces she had ever seen, I countered Hilda's criticism by repeating this compliment to her. She was most chagrined, and performed an act of contrition at the first opportunity by recounting the story, without using any names, as a good joke on herself.

Piety with humour

As a staunch Presbyterian, she was devout in the finest sense of the word. Faith was not a sentimental talisman, but the robust belief of her forefathers. Thus to be guilty of a lack of charity was, for her, sin. She was a faithful attender at Sunday services and she taught Sunday school, as her mother had before her, for years. She bore the hallmark of true piety, and an understanding of Christian ethics governed her speech and actions.

After we built our house on the banks of the St. Lawrence River, she could hardly wait to visit us since she took a great interest, not only in us, but in our way of life. She arrived in early June just as a patch of strawberries, which I was cultivating on our tile bed, had begun to ripen. She was overjoyed at this sight because she was fond of fruit. The first morning of her stay I arose early, picked the sole berry which had ripened, and placed it on a plate at her place at the breakfast table. It was a perfect berry — bright red and so large that it resembled a plum. When she glimpsed its lone magnificence Hilda's eyes shone, and, as she sat down, she made a little speech. "If, when I go back to Saskatoon, I am asked how I was used at the Grahams, I shall say that they did not have much to give me but they gave me all they had."

With all her piety her sense of humour refused to remain dormant. She did not teach formally in the church during her few years in Kingston but helped, instead, in small ways. For example, she participated in a group discussion with some of the young people before she left and she learned that this group, filled with evangelical fervour, was willing to do housework to raise money. She hired them on the spot to come and shampoo her carpets and generally clean up her apartment before her departure. After they had done the job, she told me with great satisfaction, "I have been cleaned by the Jesus people."

She followed the old adage that cleanliness was next to godliness, and was deeply hurt when a woman from whom she had sublet an apartment in Regina one time expressed dissatisfaction with the one thing she had neglected to do. Since she had laboured long and hard, doing the work herself, Hilda was provoked to hear her landlady complain that she had not dusted the tops of the doors.

For students — books, not candy

A kind of righteous indignation mingled with her sense of injustice, for she was very forthright. She could be angry, and show it, when she chose. During her last years at the University of Saskatchewan she became increasingly incensed with the way in which the university bookstore was being managed. She took exception to the entire policy governing its management, from the type of books ordered to the way in which they were displayed, and her wrath overflowed when, at Christmas time, the bookstore stocked boxes of chocolates and even shirts for sale. What she wanted was a greater variety of books to tempt the students and enlarge their knowledge. She told the bookstore manager so in no uncertain terms, using language quite uncharacteristic of her but which she deemed appropriate. I was surprised and shocked; this was a side of her I had not known existed. I accepted it only when I remembered Dr. Johnson's adage that if an educated man was in company where nothing but runts were understood, then he would have to talk to the assembly in terms of runts.

DR. HILDA NEATBY, F.R.S.C., Companion of the Order of Canada, M.A. (Sask.), Ph.D. (Minn.), LL.D. (Toronto, Brock, Windsor, New Brunswick), was Professor of History at Queen's when she died last year. Distinguished scholar, teacher and writer, she was perhaps best known as an eminent historian and long-time head of History at the University of Saskatchewan. She came to Queen's in 1970 to write a new history of the University, a work left incomplete by her death on May 15, 1975, at the age of 71. The book will be completed during the next year by her confrère, Prof. F.W. Gibson.

Sherry with Jane Austen

Hospitable to the core, Hilda did most of her cooking herself when she entertained. The first time she asked us to dinner, more than a quarter of a century ago, she gave us boiled chicken and apple pie. She was living then in a tiny apartment with her aged mother, whom she tended with loving care until her death, and this was their standard Sunday dinner. As I recall, nothing but after-dinner coffee was served to drink. From this modest root our friendship grew, and a whole host of dinner parties, growing ever more lavish with our salaries, flourished. Hilda became something of a gourmet cook, presenting us with chicken cordon bleu and fantastic desserts crammed with strawberries and nuts and glorified with whipped cream. We all found we enjoyed a modest glass of sherry and a sip of wine with these feasts. We confessed our tendency toward liquor shyly to each other, fearful of mutual disapproval, but found our way to it via, of all people, Jane Austen.

I stumbled on Hilda's great knowledge and love of the novelist quite by chance. Offering her a glass of sherry, I happened to remark that, perhaps like the valitudinarian Mr. Woodhouse in Emma, she would enjoy it on purely medicinal grounds. Right away her sense of fun surfaced. "No indeed, Kay," she was quick to point out "Mr. Woodhouse would take merely a small half-glassful of sherry, whereas I would like a full one."

From this chance opening I learned that she enjoyed all of the Austen books but that Emma was her favourite. Every time she had a cold, she said, she retired to bed, drank hot lemonade and read Emma. Two days of this treatment, she declared, and she was usually well enough to carry on again. The result was that she knew Emma backwards and forwards and could quote appropriate excerpts at all times. During a course I took on 18th century English literature, she literally undertook to teach me the novel. She did so, not formally, but casually over the dinner table conversation. How we laughed! We were selfish in our pleasure, for we were a triumvirate and my husband came, without ever reading the story, to have an intimate knowledge of it more or less forced down his throat with the food we served him.

At other times our dinners included a larger company, and Hilda was always pleased if a dinner partner had been secured for her. During one of her winters in Kingston, a visiting professor from Oxford was sometimes with us. One night, when he called for her at the Simcoe apartments where she stayed, an inspiration struck him while he waited for her in the lobby. For some reason a dressmaker's dummy stood in the corner. Plain brown papier-mâché covered its wire form, but otherwise it was unadorned except for the measurements written loud and clear across the bust. When Hilda came down in the elevator, he was waltzing with Ethel, as by then he called the dummy, around the rotunda. Filled with the spirit of mischief, these two learned academics brought the wretched dummy to our house for dinner that night and Ethel proved the life of the party. Mysteriously, when the time came to sit down to the table, Ethel was in the seat of honour. And so it went.

Love lavished on Saskatchewan

This was only one of a countless series of dinners which, because of our attendance at the Learned Societies, reached from Vancouver to St. John's. At this latter city Hilda was responsible for gathering together the old Saskatchewan hands. We did not know that within four short years she would be gone as we met for an early six o'clock dinner in a waterfront restaurant and sat down with considerable hilarity in the bright sunshine. However, by seven o'clock the sky had clouded over. Just as the poet had described it, the fog had come creeping in the gap, and before we left the rain had begun. This was one of the last, and best, of our great dinners.

Wherever Hilda went she collected friends from her home province around her. She came to Saskatchewan from England at the age of two, and she loved her province with an abiding fervour. She lavished on its people the love which another woman might give her mate. Once, in London, she told a former student to call a few young people they both knew, and she would take them to dinner. She mentioned the name of an expensive restaurant, assuming they would be three or four. Instead, the zealous student, anxious to prove his worth and her popularity, assembled ten or more. Hilda, though surprised, chose to be gratified and paid the cheque without flinching.

Like many people who carry large thoughts in their heads, she was careless of her small ones. From the keys to her safety deposit box to her manuscripts, items were invariably mislaid. The stories of the fusses which arose are legion. For me, during the months I assisted her with research for her history of Queen's University, these were fraught with a certain terror. Knowing that she was soon to leave the city and complete her manuscript in Saskatoon, she scooped up, in her practical way, some of her good but not-too-worn clothing and various other things which she wished to donate to the Salvation Army. I called to help her with her baggage and drive her to the depot. To my consternation, piled in her hallway, there were, in addition to the customary articles one gives, an old empty brief case for charity; a full brief case and extra scraps of manuscript designated for delivery to Queen's.

The trip was a nightmare. The many parcels, armfuls of clothing, dual briefcases and loose pages of the Queen's history complicated the expedition to an extent which the frequent upsets about forgotten keys, purses and bits of manuscript on other occasions did not. However, I packed the car carefully, and after the empty briefcase and the other donations had been deposited with the Salvation Army, was ready for her barrage of questions about the location of "the briefcase" and loose pages of manuscript.

Another absent-minded professor

She was not only forgetful but, like so many professors, absent-minded, and on her last visit to Kingston she told us a most amusing joke on herself. She arrived fresh from Windsor where her old friend, Dr. Francis Leddy, had invited her to receive an honorary degree and to speak at Convocation. The ceremony was to take place outdoors and, as she strode across the campus to the dais, clutching her speech in her right hand, her companion reminded her to hold down her mortar board lest she lose it in the brisk wind that was blowing. Thoughtlessly Hilda reached for her mortar board, releasing the pages of her speech and scattering them to the four winds. As she attained the dais she remarked ruefully to Dr. Leddy that she was afraid she had lost her text. "Never mind, Hilda," consoled the man who had been her Dean of Arts at Saskatchewan for years. "Knowing you, I took the precaution of placing an extra copy of your remarks in my briefcase and it is right here ready for you."

This was her last Convocation, for she died on May 14, 1975, at the very time she had been scheduled to address the one then being held at the University of New Brunswick.

The truth, embroidered

There are others who will write about, and analyze, the speeches she gave on these and other occasions. All I have wanted to do is to secure for posterity a few reminiscences of my greatest friend who, as I helped her unpack upon her arrival in Kingston, gave me, in a characteristic gesture of spontaneous generosity, a tea cozy which had belonged to her mother.

Over a large, padded puff of purple satin, a simple brown linen cover had been placed. Figures of two women, dressed in hoop skirts and drinking tea together, had been embroidered on one side in simple cross-stitch. Who was the needlewoman? Hilda did not tell me and I did not think to ask because, well as I knew her, I did not know then that she had done quantities of embroidery and other handwork. Moreover, my eye had been taken by the verse cross-stitched on the other side:

*Two old friends
And a cup of tea;
One of them you
And one of them me.*

all miners,

Forty- Niners

A rather unusual luncheon club exists at Queen's. It is composed of retired engineering graduates who attended Queen's at least 49 years ago. It meets once a month, has no officers and no dues, no rules or guidelines, no program — and no discussion of religion or politics. What the Forty-Niners do have is good fellowship over good food.

The group had its beginnings one day in early March 1965. Four retired Queen's graduates — Prof. Harry Harkness, Sc. '13, Prof. Arthur Jackson, Sc. '16, Frank Smail, Sc. '14, and Neil (Pat) Stewart, Sc. 15 — were having lunch together and conversation turned to the good times at Queen's during the early "teen" years. Out of their reminiscences grew the idea of forming a club of retired engineers who had attended Queen's at least 49 years previously and meeting once a month informally for lunch.

All four felt it was a good idea. They obtained a list of the retired engineering alumni in the Kingston area, and everyone contacted was also enthusiastic. The original four then made arrangements for the first luncheon, which was held in the Students' Union on April 1, 1965.

Along with the four "founding fathers", the following were present: Ed Baker, Sc. '15; Doug Bews, Sc. '14; John Bonham, Sc. '15; Jack Calvin, Sc. '06; Red (J.W.) Dougherty, Sc. '14; Bill Holdcroft, Sc. '20; Prof. Doug Jemmett, Sc. '13; Hubert Rogers, Sc. '13; Harvey Smail, Sc. '14; Lorne Taylor, Sc. '13; Ray Smith, Sc. '15; and Prof. Maurice Wood, Sc. '14. Of this original group, only five survive: Hubert Rogers, Frank and Harvey Smail, Ray Smith and Professor Wood.

Although time has taken its toll, new members are taken on as they become eligible. Enthusiasm is strong, and each month 15 to 20 members are present. In addition to the five originals, the Forty-Niners' current membership includes Ron Adams, Bob Basserman, Jim Campbell, Jim Clark, Cec Climo, Dick Cohen, Hugh Conn, Herb Dickey, John Donnelly, Bob Dunsmore, Cliff Gibson, Pete King, Ian MacLachlan, Don MacPherson, Charlie Miller, Bruce Murphy, Phil Roy, Bob Seright, Harold Stewart, George Wilson, Doug Geiger, Dick Harkness, Bill Beaton, Logan Gallaher and Bill Taylor.

The members meet on the first Thursday of the month every month of the year, have a good lunch, socialize for an hour or so and go home. They consider it a pleasant means of maintaining old friendships and making new ones.

About two years ago the luncheons moved from the McLaughlin Room in the Union across campus to the Faculty Club. The group remains informal. At each luncheon, someone is detailed to act as host for the next. His job is mostly to call on each member, find out if he will be present, and collect the payment for lunch.

Any of the members listed would enjoy hearing from other engineering alumni in the area who were registered in 1927 or earlier. Visitors are also welcome.

Professor Wood points out that engineers who registered during the year the Forty-Niners were founded (1965) are invited to lunch in 2014. Those who graduate this spring, however, will just have to be patient until 2041.

The Golden Gaels have a new coach

J.W.D. (Doug) Hargreaves, Arts '60, was a Golden Gael himself and has coached at Queen's and RMC. He was professor and coach at Dalhousie when "called home" to Queen's as Frank Tindall's successor.

Doug Hargreaves is coming home. He has been named Queen's University's new football coach, succeeding his own former coach, Frank Tindall.

"The University is delighted to have Mr. Hargreaves as coach," the Principal said in making the April announcement. "His excellent teaching ability, wide knowledge of football and high standards of achievement applied to himself and his players will make him a valuable asset to Queen's. We are very glad to have him back."

Doug Hargreaves, 43, a graduate of Queen's (Arts '60) and a former Golden Gael, has been head football coach at Dalhousie University since 1972, while on the university staff as Director of Men's Intercollegiate Athletics (1972-74) and Co-ordinator of Athletics and Recreation (1974-75). He received his M.A. in Science and Physical Education from Dalhousie last fall.

His coaching career began while he was still a Queen's student and took a job coaching football and basketball teams at Kingston's Regiopolis College.

As a secondary school teacher in Sault Ste. Marie, 1960-62, he was assistant football coach and head basketball coach at Sault Collegiate.

Queen's new coach also has to his credit a total of 14 years with the Canadian Armed Forces, the first few years as an aircrew captain and the remainder in athletic capacities at R.M.C., Kingston, Shearwater base in Nova Scotia, and Trenton, Ont. As Staff Officer of Physical Education and Recreation at Trenton, 1971-72, he supervised programs in the Armed Forces from coast to coast and organized competitive sports programs at all military bases in Ontario.

During these years Doug Hargreaves held, in addition, senior coaching positions at Queen's (assistant football coach, 1962-63, 1971-72), at R.M.C. (head football coach, 1965-70, and head basketball coach, 1967-70), and Dalhousie University (assistant football coach, 1970-71).

He also found time to write a book, Canadian Forces Football Clinic. He begins with a chapter on the prevention of athletic injuries through proper conditioning programs and the selection of equipment for maximum safety, and goes on to cover a wide range of football techniques.

"Doug Hargreaves' philosophy toward intercollegiate athletics," says Frank Tindall, "is that the players should be prepared to make the necessary sacrifices to achieve success, be worthy representatives of their university, and appreciate the fact that athletics are supplemental to academic requirements."

"He has always been a dedicated and avid student of the game (football), keeping abreast of trends in both offence and defence," the Old Coach adds. "I have known him for 20 years, as a player, as an associate at Queen's, and then as head coach of R.M.C. and Dalhousie, and in my opinion he will make an excellent coach at Queen's."

"I'm glad to see him back where he belongs."

"For Distinguished Service to Queen's...."

At its annual meeting on Friday, May 28, the University Council paid tribute through its Distinguished Service Awards to four men whose contributions to Queen's have been outstanding. The following four recipients also became honorary Life Members of the University Council.

ROBERT LIONEL DUNSMORE, M.C., B.Sc. (Queen's), D.C.S. (Laval), F.E.I.C., has been associated with Queen's University for 65 years. His particular combination of wise counsel and generosity ensure that his influence will persist for decades to come.

Dr. Dunsmore came to Queen's as a freshman in 1911. While earning his degree as a Civil Engineer, he found time to play football, head the Engineering Society and manage Technical Supplies, the budding campus bookstore. With many of his classmates he went overseas with the Royal Canadian Engineers. He attained both the Military Cross and the rank of Major. World War II found him in the Navy, a Commander and Director of Fuel.

Between wars and until his retirement in 1958, he was part of the petroleum industry in Canada and Peru. His retirement led to several 'new careers', most notably five years (1958-63) as Chairman of the CBC.

Meanwhile, Commander Dunsmore was earning the rank of 'General' in the service of Queen's. He was first nominated to the Board of Trustees in 1953 and served six consecutive terms before retiring in 1974. It was his keen engineer's interest in the physical campus that promoted the formation of the Campus Planning Committee. After eight years as its dynamic co-chairman, he remains an active member and a prime mover of Project Green.

Bob Dunsmore has received many awards, both military and civil, and in the words of his Montreal Alumni Medal is "a maker of Queen's". As the trees burst into bloom along University Avenue's Dunsmore Project, the time seems right to salute this elder statesman of Queen's for a lifetime of service and support.

NORMAN DONALD GARAND, M.D. '40, is a medical graduate of distinction and a loyal, long-time friend of his alma mater. He was one of those concerned and far-sighted men who banded together in 1949 to found the Friends of Queen's University, Inc., a charitable foundation which charged itself with facilitating and promoting the cause of Queen's with benefactions from United States sources.

The results achieved by these good 'Friends' may be seen on campus in research equipment, books and buildings and measured through lectureships, scholarships, bursaries and special grants aimed at fostering international understanding. This remarkable success has been due in large measure to the tireless efforts of Dr. Garand. In his 27-year association with the foundation, he has been a charter member, first Secretary-Treasurer and, since 1972, President.

At the same time, he has been a busy surgeon. After a post-graduate stint in the RCAF, he moved to New York City and pursued his practice in Manhattan, Richmond, and a division of Brooklyn's Maimonides Medical Center. In 1962 he and some fellow physicians founded a private 150-bed hospital on Staten Island. He is still its Director of Surgery and president of the corporation.

In 1965 the New York Society of Queen's University saluted his service through its prestigious New York Medal. Now the University Council is pleased to reach across the border in Bicentennial Year to recognize his important and faithful support of scholars and scholarship at Queen's.

(A feature about the Council's 1976 theme, 'Focus on Trade-Offs', is planned for the next issue of the Review.)

H. R. STUART RYAN, Q.C., B.A. (Toronto), came to Queen's in 1957 as a founding member of the present Faculty of Law, and his presence since has been a well-spring of scholarship and service to the University and the community.

He came to the campus as a former Mayor of Port Hope, the town where he had practised law — with a six-year interruption for World War II — since being called to the Bar of Ontario in 1933.

Quickly taking up the call to service in his new setting, Professor Ryan involved himself in the John Howard Society (which granted him life membership in 1970) and in the Ontario Diocese of the Anglican Church, of which he is Chancellor. Nationally he has been an articulate proponent of church union; locally he was a key instigator of Queen's Student Legal Aid Society, established in 1970. He has also served the campus community by putting his knowledge of grievance procedures at the service of the Senate. By consistently publishing articles and organizing seminars of high calibre, he has generated wide interest in Queen's Faculty of Law and greatly enhanced its stature in the legal and academic community.

We honour him, too, as a superior professor of law — one who recently earned the acclaim of his peers and students through the Alumni Award for Excellence in Teaching. He is known for his outstanding integrity, deep compassion and encyclopedic knowledge, and is always supremely generous with his time.

The University Council takes deep satisfaction in honouring a teacher whose devotion goes far beyond duty and whose qualities of mind and heart are an example and a challenge.

FRANK TINDALL, A.B., P.H.E. (Syracuse), in 29 years as head football and basketball coach at Queen's, made an outstanding contribution to university life and to sports in the country he adopted so wholeheartedly.

He first came to coach just before the outbreak of war suspended intercollegiate football. When he returned in 1948, it was to become as much a fixture of the Queen's scene as Grant Hall itself.

His football statistics are impressive. His teams played 197 games, won 111, outscored their opponents 3572 points to 2972, and won eight championships, including the national College Bowl in 1968. Since intercollegiate football was established in 1898, fully half the Queen's players have competed under this one man's able coaching.

Many honours have come his way. He is acknowledged as a leader of men, a living force for good by example, a gentleman who by practice and precept inspired sportsmanlike conduct in all the young people he taught and coached with unfailing good humour. To mark his retirement there was an enormously moving testimonial dinner, sparked by the many professional players he sent out from Queen's. He has been variously honoured in intercollegiate leagues, has seen a trophy in his name presented at the College Bowl, been chosen for Kingston's 1975 Achievement Award, and had a playing field named after him on the Queen's campus.

One of his players once reflected that "football", "Queen's" and "Frank Tindall" were three perfect synonyms. To those, the University Council gratefully adds the words "distinguished service".

Along with final exams and Convocation, spring at Queen's brings another tradition, one in which final-year engineering students consolidate their brotherhood and celebrate their new profession through the ceremony of the Iron Ring. The actual ritual is a secret guarded by those who have participated in it.

The ring, which has become the internationally recognized badge of the engineer educated or working in Canada, is worn on the little finger of the working hand.

In February and March, two articles about the Iron Ring were published at Queen's. Subsequently, their authenticity was questioned by a senior engineer who was involved in the original negotiations from which the so-called Kipling Ritual was derived. To put the history of the Iron Ring on record, the Review presents the following letter by E. A. Allcut, Professor Emeritus of Mechanical Engineering at the University of Toronto and now a resident of Pointe Claire, Que.

Here is the true story behind the Kipling Ritual and the Engineers' mysterious IRON RING CEREMONY

"As far as I am aware, the idea of the Iron Ring ceremony originated with my colleague, Prof. H.E.T. Haultain, who was then head of the Department of Mining Engineering at the University of Toronto. He was a great friend of mine and a very wise man.

"The inauguration of the idea and its implementation, as far as I can remember, took place between the years 1929 and 1930. As I had arrived in Canada from England in 1921 and also was a great admirer of Rudyard Kipling's works, Haultain sought my opinion and advice regarding the inauguration of a ceremony for the initiation of engineers, comparable with the administration of the Hippocratic Oath to young doctors when they enter the medical profession.

"I thought that this was a good suggestion, and the idea of asking Kipling to write the ritual was discussed. While we were rather doubtful about the outcome, we thought that, as both Kipling and Haultain were Sussex men, something might come of it. Rather to our surprise, Kipling thought well of the idea and agreed to write a suitable ritual.

"I followed the correspondence throughout and noted the importance attached by Kipling to 'hammered iron' and the idea that permeates books such as Puck of Pooks Hill and Rewards and Fairies. For this reason, I am inclined to doubt the statement in the Queen's articles that the first rings were made of cast iron from the St. Lawrence River Bridge. The rings used had hammer marks on the outside, and cast iron is somewhat alien to that sort of treatment. I have never before heard that story about the iron from the bridge and it would be interesting to know where it came from.

"The First Iron Ring Ceremony

took place in about 1929-30 and that was the beginning of Camp No. 1. (Queen's is Camp No. 3.) It took place in Convocation Hall at the University of Toronto. I was among the first initiates, and several of the Hydro-Electric Engineers of Ontario took the oath at the same time. Shortly thereafter, the first student graduates were initiated after their graduation at Toronto.

"Also, Kipling stipulated originally that the oath should be taken, in the first place, only by engineers of the British Commonwealth. As I had been appointed Joint Secretary (with Professor Durley of McGill) for the summer meeting in Canada of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, I arranged for the initiation of the President and some other members of the Institution at the University of Toronto, in 1932. They also became members of Camp 1. This is the true story.

"I WAS THERE."

Library recognized as North American resource

The Douglas Library and its branch system have received formal recognition as one of North America's major research resources.

In May, Queen's accepted an invitation to join the Association of Research Libraries (ARL), an organization of 94 major scholarly libraries in the United States and Canada.

"Queen's is greatly honoured by the invitation," says Principal Watts. "In spite of continued financial constraints, the library has shown itself able to maintain its high scholastic endeavour."

Membership in the ARL is based on the library's resources for scholarly research. These are measured by such items as volumes held and annually added, the number of current periodicals received, and fields of doctoral research catered to, as well as the number of Ph.D. degrees awarded annually by the university. Queen's library system now holds more than 1,150,000 volumes and receives more than 10,400 current serials. The University offers doctorates in 26 fields of study and awarded 74 Ph.D.'s in 1975.

Other members of ARL include such giant libraries as the Library of Congress and the libraries of Harvard and Yale Universities. There are six other Canadian members: the universities of Alberta, British Columbia, Toronto, McGill and McMaster, as well as the National Library of Canada.

Last year 74 doctoral students in 26 fields used the Douglas Library and its 21 branch, faculty and departmental units. The Queen's system now holds about 1,150,000 volumes.

Variety and convenience added to Spring courses

In addition to its intensive six-week Spring Session courses, the Department of Extension is offering eight others which span a 12-week period.

According to Ross Wardle, Director of Extension, the six-week term allows students to earn university credits more rapidly, but courses are limited to the lecture format. "The 12-week period gives time for more reading, discussion and seminars," he says. "Material of a greater complexity can be covered at a more advanced level this way."

The Spring-Summer Evening Session, as it is called, began on May 5 and runs till the end of July. The regular Spring Term (May 5-June 22) offered 42 courses. The cost of courses in either category is $120 each.

"We have never had such a wide variety of classes during winter, spring and summer," Mr. Wardle comments. "Students clearly can earn a degree on a year-round, part-time basis."

Fall Convocation

The University Senate has announced that Fall Convocation will take place on Saturday, Oct. 30. There will be two ceremonies, morning and afternoon. Details will be announced.

Art Conservation group in permanent quarters

The Master of Art Conservation Program has been officially welcomed to its new permanent quarters — the upper level of the extension to the Agnes Etherington Art Centre (see March-April Review). The dedication was made by Jennifer McQueen, Deputy Director of the Canadian Conservation Institute of the National Museums Corporation. Prof. Ian Hodkinson is head of the Queen's program, which is unique in Canada.

In it, graduate students learn how to restore works of art, how to handle paintings, sculpture and other artifacts for packaging, shipping, storage and display, and how environmental factors affect conservation.

According to Ms. McQueen, "Canada desperately needs the highly trained conservators and conservation scientists who will be coming out of the Queen's program."

"People are visiting museums and galleries in numbers as never before," she says, "and we face an enormous backlog in the field of conservation. We have neglected the objects representing our cultural heritage so badly in the past that we have lost some entirely, others have been damaged beyond repair, and still more are in need of the most urgent attention."

"The demand for public displays brings increased wear and tear upon works of art and artifacts. For example, under the National Museums Policy, we are taking displays into areas where there are no museums or galleries — to the outports of Newfoundland by boat, to northern mining settlements by tractor-trailer, to Churchill and Moosonee by train. We think it is worth the wear and tear involved, but it does place a heavier burden on the already overloaded profession of conservation.

"The National Museums Corporation is pleased to have been able to assist in the development of this graduate program and this facility at Queen's University."

Two on leave to industry

Two Queen's professors have been selected for one-year senior industrial fellowships by the National Research Council (NRC).

The fellowships, described by Dean Robert Uffen as "prestigious honours", are designed to encourage a mutually stimulating and productive interchange between the university and industry. Queen's students will benefit by learning about two important and rapidly developing fields of engineering through their professors, instead of discovering them "by accident" after graduation.

Prof. Henk Wevers of Mechanical Engineering will move to Trail, B.C., to spend a year at Cominco, Ltd., in the Testing and Materials Engineering Department. His background in modern engineering principles and materials will help Professor Wevers in his study of the company's preventive maintenance systems and techniques. Shared views could bring about a product more resistant to breakdowns, he says, and could save large sums of money now spent on repairs and maintenance.

Prof. John Ellsworth, Department of Chemical Engineering, will spend his year of negotiated leave in the engineering division of Imperial Oil Enterprises in Sarnia, Ont. His post involves preparing detailed specifications for an advanced computer system in the refinery's new lubricating oil manufacturing plant, using his extensive knowledge of applied computer control theory.

Gift from Class of Law '75

The Class of Law '75 has made a gift of $400 to the Law School Library through Mrs. Irene Bessette, Chief Law Librarian and Professor of Law. The class designated that the funds be used to purchase new equipment for the periodicals room now under construction on the lower level of the library in Sir John A. Macdonald Hall.

According to Helen P. King, Arts '73, permanent Vice-President of Law '75, the gift was made in appreciation of "the excellent co-operation the class had from all library staff during their three-year law school program."

Queen's Miners dominate CIMM's essay contest

Six graduates of Mining Engineering recently were named winners of the 1975 student essay competition of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy (CIMM).

Three of the winners, with their essay titles in brackets, are Donald Arrowsmith, London, Ont. ("Combining Shovel and Dragline Operations for Stripping Coal in the Western Foothills"), second prize in the Coal Division; Lorne Carson, Belleville ("The Mining of Manganese Nodules"), first prize in the Industrial Minerals Division; and Brian Muir, Pointe Claire, Que. ("Performance and Cost Analysis of Underground Haulage Equipment"), first prize in the Mechanical-Electrical Division.

There were three Queen's winners in the Metal Mining Division: David Duncan, Sudbury ("Ining Open Blasthole Stop Efficiency by Using Large-Diameter Drill Holes"); Bruce Jamieson, Toronto ("1978 Equipment Requirements for the Brunswick No. 12 Mine"); and David Smithies, Rexdale ("Feasibility Study of In Situ Leaching of the Craigmont Ore Body").

First black Moderator addresses Baccalaureate

The Rt. Rev. Wilbur K. Howard, LL.D. (Winnipeg), D.D. (Emmanuel), Moderator of the United Church of Canada, was the preacher at Queen's annual Baccalaureate Service on March 21.

The service honours the graduating classes in all faculties and schools and carries in its name the tradition established when the Bachelor degree was the only one given at Queen's. In those days the service was held the Sunday following Convocation, but now that there are several convocations on different weekends, the Baccalaureate comes before final examinations.

This year's service also acknowledged the vision of Queen's founders, who established under Royal Charter in 1841 the first Canadian university to open its doors to any qualified candidate without restriction as to colour, class, creed, race or sex.

Dr. Howard, who was elected Moderator in 1974, is the first black man to hold the post, as well as being the first black man to be ordained by the United Church in this country (Toronto, 1941).

Nine M.Div. graduates at Theological Convocation

Rev. Dr. W. Franklin Banister, who retired in 1974 as Professor of Practical Theology and Christian Ethics at Queen's, was guest speaker at the annual Convocation of Queen's Theological College. Nine graduates received their Master of Divinity degrees at the ceremony in Chalmers United Church on April 28.

A memorial portrait of Rev. Donald Mathers, Principal of the Theological College from 1970 to '72, was unveiled at the service.

Prof. Douglas A. Crichton, Chairman of Theological Studies, presented the testamurs and awards to the graduates; Dr. Robert Bater, Principal of the Theological College, gave his annual report; and Rev. T.R. Norman presented student Harry Disher with the Canadian Bible Society Award for excellence in reading of the scriptures. A travelling scholarship of $1,500 for a year of study was awarded to Beverley June Thompson.

A lecture revival being enjoyed on campus

The successful five-day campus "itinerary" of Claude Ryan, this year's Brockington Visitor to Queen's, brought home to observers that there has been a noticeable revival of interest in the guest lecture. Despite their daily academic round of lectures and more lectures, Queen's students are giving these visitors an enthusiastic hearing. Standing-room-only crowds have dismayed late-comers but delighted those at the podium.

The reason can't be a particularly burning issue or trendy topic, because audiences were equally large and equally interested when Mark Lane gave his theory of the JFK assassination and Mr. Justice Tom Berger reported on the Mackenzie Valley Pipeline. Grant Hall was the only place large enough for the audiences which came to share the largely political explorations of the NDP's Rosemary Brown ("Think globally, act locally"), Senator Eugene Forsey, and the CBC's Larry Zolf (introduced by Prof. John Meisel as "the court jester of our society"). Universities Minister Harry Parrott was treated far more hospitably when he visited Queen's than he was when he tried to state the government's case on other Ontario campuses.

"Canada Towards the Year 2000" was the theme of the 1976 Chancellor Dunning Trust Lectures. Speakers representing various areas of public policy (historian Donald Creighton, for example, artist Harold Town, economists Eric Kierans and John White, and Languages Commissioner Keith Spicer) drew audiences so large over the series' two-week period that people were sitting in the aisles and standing in the doors — a reaction unusual for prophets in their own country.

Several other lecture series are memorials to people whose contributions to life at Queen's were exceptional. These series, most of them annual, bring guests of national and international stature to give Queen's students a wider window on the world. One example is the annual Donald Mathers Memorial Lecture Series, which brought Jesuit theologian Father Bernard Lonergan of Boston College to campus for three lectures in March. For three nights, his audience followed him from one auditorium to the next, making his visit a sort of moveable religious feast.

Other privately funded lectures honour W.A. Mackintosh, Willis G. Cunningham, Donald Gow, Mel Williamson, William A. Friend and his brother Austin.

Probably the best known of the sponsored memorials is the Brockington Visitorship, funded by the late Col. R.S. McLaughlin in honour of long-time Rector Leonard W. Brockington. The fund brings a distinguished guest to Queen's for several days to meet formally and informally with campus groups and to give a major public lecture. Since 1968 these Visitors have been Lester B. Pearson, Sir Bernard Lovell, Gunnar Myrdal, and Buckminster Fuller. This year's Brockington Visitor was Claude Ryan, best known as a spokesman for French Canada and editor of Montreal's Le Devoir. His public address in March was entitled "Freedom and Responsibility of the Press Today".

Welcome Back, Joanne, Nels & Jim

Thank you for your help in finding so many of the Lost Trails listed in the May-June issue. Your response has been tremendous but, as you will see, the first list barely scratched the surface. Please look over the following list for familiar names. (The address given is the city where the alumnus lived when last heard from.)

To keep you posted on the progress of our computerization project, I can report that the conversion of records got under way officially on May 10. The six Arts and Science students who were trained for the conversion team are Rosa Durante, Arts '78 (Geography), Betsy Greenlees, Arts '77 (Sociology, Psychology), Jannice Instead, B.Sc. (Arts) '76 (Biology), Sandra Landell, Arts and Phys Ed '77, Janet MacMillan, B.A. '76 (History), Susan Toy, Arts '77 (English) and Mary Reid, Arts '78 (Sociology). These seven students and three of our full-time staff — Mrs. Hilda Mellon, Mrs. Jane Horrocks and Mrs. Cathy Hitchins — prepare data for the computer, checking information currently in your card file and coding it for computer entry.

So far, our computer terminals have been installed, the program so carefully prepared on paper has had an actual test, and on June 16 the team began proof-reading the first print-outs of data entered. By Sept. 3 we plan to have completed what we call the new "master card" file.

Things are moving along well, but one must always anticipate the unanticipated with a new system. With the trained and efficient staff at your disposal in the Alumni Office, your help in finding more Lost Trails, plus your patience (if required) during the change-over, I am confident we will be able to solve any problems with little inconvenience.

A Centennial Salute to RMC

The Kingston Alumni Award was given to the Royal Military College this year, on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the institution and in recognition of its contribution to the life of the community and of the happy relationships that exist between Queen's and R.M.C.

At a reception held in Wallace Hall on May 3, Mrs. J. Bolton Slack, past-president of the Kingston Branch, made the presentation. On hand were the Hon. James A. Richardson, a Queen's man who has become Minister of National Defence and Chancellor of R.M.C., and Brigadier-General William Turner, Commandant.

Mrs. Slack paid tribute to the role played by R.M.C. in the life of a garrison town and to the many academic, athletic and social contacts between the College and Queen's. "Throughout these years, a friendly rivalry has flourished between our two institutions," she said. "Of course, the keenest, and sometimes not so friendly, competition between Cadets and the men of Queen's has been for dates with the girls of Ban Righ Hall.

"For 100 years, truth, duty and valour have forged an indissoluble link with stability, knowledge and sound teaching — a link unique in Canada's history. It is with warm good wishes that the Kingston Branch of the Queen's Alumni recognizes the Centennial Year of the Royal Military College. Many happy returns, and 'Will ye no come back again?'"

The Eastern Alumni greet Dean Sinclair

Weatherwise, the month of May had its shortcomings, but it did bring Dean Duncan Sinclair (Arts and Science) to Quebec City and Newfoundland. He reports that he met a host of new friends among the most congenial group of Queen's people he has ever had the pleasure of meeting.

On May 13 he met for dinner with Quebec Branch President Steve Prosenyak and about 20 alumni at Le Cercle Universitaire. They discussed the complex history of the Senator Carroll Bequest; the disquieting limitation on Queen's graduates and potential new students from Quebec implied by the new CEGEP regulations; and ways of revitalizing the Branch to ensure that the Queen's spirit gets fully nourished in that region.

Next step was St. John's, where Dean Sinclair's joint hosts for the weekend were Bill Wegenast and Laing Farrand. He was welcomed by about 40 alumni at the Wegenast home, spoke of developments on campus, showed some slides (twice) and met Newfoundland's senior graduate, Dr. George Baggs, 89. Some of the group were not Queen's alumni, but graduates of the K.G.H. and Hotel Dieu schools of nursing. "Clearly they consider themselves closely related to the Alumni," Dr. Sinclair observes, "and indeed, so they should be."

On May 15 there followed a tour to Harbour Grace (to see Megan Nutbeam's world-famous Newfoundland kennels) and on to Carbonear for a barbecue with about

Despite the hazards of screech and fog, Dean Sinclair has offered himself "front and forward" for any future opportunity for a return visit.

Ottawa Team-Work

The Ottawa Alumnae decided to combine forces with the Alumni to sponsor a cocktail party on June 4 in the attractive and distinguished setting of the Royal Ottawa Golf and Country Club. It was the final event of the season for presidents

Peter Thompson and Dr. Adele Quarrington.

A month earlier, on May 1, the Ottawa Alumnae held their traditional Spring Salad Bowl Party at the home of Mrs. P.C. (Fran) Thompson. There was a money basket at the door, a book-stall handled by Harriet Lockhart, and the raffle of a quilt made by Nancy Sawyer.

All Queen's people in the Ottawa area are asked to begin now to set aside their "discardable valuables" in anticipation of a garage sale planned for next season.

'Glad Tymes' in Toronto

The Toronto Branch brought an active spring season to a successful social conclusion on June 11 with its annual Spring Dance in the upstairs ballroom of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club. Dance music was by the Glad Tymes, a group chosen to cater to the varied musical tastes represented by Queen's grads in the Metro area. Price of the evening, which included ferry transportation, light refreshment and four hours of dancing, was held to an attractive $8.00 per person.

Toronto's Luncheon Program, which recently moved to the Hotel Toronto, continues to draw good crowds for stimulating speakers. The two most recent guests were the Hon. Bette Stephenson, M.D., Minister of Labour for the Province of Ontario (April 23) and Robert Fulford, critic, author and editor of Saturday Night (May 28).

Pleasurable Business

Wine, cheese and a general meeting wound up the season for the Vancouver Branch on June 10. Dr. and Mrs. T.L. Calder hosted the combined meeting and party at their West Vancouver home.

Cocktails on the Bay

Principal Watts joined the Hamilton Branch for a beautiful evening by the water on May 19. Queen's Spring Cocktail Party was held from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club. Murray Gill, Director of Alumni Affairs, accompanied the Principal on his visit from Kingston.

Frank and Mary Tindall had a few friends over for dinner

The Kindly Old Coach wore black tie for the evening and broad smiles for two whole days.

Helpmate Mary of the open door and the ever-ready skillet

On Saturday, May 15, more than 400 'Friends of Frank Tindall' gathered in the Jock Harty Arena by way of a testimonial to the Mentor on his retirement. (See pages 7 and 9.)

It was generally agreed that to see so many people — old boys and older ones, players and cheerleaders, Trustees and jocks, doctors, lawyers and priests — all sharing laughter, memories, food and drink in the name of one good man was a refreshing and inspiring experience in the best Queen's tradition.

Ron Stewart, former Gael and CFL star, had able Ed Deans on his 'dinner team'. Ed is Queen's athletic events manager.

Two cornerstones emeriti of the Queen's spirit: Frank with Herb Hamilton, who softened up the crowd for the Mentor's main address.

Jim Young, the 60's lamb who became the Lions' 'Dirty 30', spoke for many Gaels who've gone on to professional football.

A highlight was a big-screen testimonial in pictures, produced by Prof. Wally Mellor, complete with a tear-and-cheer-evoking soundtrack of pipes and drums, crowd roars and Cha Gheills.

Prof. Don Macintosh, Phys Ed head, presented a plaque listing team captains and MVPs. It will hang in the Phys Ed Centre's upper lobby.

Professor Jackson: engineer, soldier, teacher and friend

Emeritus Professor of Engineering Drawing, Prof. Arthur Jackson, B.Sc. '16, died at Kingston, Ont., March 29. He was 86 years of age and had been retired since 1955.

Professor Jackson's association with Queen's began in 1912, when he enrolled as a student, and continued until his retirement. He served in France during World War I with the 10th Field Company, Canadian Engineers, and was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant in the field. In 1920 he returned to Queen's to teach drafting. In 1930 Professor Jackson was appointed secretary of the Faculty of Applied Science, a post he held until 1952. He also served briefly as Acting Dean of the Faculty. He served on the Engineering Society Service Control Committee from 1936 to 1956, and had been a member of the Students' Union Council and of the original planning committee on men's residences.

He was well known for his remarkable ability to remember all the names of the engineering students on campus and after graduation. He was a walking encyclopaedia on the history of the Faculty of Applied Science.

In the biographical sketches published by the Class of Science 1937 on the occasion of their Silver Jubilee, it was said of him: "A tremendous feeling of warmth and closeness, such as that felt by a boy for his father, has been the experience of all who were fresh under his tutelage. One was never alone at Queen's or without a real friend with Prof. Arthur Jackson in the background."

The students named a lounge in the Engineering Club rooms in his honour, and the University put his name on the Old Gymnasium, rebuilt for the use of the Department of Engineering Drawing. A plaque cites him as "An engineer, a soldier, and a distinguished teacher devoted to his students, remembering them personally and remembered by them for his friendship, tolerance, and advice."

He was a great friend of Dr. L. W. Brockington, long-time Rector of Queen's, who introduced him to the Queen's campus as a speaker. He had also spoken at an annual meeting of the Queen's alumni in Ottawa.

In 1967 the students elected him Rector of the University. He resigned a year later after a controversy over his attendance at Board meetings. Queen's gave him an honorary degree in 1974. Roster of Qualified Women compiled for government appointments

The Roster of Qualified Women, compiled by the Canadian Federation of University Women (CFUW) as a national project for International Women's Year, has received a grant from the Secretary of State to continue operating for another year. The Roster lists women from across Canada whose qualifications and experience make them suitable candidates for appointment to government boards and commissions.

"By providing the federal government with a valuable source of womanpower," says Ruth Bell of Ottawa, national president of CFUW, "we are performing a service that government departments could not duplicate at several times the cost. Although the Roster cannot claim much success so far in terms of women actually appointed to boards and commissions, we realize that it takes a long time for a new service to become established and well known."

The Roster now contains more than 400 names of well-qualified women, with every province and the Northwest Territories represented. Not all women listed are members of the CFUW or even university graduates. Each listing contains information about educational background, business or professional experience, language capabilities and service (or potential for service) to community or voluntary organizations.

Personal letters reinforced by personal visits have made all Cabinet Ministers aware of the Roster. Administrator for 1976 is Ann Cleghorn, c/o CFUW, 151 Slater St., Ottawa, Ont. K1P 5H3.

Letters

Kingston, Ont.

Dear Ms. Editor:

Will you please convey to all involved with my retirement dinner the very sincere appreciation of me and my wife. The entire affair was most enjoyable and came as a happy climax for those great years at Queen's. And to those players and friends and staff who went to so much trouble to ensure by their attendance the evening was a success, we can only say we hope you enjoyed it as much as we did.

Cha Gheill!

FRANK TINDALL

Pembroke, Bermuda

I'm in Bermuda teaching an intersession course in Drama. On Saturday, June 19, I was the 'guest of honour' at a dinner given by the Bermuda Branch of the Alumni Association of Queen's University. This was held at 'Dealton', in Paget, the home of Queen's graduate Barbara Harris. The evening was organized by Dr. Iris Marsh, who is President of the Bermuda Branch.

Apart from a charming evening, the event was made more memorable by the fact that 'Dealton' overlooks Hamilton Harbour and June 19 was the eve of the Tall Ships Race to Newport, R.I. There were about 20 magnificent ships in the harbour, most of them dressed overall with lights.

I thought I should pass on this information, as the Bermuda Branch of the Alumni Association is incredibly loyal and supportive. In all, about 30 graduates attended the function.

DAVID KEMP,
Associate Professor of Drama
Queen's University

Trenton, New Jersey

I would like to bring to the attention of the readers of the Review a new publication by Donald J. Pierce, Arts '29. It is entitled Some Aspects of Civilization.

Obviously, I cannot give here a detailed review of this work. Suffice it to say, however, that the author attempts to define philosophically civilization; and it is an honest, earnest and hopeful effort.

Undoubtedly, all will not agree with Mr. Pierce's thinking. Be kind to him, all you who read this book, and remember how much easier it is to criticize than to be intelligently understanding and sympathetic. It is all for you! Take what you like and leave the rest without pollution. For my own part, I have found Civilization to be impressive and provocative.

JOHN PERRY PRITCHETT, Ph.D. '31

Peterborough, Ont.

I was interested to read in the May-June Review that competition for the Corpuscle Cup has been rejuvenated (page 16), but I was dismayed to read that "competition lapsed in 1963." I can assure you that when I was a frosh in 1965, competition was still quite vigorous, and our year (Med. '71) finished in first place. I assume that the problem was with the organizers of the drive in their failure to transcribe final results to the cup itself. As far as I can remember, Med. '70 was the winner after Med. '69, and I am pleased to see Med. '79 carrying on the tradition.

Perhaps you could see to it that Med. '71 is given just recognition in the Queen's archives of trivia.

DR. JOHN E. GRAY, Med. '71

Port Perry, Ont.

I am sure the erroneous information re the funding of the new Basic Sciences and Medical Library was given in error (May-June, page 15), but perhaps I will be pardoned if I appear rather sensitive about it. You state "the federally funded Health Sciences Complex"; this, I am sure you will realize, is not correct. Indeed, at one time it appeared that the Federal Government, by unilaterally changing the rules which THEY formulated for the Health Development fund, would do irreparable damage to the efforts in Ontario to provide adequate facilities for the training of health care personnel.

You will know, I am sure, that the funding for projects such as Queen's Health Sciences Complex is a 50/50 effort: the Province provides the funds and then claims reimbursement of 50% from the Government of Canada. Readers of the Alumni Review would like to know how these projects are really financed.

MATTHEW B. DYMOND,
Med. '41, LL.D. '68

Huntsville, Ont.

Re the short biography you gave me in the May-June issue of the Review, the biographical sketch is well written and covers some outstanding details of my life. It is important, however, to clear a few details that need explanation.

(1) Though I began as a member of Med. '19, our class graduated in April 1918. In the autumn of 1914, Queen's entered its war years. Because doctors were needed overseas, the University did its best to train them as quickly as possible. Following the second and third terms, there was a two-week holiday before we began the next term. At the end of the fourth term, because the teaching staff and ourselves were very tired from the continuous and exhausting studies, there was a three-month holiday before our final year. We graduated in April 1918 at the end of three-and-a-half years instead of the usual five.

On graduation we immediately became lieutenants in the Canadian Army Medical Corps, after wearing the private's uniform during our last two undergraduate years. In September 1918 we boarded ship for overseas as members of Queen's Field Ambulance. In England we had the training of infantry officers and gained the rank of lieutenant. I returned to Canada with the rank of captain in the Canadian Army Medical Corps in September 1919 and began practice in Kearney, Ont.

(2) The Emsdale Community Centre mentioned in the note is six miles north of the boundary of Muskoka District.
DR. WILFRED POCOCK, M.D., C.M. '18

Montreal, Que.

The Iron Ring Ceremony began somewhat earlier than Prof. E.A. Allcut believes, but I do not know by how much.

I participated in one of these events in my final year, 1927, at Queen's and I remember the class of '26 wearing the rings. The rings were not made of cast iron and, in all probability, neither was the bridge.

H.C. JENKINSON, Sc. '27

Burlington, Ont.

Re the July-August Review: All graduates of Sc. '27 received their iron rings at a most impressive ceremony at which all senior professors were present. We were advised at that ceremony that it was the first and was being done at all universities in Canada that year. A check with two friends, graduates of Sc. '28, confirms they also received their iron rings at a similar ceremony in 1928.

The rings at that time were wrought iron, a blacksmith's product. No mention was made of cast iron from any bridge. It's unfortunate that such a lot of history has gone unrecorded.

JAMES W. HOULDEN, Sc. '27

Winnipeg, Man.

I received my iron ring in 1929 (spring) and distinctly remember the '28 grads wearing theirs...I cannot say about '27, as I was away for the year '26-'27. The story that we were told, and as I remember it, was that the original rings were made from iron in the first or one of the very early railway bridges in the Maritimes, point unknown. This bridge was purported to have become part of the C.P. railway system, and on retirement about that time was donated by the then Chief Engineer of Canadian Pacific. The bridges of that day were mostly wrought iron.

...At that time, the provincial societies of professional engineers were not very active, and the sponsoring and development of the iron ring ceremony was carried out by the Engineering Institute of Canada.

D.B. MCKILLOP, Sc. '27, B.Sc. '29

Trail, B.C.

A short time ago I wrote to Queen's Alumni Secretary re the alcohol advertisement in the Review and received a very well worded reply saying that not enough money came in from the alumni to keep up a substantial fund to help the University and publish the Review.

This saddened me, because in my day many of us came to Queen's because the fees were lower and living costs were less in Kingston than in other centres. Because of this, many of us were able to get our degrees and join the higher-salaried professions, which we would not have been able to do without our degrees — and we don't give much of it back to Queen's!

The Financial Post says that university graduates are one of the biggest class of spenders on alcoholic beverages, so we at least have that distinction — and although we don't give much to Queen's, we do have money for alcohol.

I don't suppose anyone cares, but in accepting this advertisement, we cannot take any stand in our paper against the traffic which is becoming Canada's biggest health, accident and financial hazard.

Thank you for printing this.

Playing Host to the World's Sailors

Just a few blocks down King St. from the Olympic Village on Leonard Field is this $7.5-million facility, sheltering on Portsmouth Harbour. This view looks south-west, with King St. in the foreground. Left is a guard tower on Kingston Penitenti-

ry. Behind the temporary bleachers and the permanent port facilities, the Manor and Portsmouth House (once Beaup's) still flourish as favorite student watering holes. The Olympic site is now a public marina and park, with restaurant.

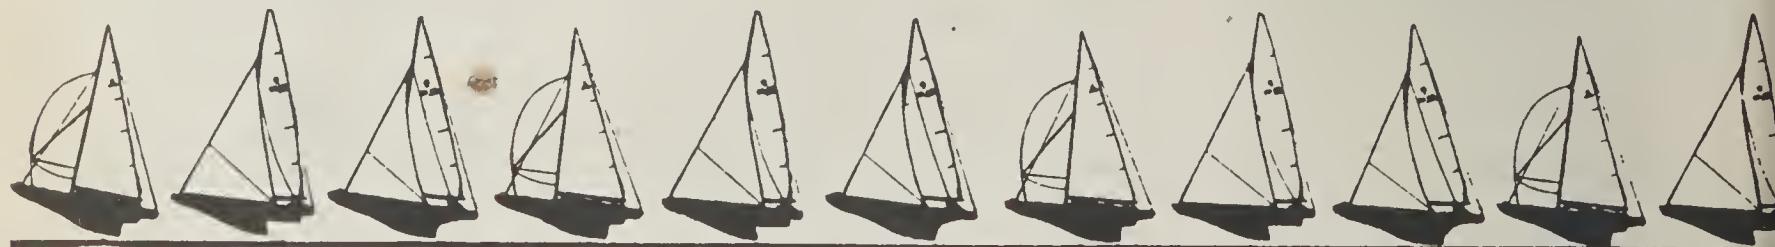

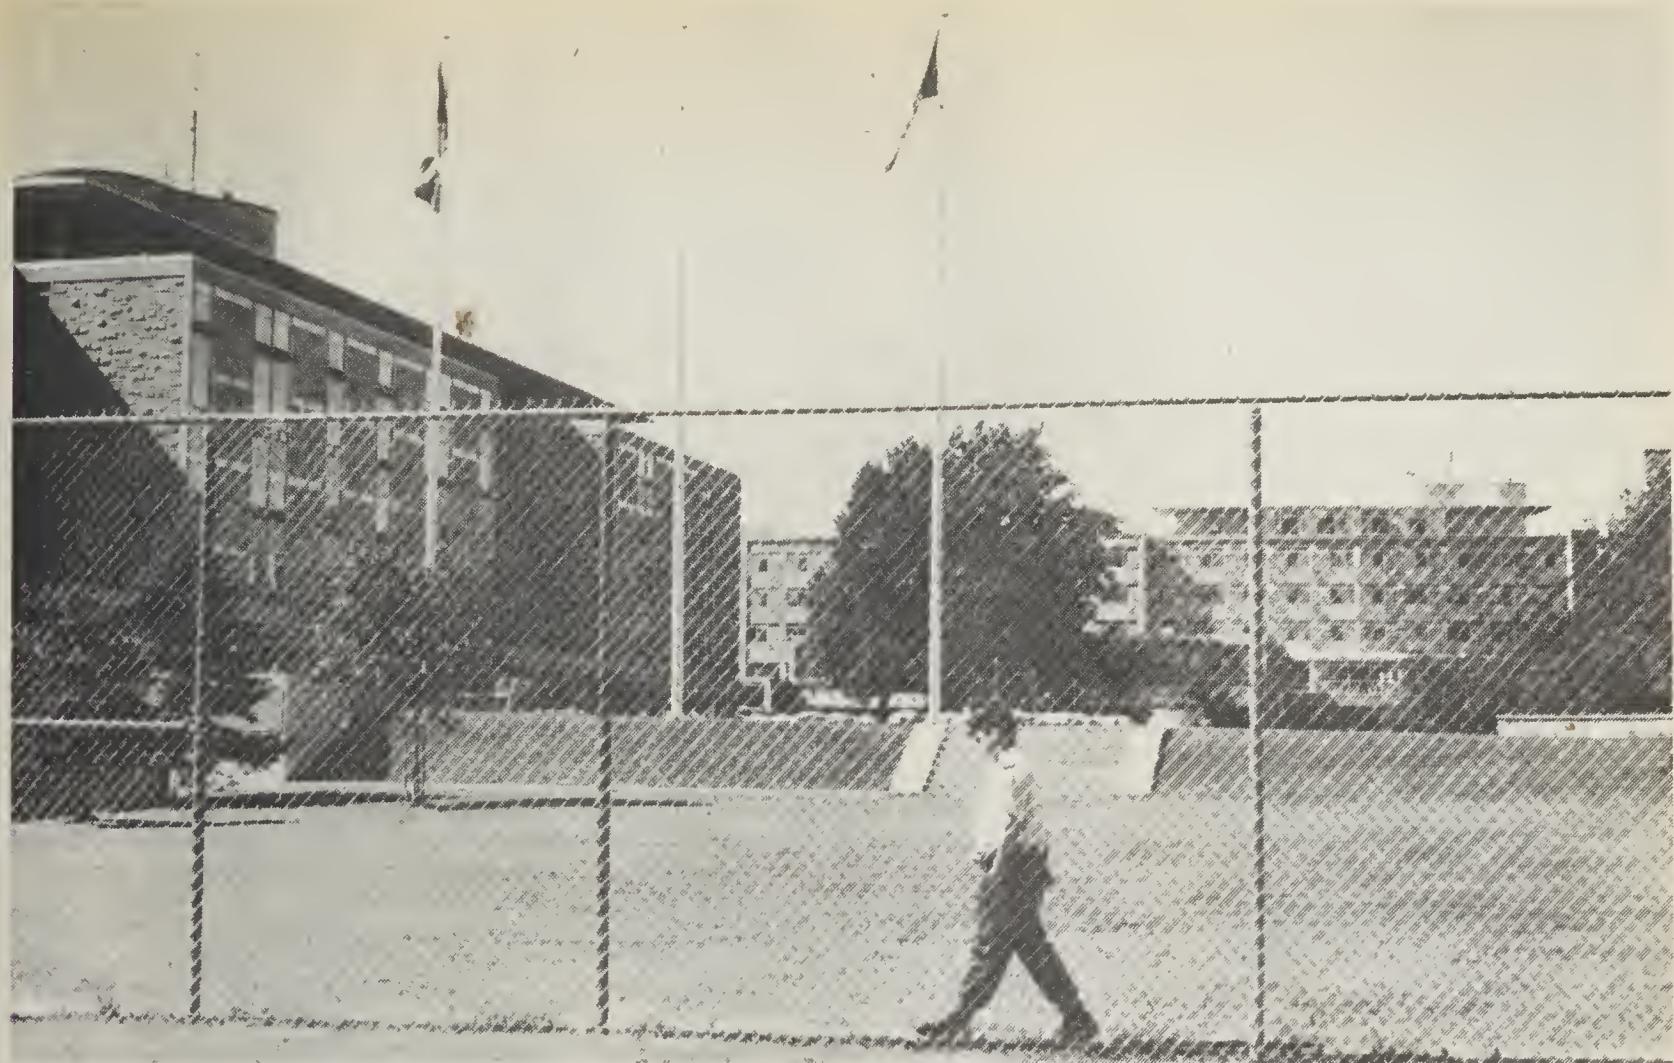

Queen's — Olympic Village 1976

Without Queen's, Kingston could not have hosted the sailing events of the XXIst Olympiad. The University was the Olympic Village. The men's residences provided virtually all accommodation for sailing teams, their support staff and Olympic officials. Victoria Hall was home base for 450 security personnel, mostly OPP and RCMP officers. The elegant Donald Gordon Centre housed senior COJO officials and visiting heads of state. Queen's Computing Centre processed all racing results. The Performing Arts Office co-ordinated a complex program of cultural events surrounding the Olympics in Kingston. Queen's people measured boats, enforced standards, engineered buildings, chaired committees, fed athletes, made travel arrangements, answered questions and escorted the Queen...and did it all in gold medal style.

An armed soldier, one of 800 military personnel on security duty around the city, patrols the 12-foot-high chain fence fronting Leonard Field, the Olympic Village. Left, Gordon-Brockington Hall, with a beer garden on its terrace. Background, Leonard Hall. Approximately 1,500 competitors, from 42 countries, team support staff and officials lived and ate here, about 500 at a time. About 100 members of the international press stayed in Jean Royce Hall on the West Campus.

Victoria Hall was 'home' to the 350 Ontario Provincial Policemen and 150 Mounties who helped make up the Olympic security force in Kingston.

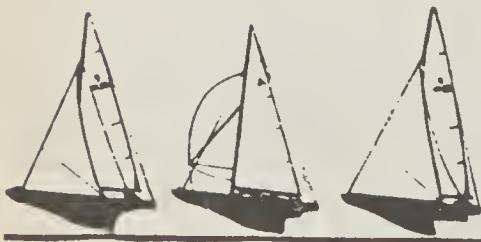

On the residence roof, soldiers were on the alert but virtually invisible to the sailors they watched over.

In Leonard Hall four cooks and 18 helpers fed Olympic Villagers 4,500 pounds of steak, 2,310 dozen eggs, 2,500 loaves of bread and 2,600 gallons of milk, along with exotica such as Cayman Islands turtle-burgers. For racers, there were unsinkable box lunches.

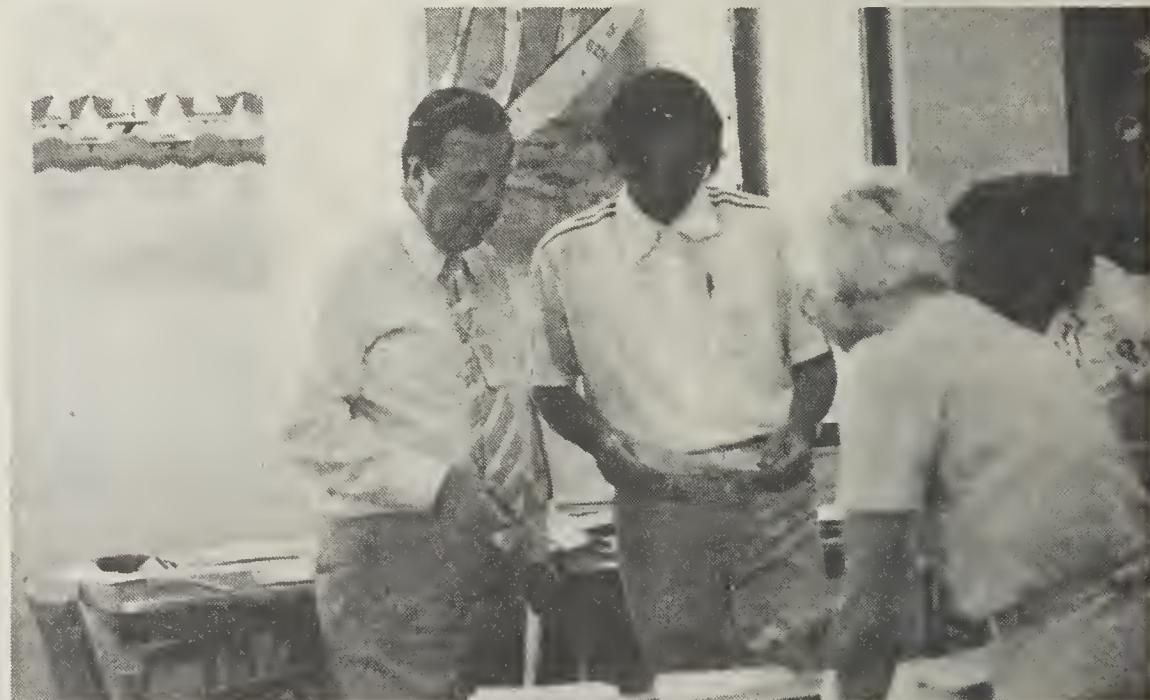

The Principal's 'Thank You' Note Says It All

Now that the Sailing Olympics have reached a successful conclusion, I would like to thank publicly the many members of the Queen's community who made the University's contribution to these events such a distinctive one. Without the facilities and staff of the University, the Sailing Olympics could not have been held in Kingston, and the Mayor has expressed to me personally his gratitude for our assistance to the city in this enterprise.

In addition I have received many words of praise about the courtesy and friendliness with which competitors and team officials from some 40 countries were treated in the Olympic Village and the Donald Gordon Centre. I take this opportunity, therefore, to express my gratitude to those in the residences, food services, the Donald Gordon Centre, Physical Education Centre, Physical Plant and the parking services, and also to all the other members of the Queen's community who played a large part in the regatta organization and the cultural program. The Queen's University Co-ordinating Committee for the Olympics and particularly its chairman, George Wattsford, are to be congratulated for a magnificent effort.

Sailors of many nations chew over the day's races at supper in Leonard Hall cafeteria.

Students would hardly recognize Saga Food's sumptuous candle-lit buffet, tempting this Olympic visitor.

Most of the official Kingston hostesses were Queen's students. Above, two relax with visitor in Leonard Field's temporary beer garden.

Like the fences, this liquor store will be gone when students move back.

Besides the Queen's staffers involved in hosting the Sailing Olympics, some alumni were in evidence.

Toronto lawyer H.S. 'Sandy' Riley, Arts '72, represented Canada in the single-handed Finn class.

Mike de la Roche of Kingston, a senior economics student, crewed for Larry Woods of Winona in the Tornado class.

Robert Partridge, Arts '35, was in charge of the complex finances of the sailing events. He is also Commodore of Kingston Yacht Club, a successor to Cam Jones, Director General, Yachting.

Highly visible during opening and closing ceremonies, several city festivals in between, and the Royal Visit on July 20 was Kingston's Mayor, George Speal, Q.C., Com. '54.

For Wilson Art Fans

The work of R.D. Wilson, who painted the Review's cover, may be seen in a new book, The Living Past of Montreal. Published by McGill-Queen's University Press, the 128-page book contains 42 of Dick Wilson's sensitive sketches. Text by Eric McLean is completely bilingual. Cost: $5.95 paperback, $9.95 cloth cover.

In recognition of Queen's role in the Sailing Olympics, the Olympic Organizing Committee (COJO) has presented the campus community with an official flag.

The white nylon flag, bearing the five coloured Olympic rings, will be put on display in a case before the students return — a reminder of the University's contribution of facilities and staff to the sailing events' success.

In presenting the flag on August 19, Col. Cam Jones commented that "visiting competitors were delighted with the quality of accommodation and the helpful and friendly attitude of the Queen's staff."

Here's a feather in the sailor's cap

As 'Skipper' Watts explained to the University Council, profits made through Queen's participation in the Olympics — particularly with regard to the Olympic Village — will be used to defray residence costs and, hopefully, to hold residence fees stable for students for a couple of years.

Councillor Norman M. Rogers took the floor. "Mr. Principal," he said, "if you can make a profit on the Olympics, I suggest you run for Mayor of Montreal."

SYLVA MALKA GELBER LL.D., May 29, 1976

Mistress of versatility, member of the Order of Canada, distinguished daughter of a family notable for its contributions to scholarship, government service and support of the arts, her many talents and broad concern for human kind have forged a formidable record of accomplishment and service in post-war Palestine and, since 1948, in the public service of Canada.

Her early experience as a social worker, her work as Labour Officer in the introduction of legislation on trade unions and industrial relations in Palestine, and her years as a civil servant embroiled in the struggle to make comprehensive health care a Canadian reality, qualified her in multiple ways for appointment in 1968 as Director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labour and, after retirement, as Special Assistant to the Deputy Minister of Labour in 1975.

Writer, captivating speaker and broadcaster, her gift of tongues — English, French, German, Hebrew, Yiddish and Arabic — has given her contacts with people everywhere, and she has helped them with wise counsel, stimulated them with her ready wit, and created bonds of friendship with her understanding compassion.

Her passion for the theatrical in life as well as on the stage, her knowledge of music and her discriminating taste in fine painting have illuminated and given spirit to all her achievements.

GERALD SANDFORD GRAHAM LL.D., May 21, 1976

An eminent Canadian historian, greatly admired as a teacher, internationally respected as a scholar; alumnus of this University and formerly a member of its faculty, who for 21 years occupied with great distinction the Rhodes Chair of Imperial History in the University of London;

— prolific author and editor, whose writing and speaking have been consistently notable for meticulous scholarship, argumentative flourish, stylistic verse and great breadth of knowledge relating to his two major interests — Canadian history and the naval aspects of imperial history;

— whose wartime service in the Royal Canadian Navy added a lively laboratory dimension to his scholarly work in seapower;

— whose fairminded judgments have reflected the integrity of his intellect, the authenticity of his commitment to the progress of those he taught, and his abhorrence of pomposity parading as scholarship;

— for 36 years at Harvard, Queen's and London, an inspiring teacher whose exacting standards and exuberant humour have won the respect and affection of students, over 200 of whom as professors and historians in universities around the globe, and including Queen's, bear witness to the long arm of his professional imperialism.

STANLEY HOWARD KNOWLES

LL.D., May 22, 1976

Born in Los Angeles; migrant to the land of his parents in time to graduate from Brandon College and the University of Manitoba, a conspicuous early example of reverse brain drain; destined in his early proximity to Hollywood for the theatre of pulpit and politics, in company with his Brandon classmate Tommy Douglas.

He has for some 30 years been Member of Parliament for J.S. Woodsworth's old riding of Winnipeg North Centre, which, with one unmentionable lapse, has returned him to the House of Commons in every federal election since 1942.

Peerless in his knowledge of parliamentary rules and traditions, he has been a zealous leader on Capital Hill and across the nation for national medical and hospital insurance, for effective recognition of the just claims of the elderly on Canadian society and for fair laws ensuring the rights of labour.

Eloquent speaker and writer, he is one of the few Canadian authors who can both typeset his own work and bless it, having maintained his good standing in both unions.

WILLIAM EARLE McLAUGHLIN

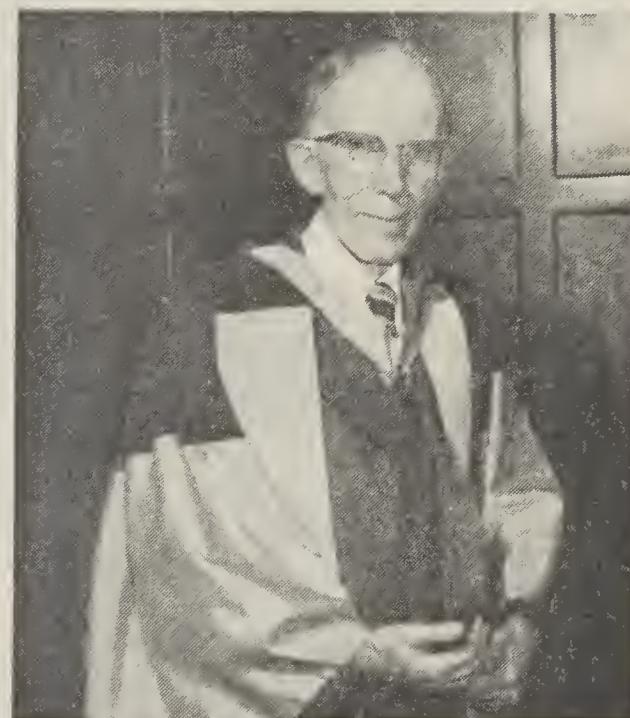

LL.D., May 22, 1976

Armed with an honours degree and a Gold Medal in Economics from this University, he began his career as a banker and a professional no-sayer in the depression of the 30's...but with characteristic vigour and enthusiasm, he became in due course a widely respected leader of Canada's largest bank, an authority on the mysteries of international exchange and, indeed, is said to actually know a gnome of Zurich.

He is also a recognized spokesman in the banking and

NOMINATIONS FOR HONORARY DEGREES

The Senate Committee on Honorary Degrees invites nominations for the award of Honorary Degrees at the 1977 Spring Convocations.

These nominations must be submitted to the Registrar by December 1, 1976. Nominations received after that date will not be considered for 1977. Please include the following information with each nomination:

financial community, with a talent for realistic appraisal of this nation's economic problems and opportunities and a rare ability for coming to grips with them responsibly and effectively.

It is not surprising that his activities include directorships in a multitude of significant national and international corporations reflecting his wide-ranging interests and manifest managerial and organizational skills.

Contrary to the austere bankers' image, his energies have been directed with humanity and warmth into distinguished public service on behalf of hospitals, the Red Cross, the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, St. John's Ambulance and universities including his own, as Trustee and dynamic chairman of the capital campaign in the 1960's.

Abraham Lincoln said that nearly all men can stand adversity, but if you want to test a man's character, give him power; he has stood the supreme test for, after all, Earle McLaughlin has no limits on his Charge Card.

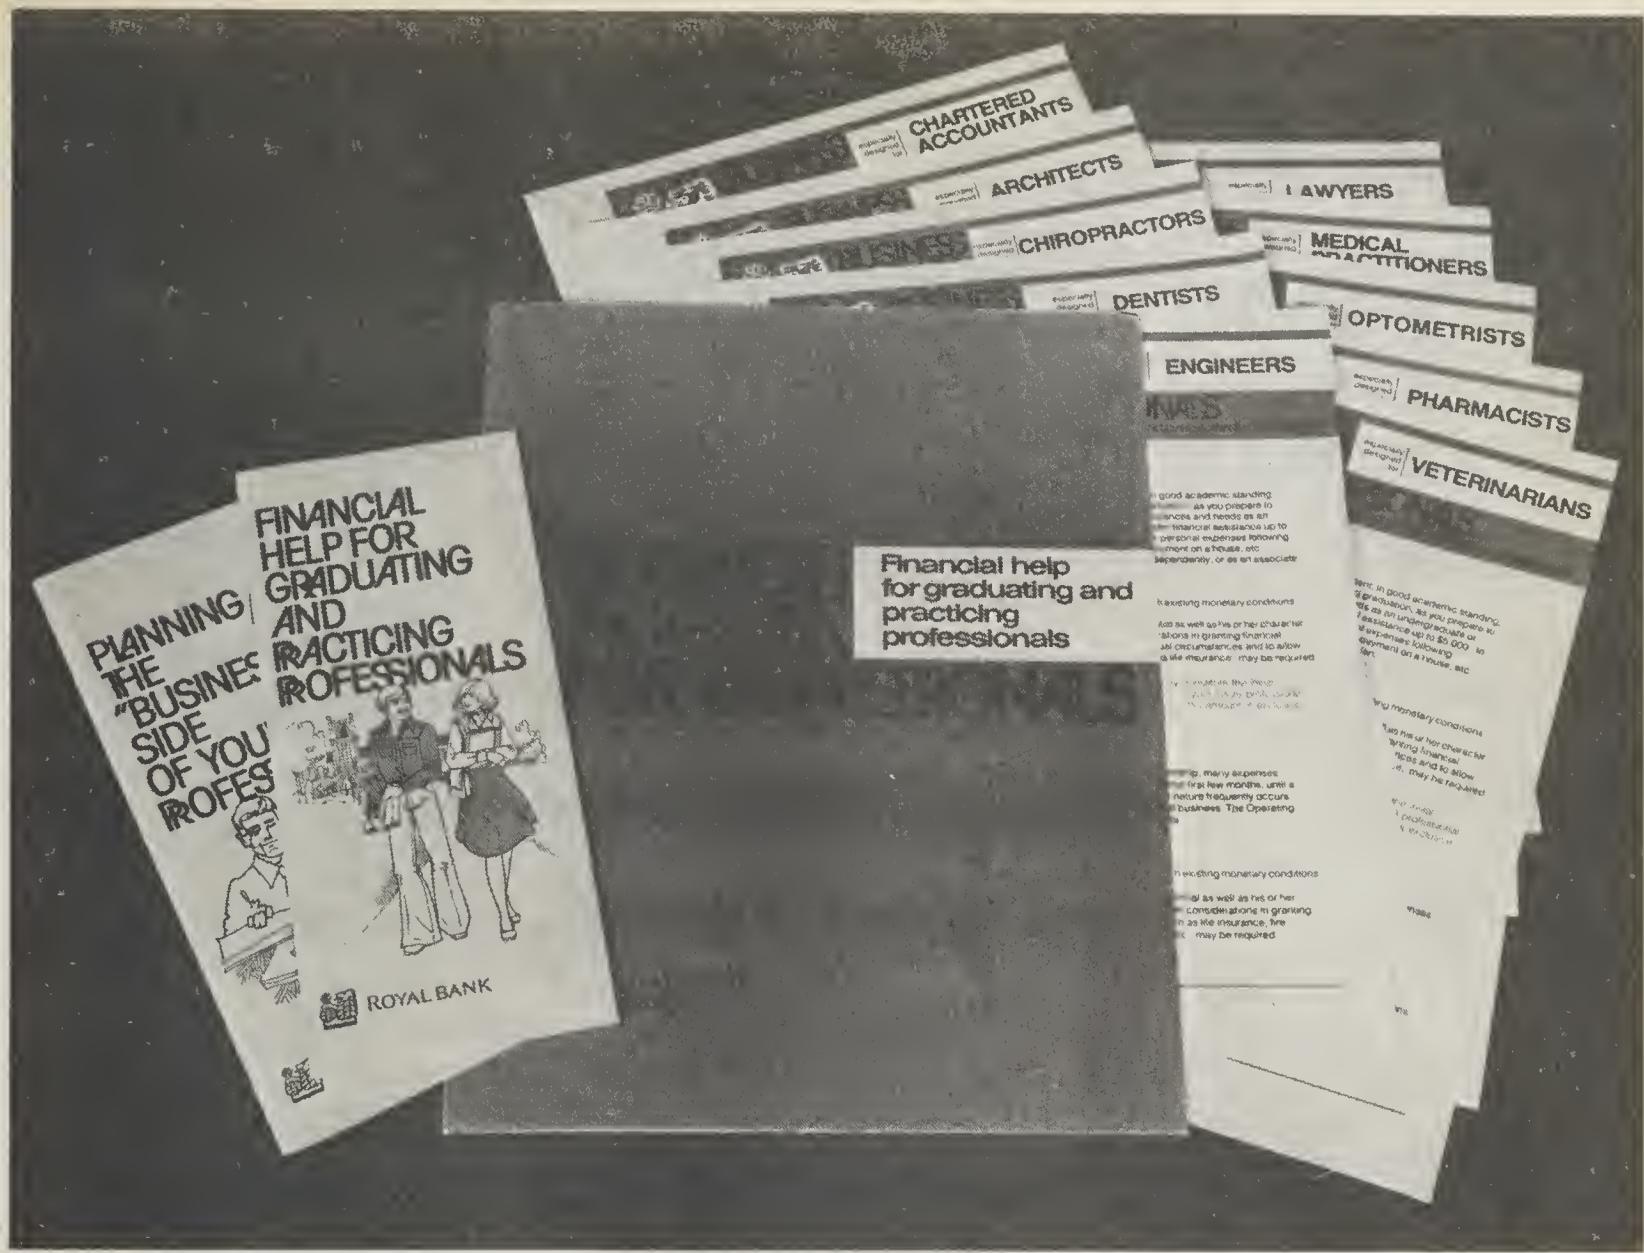

OSCAR EMANUEL PETERSON LL.D., May 29, 1976

Born in Montreal, alumnus of the Montreal Conservatory of Music, recipient of the Medal of Service of the Order of Canada, he is a concert pianist whose virtuosity in performance has won him acclaim from audiences in many countries around the world.

He is a repeated winner of awards as best jazz pianist, best musicians' musician, and for his consistent accomplishments as a recording artist. Most famous for his playing and composition in the jazz idiom, he is equally at home in guest soloist appearances with symphony orchestras.

A teacher who has generously shared his special knowledge with students in Canada and abroad, he is above all a communicator, through his art, of the warmth, energy and earthy and intellectual virtues of an original North American musical art form. His life and work celebrate the ideals cherished in the title of one of his most moving and rousing compositions, "A Hymn to Freedom".

What's that flying over the dunes?

It's a bird!

It's a plane!

It's Science '76 and their ATV!

An all-terrain vehicle (ATV) designed by Queen's engineers came second in the Mini-Baja 1976 competition at the University of South Carolina this summer. It was the only Canadian entry among a total of 15.

The ATV was designed and built by 18 fourth-year Mechanical Engineering students as part of their course in Market-Oriented Design. It sports a molded fibre-glass body, handlebar steering and an eight-horsepower engine.

A panel of 10 American industrial engineers judged the entries on appearance and design, manoeuvreability, acceleration, endurance, ability to climb hills and to draw a prescribed weight for a short distance. Cost and safety were among the criteria for successful marketing.

Ted Metcalfe (Norwood, Ont.), Sean Cragg (Toronto) and Greg Thomson (Kingston) represented the Queen's team at the competition and made quite an impression on the Carolineans. They had taken a large Canadian flag with them, and flew it from their prize entry after the judging. White coveralls with a Queen's crest added distinction to their appearance even after a five-lap endurance trial through large mud puddles and loose sand.

They may have been number two with the judges, but they were number one with the busloads of school children who came to see the display of entries prior to the judging. They all cast their vote for Queen's — the only team which let them sit in their vehicle and be wheeled around.

"The students proved to be outstanding personal ambassadors for Queen's and Canada," says Dr. Robert dePencier, Sc. '59, professor in the Mechanical Engineering Department and instructor of the course in Market-Oriented Design.

During first term, he divided the class into three groups, each of which had to produce a design for the vehicle. The best of the three was chosen as the basis of the second term's work, and the whole class went to work on it — some handling design, others administration, finances, purchasing, manufacturing, testing and performance. Randy Snow (Kingston) made preliminary sketches and designed the body. Sean Cragg was responsible for the construction of the final body model.

Professor dePencier estimates that a mass-produced ATV from Queen's plans could cost about $1,000. He is currently looking into manufacturing possibilities.

Dean Robert Uffen gave the ATV an early test run around McLaughlin Hall last spring. His smile was his verdict.

GUIDAR security system originated at Queen's

A double ring of underground cables was installed around a Canadian penitentiary in July to test a new security system developed at Computing Devices Co. of Ottawa in collaboration with Prof. Neilson Mackay, who was on loan from Queen's. (For security reasons, the name of the prison has not been released.)

The system, called Guided Intrusion Detection and Ranging, or GUIDAR, was the focus of Dr. Mackay's year on a senior industrial fellowship with ComDev. Dr. Keith Harman, Sc. '67, Ph.D. '72, manager of ComDev's applied research division, arranged the fellowship when the company became interested in the work of Dr. Mackay and his Electrical Engineering colleague, Prof. John Beal.

The GUIDAR principle is to run a pair of so-called 'leaky' coaxial cables three to five inches underground around the area to be protected, with one cable sending out a radar-type signal from the control room and the second picking up the return signal. Disturbances in the field of transmission are quickly detected, and an intruder's location can be immediately pinpointed on a screen.

Potential applications are wide and varied. Inquiries have already come from military establishments and other groups in Canada and abroad. Professor Mackay is now studying the use of the device in the transportation field. For example, he says, GUIDAR could help trace aircraft taxiing on a foggy runway.

John Kenneth Galbraith next Brockington Visitor

Eminent economist John Kenneth Galbraith will be the sixth Brockington Visitor to Queen's, and will deliver a major public address on campus on Monday, Oct. 18.

The Visitorship honours Leonard W. Brockington, Queen's Rector from 1947 until his death in 1965, and is intended to offer the Queen's community an exchange of ideas with international figures. Previous Brockington Visitors have been the late Lester B. Pearson, Sir Bernard Lovell, Gunnar Myrdal, Buckminster Fuller and Claude Ryan. Jacob Bronowski died shortly before his proposed visit in 1974.

During his five-day stay at Queen's, Dr. Galbraith will meet students and faculty members in a series of informal seminars and discussions. Traditionally, several of the events on the Visitor's calendar are open to local alumni, as well.

Dr. Galbraith, a naturalized American citizen, was born in 1908 in Ontario, on a farm near London. He studied animal husbandry at the University of Toronto and later economics at the University of California and Cambridge. His honorary degrees include one from Queen's in 1967.

Dr. Galbraith has been an influential government policy-maker, a consultant to numerous U.S. governmental agencies, U.S. Am-

Mental Health Awards to Queen's total $210,000

The Ontario Mental Health Foundation has awarded $210,000 to projects and individuals at Queen's.

Dr. D. Soudek, Psychiatry, hopes to discover, through his laboratory at Kingston Psychiatric Hospital, whether the 'minor' chromosomal variants found in both retarded and normal individuals have any genuine clinical importance.

Dr. Dugald Campbell, also of Psychiatry, is supervising a two-part program. One deals with behavioural measures as a way to determine potential disease-prevalence in babies with low birth weight. The other concerns the use of biofeedback to see if stroke patients can regain muscular control.

Dr. D.W. Muir, Psychiatry and Psychology, is examining the vision of new-born infants. Dr. M. Fisman received a teaching fellowship (Psychiatry) to compare methods of postgraduate teaching. Dr. R.B. FitzSimons, chief resident in Paediatrics, has a fellowship for study of children's nervous systems at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

There was gold at the end of Rainbow 0014

With the help of the Medical Research Council, the Department of Pathology is ready to "make mountains out of molehills". In the collection of Rainbow Proposals, Queen's itemized appeal for private funding in non-supported areas of teaching and research, (see March-April issue), $93,500 was requested for an electron microscope and attachments.

According to the head of Pathology, Dr. N. Kaufman, training, screening and less demanding diagnostic work are being done on medium-and low-resolution microscopes, but the outlook is for more work requiring high-resolution microscopy. The NRC grant has paid for a basic transmission electron microscope ($81,500) and goniometer stage and attachments ($12,000).

Organized early in 1975 by technician David Kempson of the Geological Sciences Department, the expanding project now collects cardboard boxes from the Campus Bookstore, computer cards and paper from the Computing Centre, and old newspapers from the libraries. Recently other departments, including Printing, have agreed to provide waste material in response to a campus-wide appeal.

An inside depot is located in the Computing Centre in Dupuis Hall. Outside office hours, bundled material is placed in a 40-foot tractor-trailer van in the parking lot behind the building.

From the Computing Centre's waste alone, Mr. Kempson's results as of June were 24 tons of cards and 10 tons of computing paper at an average of $35 per ton, for a net of about $1,200. Cardboard and newsprint net about $5 per ton, and, with higher volume through more volunteer effort, this area of recycling is expected to prove a helpful source of additional revenue.

Now Mr. Kempson, with the Principal's blessing, is looking for community participation. "Up to now," he says, "there were many people who wanted to recycle their paper, but had nowhere to take it. This project now provides them with an opportunity."

New Disraeli letters for Queen's Archives

A collection of letters written by Benjamin Disraeli, which had been considered lost since the turn of the century, has been discovered and purchased from a Hamilton steel-worker. The letters, 27 in all, were written to Sir William Hart-Dyke, seventh Baronet of Lullingstone Castle, Kent, who served as his chief party whip during the last three years of Disraeli's term as British Prime Minister (1878-80).

The letters eventually came to Sir William's grandson, Sir Derek Hart-

Dyke, the ninth Baronet and an employee of the Steel Company of Canada in Hamilton, Ont. An Alcan employee in Kingston read about Queen's Disraeli Project and remembered being shown these letters by Sir Derek when he worked with him at Stelco. He notified Dr. John Matthews, senior editor of the project. Professor Matthews went to Hamilton to investigate, and the collection was recently purchased by Queen's Archives. The new letters contain a comprehensive day-to-day account of the business of Disraeli's cabinet.

Queen's Disraeli Project has been in operation since 1972. At that time, some 2,800 letters were known to exist. By 1973, nearly 10,000 had been located and since then Dr. Matthews and his investigators have found 6,000 more. The project is staffed by graduate students (English, History and Politics) and post-doctoral fellows, and has the support and interest of a host of Disraeli scholars and enthusiasts in Canada and Britain. It also has substantial long-term financial support from the Canada Council.

The first two volumes of a series called The Collected Letters of Benjamin Disraeli will be published in 1978, with microfiche copies of the relevant letters attached.

Dr. Botterell's Dott Lecture was entitled "The Study of the Management of Acute Spinal Cord Injuries in Ontario, 1969-70."

Dorn designs win again

At the annual conference of the Canadian Association of College and University Student Services, held at Brock University, a national competition was held for the best materials designed to inform students of the services available on their campus. The work of Queen's graphic designer, Peter Dorn, placed first in three of the four categories.

The entries were judged by a panel of students, administrators and student services personnel.

Conflict about resources; Centre's first book out

The first of a series of studies dealing with the problems of mineral resource policy in Canada was published in May by the Centre for Resource Studies. The Centre, based at Queen's and headed by graduate Dr. C. George Miller, is jointly sponsored by the federal Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, the Mining Association of Canada and the University.

The first study explores relationships between the federal and provincial governments in the formulation and execution of natural resource policy. It was written by R.M. Burns, formerly Director of the Institute of Intergovernmental Relations at Queen's, and is titled "Conflict and its Resolution in the Administration of Mineral Resources in Canada."

The study was commissioned by the Centre as part of its continuing program to perform and support research on questions of mineral development and policy. Forthcoming projects will focus on key aspects of the mineral industry, including: (1) the economic impact of mining; (2) mining and transportation; (3) mineral trade; (4) employee health and safety; (5) environmental impacts of mining; (6) mineral development and Canadian settlement; and (7) federal and provincial mineral resource policies.

For further information, contact Dr. Miller or Dr. Ronald C. Murray, Centre for Resource Studies, (613) 547-5957.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES — "Renewed" is replacing "new" as a campus adjective, and this worker is helping balance Queen's budget as he balances on the roof at the corner of Union and University. So is the triplex on the corner of Union and Alfred Sts.

New book on Kingston: To Preserve and Defend

Many Queen's alumni may be interested in a handsome history book published this summer by McGill-Queen's University Press. To Preserve and Defend: Essays on Kingston in the Nineteenth Century was edited by Prof. Gerald Tulchinsky and comprises a series of specially commissioned essays by 19 contributors, most of them present or past members of Queen's faculty.

Following a synoptic introduction by the editor and a provocative character sketch of the city by Arthur R.M. Lower, the book proceeds to unfold the shape and nature of Kingston in the 1800s, its military role, economic development, political life and changing social conditions.

To Preserve and Defend was sponsored by the Kingston Historical Society and designed by Peter Dorn. Its 416 pages contain 41 19th-century illustrations and maps.

In addition to those already mentioned, essayists include J. Douglas Stewart, Brian Osborne, George F.G. Stanley, John W. Spurr, Richard A. Preston, J.K. Johnson, George Richardson, the late Max Magill, S.F. Wise, H. Pearson Gundy, George Betts, J.D. Livermore, Donald Swainson, Patricia Malcolmson, Alan G. Green, Donald Schurman and the late Hilda Neatby.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister, The University Council of Queen's University urges that . .

The annual meeting of the University Council, now in its 101st year, was held on Thursday evening and all day Friday, May 27 and 28, at the Donald Gordon Centre for Continuing Education. This year's meeting concentrated on the A.U.C.C. report To Know Ourselves (by Prof. T.H.B. Symons, Trent University), concerning the role of Canadian studies in our universities and the report's implications for the local, provincial, national and international responsibilities of Queen's University.

Workshop sessions on the theme "Focus on Tradeoffs" were effectively organized by Mary Collins, Toronto, and summarized in a plenary session by a panel consisting of Mrs. Collins, Dr. Duncan Sinclair, Dean of Arts and Science, and J. Bolton Slack, Director of the Frontenac County Board of Education.

In all, the 1976 meeting was a 24-hour blitz of meetings, reports, question-answer sessions with the Principal, workshops and a banquet. More than 100 Councillors attended, along with resource people from

As the Queen's Journal summed it up, the main messages from the meeting were these: (a) "There is a great need for the universities to let the public know what they are doing" and (b) "Queen's should maintain those things which it does best when tradeoffs need to be made."

Following an observation by MP Flora Macdonald that, despite the anxieties and concerns articulated, the meeting lacked a sense of urgency, it was moved by Judge John R. Matheson, Ottawa, and seconded by Ian M. Rogers, Q.C., Toronto, that a statement be sent to those who had an interest in this summer's federal-provincial negotiations on funding for universities.

Accordingly, Chancellor Roland Michener in his role as Council Chairman wrote to federal Cabinet members, federal party leaders, relevant members of the Ontario Cabinet, education critics of all parties, the MPs and MPPs representing the Kingston area, and executives of major university associations and councils. He appended a list of Councillors and their home cities, to show the professional and geographical scope of the organization.

In his letter, the Chancellor outlined the concerns Council had expressed about "the impact which the federal-provincial negotiations on funding for post-secondary education might have on the future national character of higher education in Canada." Following are summaries of the five resolutions in the Council's communication.

This workshop in the John J. Deutsch Room focused on the provincial situation, with Kingston MPP Keith Norton, second left, as resource person. Group leader was Prof. Harold Quinn, left. Each group had a rapporteur who later briefed the panelists on his or her workshop's topics and conclusions.

THE RESOLUTIONS

I. We urge you to consider universities as a stable resource for Canadian society, requiring strong and steady governmental support.

II. We urge that in any revision of federal-provincial financial arrangements for higher education, these take account of both provincial and national objectives and that the universities be consulted about the educational implications of the arrangements under consideration.

III. We urge both federal and provincial governments to look carefully at ways in which the study of Canadian concerns may be supported adequately.

IV. We urge that in the development of public policies affecting Canadian higher education, the international character of learning be given appropriate recognition.

V. We urge that public funding agencies regard universities not as uniform institutions, national or provincial, but as institutions which should be encouraged to seek distinction in diversity.

What is the Council?

The University Council was provided for in the Statute of 1874 to guarantee the graduates a voice in how Queen's is run. It is composed of members of the Board of Trustees, members of the Senate, and a number of elected graduates equal to the number of Trustees and Senators combined. There are usually about 190 Councillors, with some overlap in ex officio membership.

Once a year Councillors who live and work in cities across the country and outside its borders meet with those on campus to assess the general condition of Queen's health in terms of traditional and appropriate educational goals.

Chancellor Michener presides over the annual plenary session and interim meetings of the Executive Committee. The Secretary is James M. Courtright, Sc. '41, Queen's Vice-Principal of Development and Information.

Once the Council brings to the attention of the Trustees or Senate any matter which it believes affects Queen's well-being and prosperity, those bodies are required to deliberate and report back. In this way, the Council's study committees and workshop sessions have made important policy contributions to several areas of campus life, most notably in recent years to Queen's admissions policy; the raising of private support, and continuing education.

Nominations of graduates for membership on the University Council, 1977-83, are invited before November 30, 1976. For details, see page 29.

The Secretary Says . . .

In his annual report, Council Secretary J.M. Courtright included the following news:

- The new cash flow to Queen's for the 1975 calendar year from all private non-governmental sources (excluding endowment funds and tuition fees) was $5.6 million. The increase over $3.5 million in 1974 was due largely to two major bequests: $200,000 from the late Greville Smith (for Queen's Capital Program) and almost $2 million from the late Senator Frank Carrel (for scholarships for Quebec students). More is promised from the Carrel estate for 1976.
- Sources of 1975's private funds were as follows: $500,000 (9%) as personal gifts from students, alumni and friends; more than $2.5 million (45%) as bequests from alumni and friends; $750,000 (13%) from corporations; and $1.9 million (33%) from foundations and associations, most of them in the health field.
- The Advisory Council on Engineering is thriving, 26 years after its institution by the University Council. Professional engineers from all fields continue to meet for three days on campus, sharing their wisdom and practical experience with faculty and students in Applied Science.
- Cedric Ritchie, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Bank of Nova Scotia, has agreed to chair Queen's next fund-raising campaign, 1978-83.
- The four recipients of the Council's prestigious Distinguished Service Awards for 1976 are Robert L. Dunsmore, Dr. Norman D. Garand, Prof. Stuart Ryan and Coach Frank Tindall. (Citations were published in the July-August Review.)

Just Asking . . .

The Councillors directed questions about many areas of Queen's life to the Principal and other University officers. Below are some answers of general interest to alumni.

- Progress is being made with the Faculty of Applied Science's extended tuition program for first-year engineers. Such tuition, provided after diagnostic testing, has reduced the first-year failure rate from 30% to 17%.
- The Special Admissions program has been suspended for a few years pending thorough evaluation. Since 1973, 107 students have been enrolled under the program's special conditions. To qualify, these students had completed at least grade 10, were over 18, and showed promise of benefitting from university work. Their records will be followed through to graduation, drop-out or failure.
- Queen's is a high-cost university. Nonetheless, applications are increasing at well above the provincial rate. Scholarships, bursaries and other student aid is even more important if Queen's is to avoid being 'a rich kids' university'. The private donor is the only source of such assistance. At present, Queen's leads all universities in the province in the amount of student aid offered.
- The first 'native people' admitted to Queen's under special conditions graduated when 10 Indian Law students were laureated in May.
- Senate has established a Principal's Advisory Group on Resource Planning, to advise on a continuing basis on policies and measures for effecting economies.

At the Branches

Welcome, Labrador West

The University was pleased to learn this summer that Queen's alumni in Labrador West had inaugurated a new branch (Queen's 35th) in May. Robert Wilson, Sc. '73, is chairman; Dr. Ian Arnold, Med. '68, vice-chairman; and Gerry Suek, Sc. '60, M.B.A. '68, secretary. Membership in the new branch is divided between Labrador City (19) and Wabush (6).

The senior members, by Faculty, are Mrs. D. Honsberger (Dorothy Perry), Arts '54, Colin Jardine, Sc. '55, and Dr. K. Jolly, Med. '64.

According to Gerry Suek, "The object of the branch will be to promote continuing education and to assist prospective Queen's students gain entrance and choose programs." The new branch is meeting again this month (September), he adds, "to clarify our raison d'être."

Vancouver Enthusiastic

The Vancouver Branch held its annual general meeting on June 10 at the home of Dr. Norma Calder. A brief and productive meeting resulted in the election of an enthusiastic new executive for the coming year, headed by President John Parker, Arts '34. Other officers include Vice-President William R. Sexsmith, Sc. '58; Secretary Myrna A. Fuller, Arts '69; Treasurer Richard A. Simon, Law '68; and Directors Norma Calder, Arts '49, J.S. McKercher, Com. '59, Law '62, and Anthony Pipes, M.Sc. '68.

Following the meeting, those attending warmed up, in typical Queen's fashion, to a selection of wine, cheese and good company. The last word from our correspondent was this: "Vancouver alumni, if you missed this one, don't be two-time losers. Plan to attend the September meeting!"

'Queen's Gang' Strikes Again!

During the holiday weekend of May 22-23, the 'Queen's Gang', which originated in Peterborough, Ont., returned home for their sixth reunion since 1971. The Queen's Gang is a group of early 1930's graduates of the Peterborough Normal School (teachers' college), who kept together throughout Queen's Summer School sessions and graduated in the late '30s and the '40s. Prior to 1971, mini-reunions were held about every 10 years.

The 24-hour 1976 reunion began with a Saturday luncheon at the home of Arnold and Doris Noftall, followed by a visit to the new Peterborough County Education Centre (the former Normal School) and a guided tour of the campus and colleges of Trent University.

Kawartha Downs race track was the scene of dinner hour and early evening entertainment, and the later evening and early morning hours were spent with Dr. Bill Wedlock and his wife Grace. Not many hours later, a breakfast party at the home of Jack and Brownie Nichols gave everyone an opportunity for one more gabfest before saying farewell till the 1977 reunion.

A Note from the Office Manager
Thank you for your continuing help in locating Queen's "lost" family members. After a busy summer in the Alumni Office, we are pleased to say that we have achieved our goal of creating a basic computer file on well over 36,000 Queen's alumni. With the major conversion complete, we can now begin testing the programs, checking details, and adding supplementary information. By December, we hope to have complete use of the biographic information stored in the computer. In January, we will begin to record financial data, including your record of gifts.

However, now that one project is under control, we are about to embark on yet another. The Alumni Office is being moved into tradition-filled Wallace Hall. (All dining facilities in the former Students' Memorial Union have been moved into the new section of the extended building now called the John Deutsch University Centre.) The face-lift and move should be complete by mid-September, in time for us to welcome everyone returning to campus for Reunion Weekend. Drop in for a visit. We'll be pleased to see you and show you around.

General Issues: Who decides about universities? 'Queen's position is clear'

Before continuing Queen's story through 1975/76, it is worth noting the general issues which face all universities and governments which support them during a period in which overall government spending must be curtailed.

How many places should be provided within universities?

What functions should universities be performing?

Who should make decisions about universities?

These questions are closely interrelated. If there are limited additional resources, should expansion of numbers take priority over maintaining present levels of quality? What should be the relative priorities between teaching and research, between courses oriented to job training or employable skills and those aiming at a general education, and between concentrating upon the study of Canadian issues and problems and studies of a more universal or international focus?

On the overriding question as to how decisions about universities are to be made, Queen's position is clear. The fruits of learning and discovery which the university can bestow on society can be made only by free minds with wide freedom to range. Public funds can be effective in support of this freedom only if the individual university is free from external controls over the internal management of its affairs.

That does not mean a licence for universities to be inefficient, to change policies capriciously, or to disregard the needs of society. Universities must, of course, account responsibly for their use of public resources. But at the same time they must be protected from the deadening impact of the tendency for modern governments to translate accountability into ever-increasing bureaucratic control and regulation over the details of university operations.

We therefore need strong buffer organizations... to reduce the need for direct government intervention, yet guard effectively the public interest. We must resist the pressures from any side to impose a centralized organization or pattern of uniformity upon universities which would deprive society of the choice amongst diverse and distinctive institutions. Perhaps most important, in the current review of federal-provincial fiscal arrangements relating to universities which began during the summer of 1976, we must urge that, in addition to provincial objectives, national objectives for universities receive attention commensurate with their importance.

Faculty Citizenship

There is an issue which carries even stronger emotional overtones than Canadian Studies -- that of faculty citizenship. While not conceding for a moment that academic attention should focus exclusively on Canada or that Canadian citizenship is a necessary concomitant of genuine interest in things Canadian, and while emphasizing that we owe it to our students to provide them with the best teachers available, whatever their nationality, we have been careful to preserve a balance in faculty appointments. For some years, as a result of Principal Deutsch's initiative, all faculties have made a practice of giving preference to Canadians where qualifications and experience were more or less equal. That policy, which I have reaffirmed, and the adoption of Canadian citizenship by many of our continuing members of faculty who came as landed immigrants have produced a significant shift from the proportions Principal Deutsch reported in 1972/73:

Citizenship	1972/3	1975/6
Canadian	65%	77%
American (U.S.A.)	10%	9%
British	16%	8%
Other	9%	6%

Buildings of Special Merit

The Committee on Campus Planning established a Subcommittee on Buildings of Special Merit, and it recently completed an inventory of buildings owned by Queen's that were not originally designed for university purposes. The inventory comments on the significance of each building and will be used as a guide by the Committee on Campus Planning in recommending sites for future buildings.

Status of Women: Remuneration, advancement

Alongside questions of citizenship, we must also be sensitive to the provision of opportunities for women on the faculty. While the current severe financial limitations on new appointments permit little scope for increasing the proportion of women, those who do hold appointments must be assured of the same opportunities for remuneration and advancement as men.

Consequently, as recommended by the Principal's Committee on the Status of Women at Queen's University in 1974, last autumn I appointed a review committee, chaired by Prof. Kathleen Morand, to inquire into our progress in this specific regard for women holding academic appointments. The work of this committee should be finished by the end of 1976.

On the broader question of general progress made in implementing the wide range of recommendations made by the original Principal's Committee, I have established a standing Advisory Review Committee on the Status of Women, chaired by Dr. Jean Alexander. After three years the need for continuing such a body will be reviewed.

Admission Policies: Assistance for Third World?

Questions relating to admissions recur each year but are overlaid with different emphasis or new issues. Among the qualities which students bring to the university, two are most important; the cultural milieu from which they come and the extent of their preparation for the studies they undertake.

At Queen's it has been settled policy for many years that a culturally and geographically diversified student body is one of the essential conditions for the provision of a well-rounded university education. For several decades, with minor fluctuations, about 80 per cent of our students have come from homes in Ontario, the total from within Canada has been about 93 per cent, and 6 to 7 per cent have come from abroad. Bearing in mind the obligations of the university to its several constituencies -- provincial, national and international -- the Senate has reaffirmed its support for the degree of diversity achieved in recent years and endorsed efforts to ensure that it is maintained in the future.

In view of this affirmation we were naturally concerned about the effect on foreign student enrolment of the announcement by the Minister of Colleges and Universities in May that the formula fee (i.e. the standard fee to be deducted from the BIU value in calculating the government grant) for foreign students enrolling for the first time after January 1977 will be $750 per term. If this fee were levied, an undergraduate student would pay $1,500 annually and a graduate student enrolled for three terms, $2,250. These increases more than double, and for some graduate students nearly triple, present fees. While the new fees apply only to new students and not to Canadian citizens or landed immigrants, they are likely to deter substantial numbers of students who would otherwise come from abroad. It is important, therefore, that governments, particularly the federal government, think through the degree to which Canada can and should assist in the education of such students, particularly those from developing countries in the so-called Third World.

Enrolment: Women were half the 1975 undergrad admissions

The number of women enrolled in professional faculties continues to increase, most notably in the Faculty of Applied Science where there were 115 in 1975-76 compared with 40 two years ago. Women now account for about one-third of the enrolment in Medicine, one-quarter in Law and one-fifth in Business. Of the total admissions into first-year undergraduate work for all faculties taken together, the proportion of women reached 50% in September 1975.

The Recycling of Ontario Hall

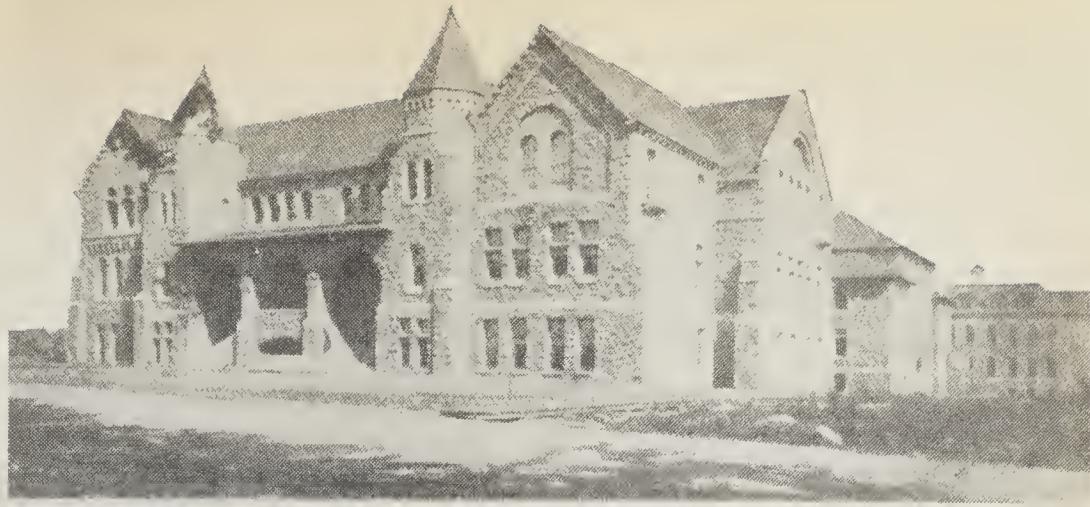

Ontario Hall at the age of 73, with Jeffery Hall's mathematical sculpture in the foreground. On the outside, one of the few changes is an 'attic' air-conditioner. Inside, it has been altered to house Physics, Geology, Chemical Engineering, Geography and now Art, with 'side pockets' for navigation classes, registration photography, weather bureau records, mathematics and postal services.

Despite the heavy construction program of the last 20 years, the heart of the campus remains largely unchanged. When graduates return for their 50th and 60th reunions, they can recognize the buildings where they took classes and which look the same as they did half a century ago — Old Arts, Summerhill, Old Medical, Kingston Hall, Miller, Fleming and Nichol, for instance.

A prime example is Ontario Hall, now being converted into a home for the Art Department, one of Queen's fastest-growing disciplines. It still presents the same outward appearance as when it emerged as an instant landmark in 1903, with its graceful stone balustrades, turrets, and the now-ivied walls of Kingston limestone.

Originally erected by the Ontario Government at a cost of $81,000 to provide quarters for the Department of Physics (then in the School of Mines), Ontario Hall has also housed Geology and Mineralogy and, later, Chemical Engineering and Geography. Mathematics had a corner there for a while, as the Post Office still does, and a geological and mineralogical museum was located in part of the basement. The School of Navigation held classes there as well.

Within these precincts R.D. Bradfield practised his arcane skills as an instrument maker for upwards of 30 years, and Ernie Harris, technician, kept records for the government weather bureau and took pictures for the Registrar's Office of all the first-year students.

With high ceilings, wooden floors and stairs and drafty stairwells, the building was probably the number one fire hazard on campus. It is little wonder that smoking was strictly verboten; if it could have been enforced, there might have been a ban on smoking anywhere in the immediate neighborhood! It speaks well for law and order, to say nothing of good luck, that there never was a fire in the building.

Now Ontario Hall has been fire-proofed. Gone are the undulating, highly polished floors and the wooden stairs which generations of students had worn into saucer-shaped contours. For its newest transformation, Ontario Hall has regained much of its original interior gracefulness. Much of what became impractical for lecture halls has regained favour for art studios, reading rooms and workshops. False ceilings, once a modernizing touch, have disappeared, giving back the full scale of the arched windows. The original skylight has been uncovered and is an asset to young painters and sculptors in the 'attic' studios.

In the process have been exorcized the spirits of Dr. A.L. Clark, Dr. L. F. Goodwin, Dr. J.A. Gray and others who held dominion there for so many years. The building now enters upon a new era of usefulness on behalf of one of the newest departments in the old Alma Mater.

His colleague Herbert T. Kalmus, inventor of Hollywood's technicolor process, began his experiments with colour photography in Ontario Hall.

Dr. L.F. Goodwin (seated right) founded what has been called the first real department of Chemical Engineering in the British Empire. It was in Ontario Hall in 1922. He was on faculty from 1909 till his death in 1944, and "his students were well regarded by the leaders on Canadian industry" (Review, Oct. 1944).

The Queen's English

Literacy among Undergraduates in the Faculty of Arts and Science

1975-1976

When it came to written English, only one out of every 100 Queen's students were 'literate' when they received their three-year degrees from the Faculty of Arts and Science last year.

Of the rest, 32.2% were "reasonably literate" and the remainder were either "illiterate" or "semi-literate".

Those are the findings of a study headed by Queen's English Professor Colin Norman, published in September under the title The Queen's English.

Funded by a $6,000 grant from the Ontario Universities Program for Instructional Development, and assisted by Queen's staff and students, Dr. Norman, Arts '61, M.A. '65 (Ph.D., London), compiled the 106-page report after testing 800 undergraduates in 1975-76. Final examination papers of students in first, third and fourth years were graded for style, organization and other indications of writing ability by Dr. Norman, his assistant, Mrs. Stella Wynne-Edwards, and 16 professors of English.

To round out the picture, Dr. Norman circulated questionnaires to first-year students and faculty members. Of the 416 students who replied, more than half said that their secondary school had inadequately prepared them for the standard of writing in first-year Queen's courses. Students complained about little or no training in grammar and composition, lack of long written assignments in Grade 13, and the failure of teachers to mark exercises constructively.

Responses to the faculty questionnaires also indicated a substantial concern about the deficiencies of first-year students in terms of ability to read with intelligence and understanding. The study concludes that "university standards and requirements for writing do come as a shock to many students." As one professor remarked, "My feeling is that those who write well have less analytic knowledge of why they write well, and those who write badly are harder to help for the same reason."

Dr. Norman compared Grade 13 English marks of first-year students to their writing performance in Queen's examinations. Those who had averaged 80% in Grade 13 English averaged only 67% when their writing was evaluated at university.

Professor Norman also studied the writing of students graduating in four-year Honours programs (more than half of those graduating in Arts and Science). He found "cause for satisfaction"; almost 75% of these students wrote well or reasonably well. For this group, performance was judged "impressive, and probably as good or better than ever."

However, the results for students graduating from the three-year general programs were pronounced "disturbing". Virtually half these students wrote either badly or poorly, and an additional 14% wrote less than satisfactorily.

"Unless some action is taken, Queen's will continue to graduate large numbers of students whose performance — at least in written English — is an embarrassment," Dr. Norman says.

Now that a diagnosis has been undertaken, what does the doctor prescribe? The study recommends to the Faculty of Arts and Science a number of possible remedies. These include Queen's taking an active lead in bringing problems of literacy to the attention of the high schools, elementary schools and the Ministry of Education; screening applicants for admission; mounting a more ambitious program in remedial English; providing more help within the framework of existing university courses; and raising the minimum academic standards for the three-year general degree.

"The basic purpose of this investigation," says Professor Norman, "is to encourage informed and lively debate within the academic community at Queen's."

Media attention through news stories, editorials and even cartoons suggests that the debate is unlikely to be confined to Queen's.

From the Authors— A FINAL PERSPECTIVE

Perhaps the most significant conclusion of this entire study is that a disturbing number of students, in various categories, write either poorly or badly. But is this new news or old? Does it contradict the judgments by members of staff that standards of literacy exhibit only some slight decline?

We think not. The ability to write well is rare, and Queen's has always had its share of students who write either badly or incomprehensibly. A few members of staff, judging from comments we received, remember a golden age when verbs and nouns always agreed, when participles never dangled, and modifiers were never misplaced. Others take the more sanguine view. Some students will always have a certain cheerful irreverence towards written English, and a high disregard for even the most fundamental principles of composition. This may well continue to be the case, and despite the most well-intentioned, costly, and cunning programs in remedial English we might conceivably devise.

The following paragraphs are among the extracts chosen to illustrate the performance of first-year students writing under exam conditions. The test was in introductory English. This student received a failing grade.

(Subject: Shakespeare, King Lear)

All the way throughout this novel innocent people were put through terrible and meaningless ordeals that in no way were deserving. For What purpose did poor Gloucester deserve his suffering. No where in the book King Lear did poor Gloucester do anything to deserve the wretched treatment that was incurred upon him in this novel. Gonerill, the daughter who actually loved her father (Lear) the most is severely chastised throughout the play simply because her stupid nieve father could not understand the true meaning of her words of love to him.

Gonerills death by hanging was so close to being saved — it may be assumed that the Gods didn't want to stop it as someone so true should only be with them. The ending of this great tradgedy is to point out that the convictions portrayed through this novel should not be counted on.

Some Observations on the Study

From an editorial in the Globe and Mail, Toronto:

"The Ontario Government is currently undertaking a $500,000 province-wide study of student illiteracy; it should be completed some time in November. It won't bring happy tidings but, with any luck, the results will indicate something about the origin of the problem. We won't be surprised if the decline in student literacy can be directly related to the 'living and learning' philosophy of education and to an essay-marking system that pays little heed to writing quality if the subject being tested is not English."

"...For 10 years, creativity has been the watchword for education in Ontario. Creativity at any price. Well, it's a fine word and an even finer principle, but only if you can spell it and use it properly in a sentence."

Principal Ronald L. Watts in the Whig-Standard, Kingston:

"It is important that we not castigate high schools and public schools. Universities can't just blame high schools and wash their hands of it."

"He said that it would be unfair to point a finger at any one factor and lay the blame there. Students' inability to write well is partly the blame of public schools, high schools, universities and partly the blame of 'our present intellectual culture and climate' in which people 'perhaps read and write less'."

Multiculturalism

A national survey of attitudes toward multiculturalism was conducted for Multiculturalism Directorate of the Department of the Secretary of State by Professors John W. Berry and Rudy Kalin of Queen's Psychology Department and Prof. D.M. Taylor of McGill. The survey involved in-depth interviews with 1,859 households across Canada, concentrating particularly on the attitudes of Canadians of French and British origin.

The following are excerpts from a summary of the survey presented at the Second Canadian Conference on Multiculturalism. (The full summary is available in the Report on that conference.)

General Conclusions

The study indicated a "fairly positive climate for multiculturalism in Canada," but also concluded that "it may well be that Canadians think that the idea of multiculturalism is good, that some of the programs are fun, but that they do not want to get involved."

"Although some specific groups appear to be less acceptable than others, both as immigrants and as established ethnocultural groups, and some multicultural programs appear to be less desirable than others, there is an overall positive orientation toward multiculturalism and an overall tolerance in the population as a whole."

Immigration

The survey looked at attitudes toward immigration as well as multiculturalism.

"The majority of Canadians see primarily positive consequences of immigration and are willing to accept new immigrants. Although there is discrimination against immigrants in the sense that own group members are preferred over immigrants, there is no outright avoidance."

"The more negative attitudes toward immigration among lower status people may be reinforced to the extent that they see immigrants as competitors for scarce jobs. A deterioration in the economy may make such attitudes even more negative," states the report.

Socio-economic Status

Socio-economic status also had a major bearing on attitudes.

"Consistently, on attitudes toward immigration, on measures of discrimination, on multicultural ideology and program attitudes on scales of ethnocentrism and authoritarianism, and on a number of attitudes toward specific ethnic groups, those respondents of lower socio-economic status exhibited less tolerant attitudes."

Tolerance

The report says, "Although explicit racism may not be characteristic of Canadians, race — visible physical differences among groups — is nevertheless an important dimension in the perception of groups."

"Racism may be endorsed by only a minority of Canadians. However, it may become a problem for the implementation of multiculturalism and immigration policies to the extent that the racist minority becomes vocal and active."

French-English Relations

The data also showed positive, mutual attitudes toward each other between English and French-Canadians. "Asked about their attitudes in the context of multiculturalism," these two groups "demonstrate a relative similarity and mutual acceptance." However, "asked about their attitudes in the context of biculturalism, a relative dissimilarity and mutual rejection become manifest."

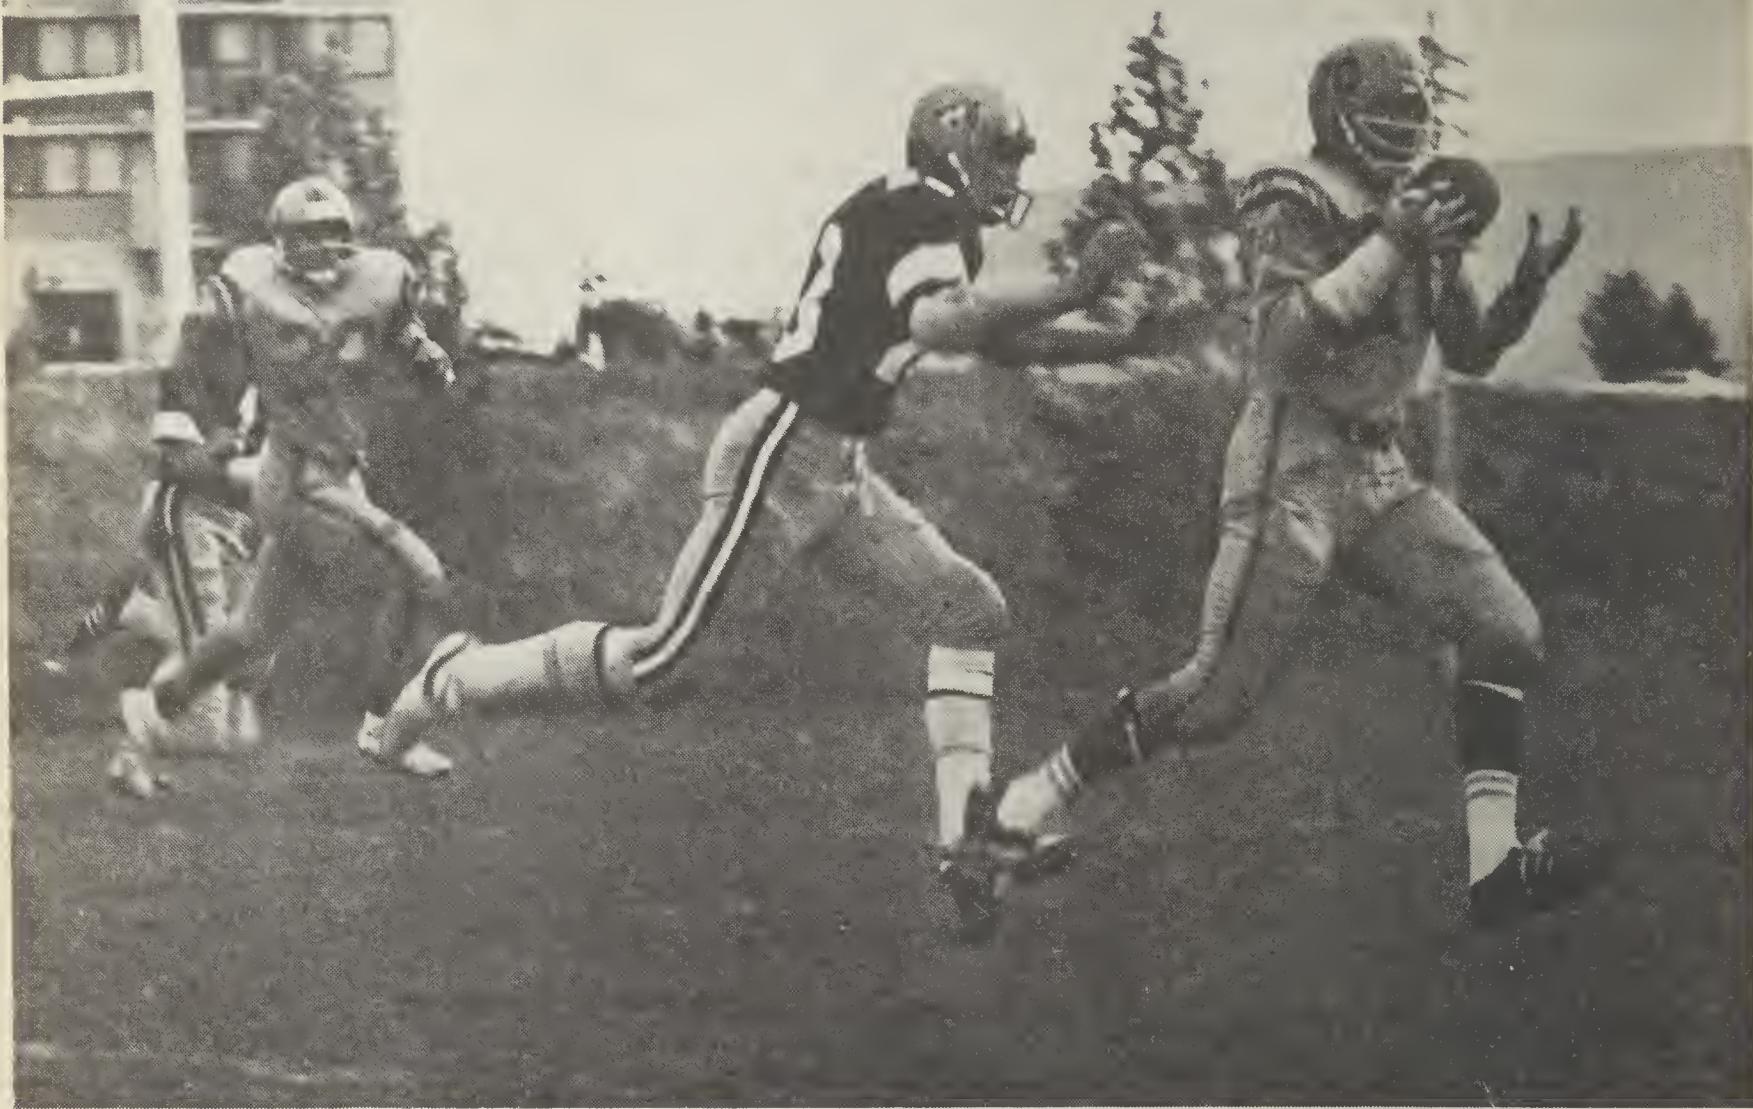

"If this is the case, the multicultural context may actually promote bi-cultural acceptance; however, it may do so at the risk that the charter groups reject the 'other ethnic' groups."

The survey found that, among anglophones, there were few differences in attitude between Anglo-celtic Canadians and "other ethnic" Canadians. However, some "other ethnic" groups did show less positive attitudes toward the consequences of multiculturalism. The report states: "The desire to retain one's own ethnicity is not necessarily associated with a general tolerance of ethnic diversity."

The study also showed that French-Canadians were less favourable in their attitudes toward immigration and multiculturalism than English-Canadians, and that the attitudes of French-Canadians outside Quebec were very similar to French-Canadians living in Quebec. Similarly anglophone attitudes toward multiculturalism were similar across Canada, although Atlantic residents had more negative attitudes toward immigration than other anglophones.

The 1976 Golden Gaels

A Memorable Season; a New Coach

BIG CATCH. End Keith Taggart hauls in a 28-yard pass from quarterback Doug Latham in the fourth quarter of the Gaels' Reunion game with the Ottawa GeeGees. The pass completion helped set up the Gaels' touchdown by Tony Manastersky. On Oct. 29, Queen's upset the previously undefeated GeeGees 19-0, narrowly missing a play-off spot.

By Peter Watts, Arts '75

The 1976 edition of the Queen's Golden Gaels will be remembered for a number of reasons — not just because of their record, but because they are the first team to play for someone other than Frank Tindall in three decades. Frank retired last year and has been succeeded by 44-year-old Doug Hargreaves.

If hard work is any indication, Queen's is indeed fortunate to have coach Hargreaves directing its football program. Doug has done a super job since beginning duties on June 1st. He has taken a group of veterans, blended them with a good crop of first-year performers, and come up with a team of which Queen's can be proud. More than 8,000 fans were on hand for the Reunion '76 game on October 16th. The Gaels dropped a 26-7 decision to the number-one-ranked Ottawa GeeGees. The seven points scored by the Gaels were the first allowed by the GeeGees in five regular season games so far this year. In defense the Gaels were magnificent, playing one of their best games in about five years.

This year's edition of the Tricolor bears a distinctive northern influence. Coach Hargreaves hails from Sault Ste. Marie, as do defensive co-captain Norm Hagarty and rookie running back David Marinucci. The other co-captain is Mo St. Martin, an offensive tackle who is from Sudbury. The team's best athlete is Darrell Penner, a defensive back from Thunder Bay. His father is Bo-Bo Penner, who played for the Gaels back in the late 1940's.

For the first time in recent years, there are three rookies on the Gaels' roster who are products of the Kingston high school football system. Guard John Wilson, linebacker Paul Langevin and tight end Paul Hazlett all played high school ball for "Tic" Langlois, Arts, Phys Ed '60, at KCVI. All have a bright future at Queen's.

Newcomers include Peter Sops, an offensive tackle from Sarnia, who will become one of the best tackles Queen's has had, in the not-too-distant future.

*Mo St. Martin

*Norm Hagarty

*Darrell Penner

*Jim D'Andrea
East's chief thief*

Since the departure of Don Bayne in 1970, the quarterback position has been a problem with which first Frank Tindall and now Doug Hargreaves have had to cope. The job now belongs to veteran Doug Latham, a five-year man from Brockville, Ont. Doug has directed a Queen's offense which has averaged more than 300 yards a game this year. That might not seem like much, but when you look at the average over the past few years, the figure becomes a little more impressive. It also points up the improvements which have been made. In particular, offensive line coach Bill Miklas has done a good job with veterans St. Martin, Keith Taggart, Randy Edgeworth, Doug Lowry, Pat Plishka, Kevin Thompson and Paul Shugart.

The offensive backfield has been plagued by injuries. Marinucci started well but separated his shoulder October 9 in Montreal against McGill.

Fullback Jim Duncan hasn't had the kind of year he had last season, when he rushed for more than 700 yards. Bobby Vanderwater, the smallest guy on the team at 5'6", played a fine game against Carleton in September but then hurt his ankle.

On defense, two members of last year's national champion Ottawa GeeGees, linebacker Mike O'Connor and defensive end Jeff Wood, have made major contributions to a tough Gaels defense. Co-captain Hagarty and defensive back Penner are the core of the unit which held Ottawa to 26 points on October 16. The undefeated GeeGees had racked up 172 points in their first four games before meeting Queen's. The front four of Wood, Dick Bakker, Murray Buchanan and rookie Jim Muller have also done a commendable job under the guidance of ex-Gael Merv Daub. Daub, who played for Queen's in the mid-1960's and is now a professor in the School of Business, came out this fall to help Coach Hargreaves, and his presence has made no small difference in the performance of the defensive unit. Defensive coach John Thomson has spent most of his time with the defensive backs. Penner is an all-Canadian, and both Larry Small and Jim D'Andrea have shown significant improvement this year. D'Andrea is the chief thief in the Eastern Conference this year with a total of five interceptions.

This year's Ontario football scene has two divisions. In the East, Ottawa, Carleton, Queen's, McGill, Concordia and Bishop's play against each other. The West division has eight clubs: Toronto, York, McMaster, Western, Windsor, Guelph, Waterloo and Laurier. The West division is the most competitive: Toronto, Western, Windsor and Laurier are all battling for the top spot. As of mid-October, they all had 3-1 win-loss records. In the East, of course, it's all Ottawa. If the GeeGees win the division, they'll meet the winner of the Atlantic Conference for the right to go to the College Bowl in Toronto in November. The West winner plays the Far West winner to decide the second College Bowl team.

Meanwhile, at Queen's the search goes on for a proven quarterback. Ottawa rookie Ted Bellinger may be the answer, but it will be at least a year before he can step in. Gaels will also have to think about replacing all-Canadian Darrell Penner when he runs out of eligibility this year; that will be no small challenge. A breakaway running back is also a top priority on Coach Hargreaves' shopping list.

Coach Hargreaves looking for some alumni help

At this writing, it has been decided that Doug Hargreaves will be making a tour following the college football season. Details aren't yet available, but the coach will be travelling to areas across the country to meet with alumni and talk to high school athletes interested in Queen's. Plans will be sent to alumni Branch presidents as soon as they are available.

It is hoped that all interested alumni will make an effort to attend one or more of the gatherings. Queen's grads have always been noted for their willingness to support their alma mater in all her endeavours. Under general university constraints, the football program at Queen's has slipped badly in recent years; it requires a considerable amount of work by those of us who are interested to restore it to a proper Queen's standard. I hope that all of you who are interested will be able to help. Cha gheill!

All's Well; it's Okey Doke

by Bernard Burkom,
Assistant Professor,
Department of Drama

A scene from ALL'S WELL: student Barbara Edwards as Helena and Ted Bairstow, Arts '71, as the King of France.

As part of a continuing project which analyzes plays by producing them, Queen's Department of Drama was awarded a Wintario grant this past summer to support prominent guest artists in residence at Queen's.

The particular project that was funded revolved around a final-year undergraduate course which I organized. Basically, it focused on examining the two major modes of producing a classical, period play — textual fidelity versus free interpretation. In the first instance, the production strives to manifest faithfully the playwright's original intentions and values. In the second, the production quite freely emphasizes whatever contemporary values the play stimulates.

The play we chose was All's Well that Ends Well by William Shakespeare. Although it was selected by Tyrone Guthrie to open the initial Stratford Festival (and will be revived by Robin Phillips next season) and although it was Shaw's favourite Shakespearean play, All's Well has not fared well with critics or audiences. Its mixture of magic and reality, of domestic tragedy and bar-room farce, has been viewed as too rough to make the play fully entertaining.

To tackle this difficult problem, the foremost living textual director of Shakespeare, Michael MacOwan, was brought from England, with the help of our grant. In a distinguished career spanning five decades, MacOwan has directed at the Old Vic, Stratford, the West End, Broadway and the St. Lawrence Centre. A former Principal of the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art and the first Drama Director of the Arts Council of Great Britain, he has recently returned to acting on BBC-TV. In recognition of his services to theatre, the Queen recently made Michael MacOwan a Commander of the British Empire.

His Queen's production of All's Well proved quite a success with reviewers and audiences alike. One of the former termed it the Shakespearean production with 'the greatest clarity' he'd ever seen. One of the latter, an astounded matron, remarked that "Shakespeare's about real people. Until now I thought it was just poetry!"

Scenery for this production was designed by Russ Waller, Associate Professor (Design) at Queen's. Costumes were by Debra Hanson, a free-lance designer most recently with the Neptune Theatre in Halifax. Currently Ms Hanson is offering courses at both Queen's and Bishops University, while designing shows in Montreal. Original music was by Richard Bronskill of Kingston.

Just as Shakespeare used a Boccaccio story as his source for All's Well, so the Department of Drama used Shakespeare's play as source material for the second production in this project. Under the direction of Gary Wagner, Assistant Professor (Acting) at Queen's, the cast improvised a new play around the characters, situations and themes found in All's Well. It was called Okey Doke. I directed and designed it, rearranging Russ Waller's All's Well platform set.

To ensure that this freely improvised play contained a unified and high-quality dramatic structure, professional Canadian playwright Carol Bolt was brought in to help the students shape their play. Her plays, including Cyclone Jack, Shelter, Buffalo Jump, Maurice, Gabe, Red Emma and Bethune, have been produced in theatres across Canada and on CBC-TV. It was Ms Bolt who wrote the dialogue for Okey Doke and established the period for the production: the 1940s.

Okey Doke was set in Kingston, Ont., and London, England, during the early years of World War II. It took a light-hearted look at Canadians growing up against the background of war. As one critic put it, "The main things that struck me were the accuracy of the dialogue, the honesty of the characterizations, and the precision with which every-

Both shows played in Kingston and then toured Southern Ontario in late July and early August. Engagements were arranged in Ottawa, Napanee, Belleville, Peterborough, Petrolia and London. Also, All's Well was revived on campus on September 24 and 25 to enable the entire university community to benefit from this summer's experience; it played to SRO audiences.

Just over $8,000 was raised for this project. Encouraged by Dean Duncan Sinclair, Drama Department Head Maurice Breslow, and MPP Keith Norton, the provincial Ministry of Culture and Recreation, through Wintario, provided $6,000 for visiting artists. An additional $1,800 in Wintario funds went to the sponsoring theatres to help defray the cost of the tour. The AMS contributed $300 towards production costs.

The 15 students who participated in the three-month project put in upwards of 70 hours a week and earned three course credits. They not only acted both shows, but built all the scenery, costumes and properties, as well. As a result of their work on this project, several graduating students were offered positions in theatres and schools in Canada and England.

Others working on the project included Anne Hardcastle, British actress and former Drama Professor at Queen's, who gave voice lessons; Paul Moulton, Arts '74, Technical Director at Queen's; Professors John Baxter, W.C. Ferguson and Barry Thorne of the English Department, who participated in seminars on All's Well; and Laurel Rivard, St. Lawrence College, and Heather Kemp, who assisted with costume construction.

Although compressing the schedule to fit in with the Olympic Games had some deleterious effects, this project was extremely successful. Two high-calibre productions were mounted in seven Ontario communities, a number of young performers learned much about their craft, and a new play was created.

A tense moment in Michael MacOwan's "textually faithful" production of ALL'S WELL, again with Edwards and Bairstow. The British director, a foremost expert on Shakespeare, was brought to Queen's with the help of a Wintario grant.

The Class of '80 has arrived!

Orientation organizers say this year's charitable events were outstanding successes. Along with Engineering Society projects, Charity Day, sponsored by the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society as part of Orientation Week, raised an estimated $6,700 in support of worthy causes and did a great deal to strengthen ties between students and Kingston residents.

Some 300 first-year Artsci students hired themselves out as "slaves" to mop floors, clean basements, wash windows, hoe gardens and even demolish a cottage wall. Proceeds of $1,100, four times the amount raised last year, were divided between Camp Outlook (a student volunteer project which provides 10-day canoe trips for underprivileged Kingston teens) and Amnesty International (a non-political organization affiliated with the U.N. and dedicated to protecting human rights, especially those of political prisoners). Charity Day organizer Michelle Meyer, Artsci '79, said demand for first-year student slaves was so strong that some senior students also volunteered to work.

The Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation will receive $1,600 in funds collected from the annual Shinerama, the frosh shoe-shining event.

Another group of 200 students, bearing flowers donated by four local florists, toured hospitals, senior citizen homes and schools for disturbed children. Fifty frosh entertained patients at Kingston Psychiatric Hospital with a variety show.

Another feature of Charity Day was a road clean-up organized in co-operation with the City Works Department. Student work crews were dispatched in city trucks throughout Kingston to pick up litter. Fifty of the frosh who obviously enjoyed the garbage detail have volunteered some of their free time in the coming year to help clean up the waterfront area.

Together with mopping, shining and visiting, first-year students also donated 300 pints of blood at a clinic set up in Grant Hall on Charity Day.

The Engineers had their Orientation's civic projects as well set up as their famous scavenger hunt. For the past two years, frosh from the Faculty of Applied Science have "got their feet wet" by helping in the construction of a breakwater at Lake Ontario Park. In all, 150 engineering frosh spent an afternoon carrying mud and stones, supplied by Kingston's Parks and Recreation Department, into the lake in an effort to extend the breakwater and protect the beach.

In support of the Rotary Club's community projects, Science frosh also spent an evening selling peanuts door to door. In this annual Peanut Drive, the frosh collected almost $4,000 in their purple hands.

Queen's Class of '80 has arrived, in more ways than one.

The talent show "Sobriety" is part of the getting-acquainted program. "Love a Nurse" say the T-shirts. Only one of these frosh is really a nurse.

A full house of Frosh in Grant Hall rise to their feet to meet and greet their new Principal.

Fine Start For Queen's Year (from an editorial in the Whig-Standard)

Long before the shaded streets and the beautiful parks of our fair city array themselves in their splendour of autumn colour, the citizens are always well aware that the fall season is upon us.

For suddenly, with September, comes the annual influx of university students. The sleepy Queen's University campus is alive again; there is something different about the activity along Princess street; the train station and bus depot are busier; the trailer rental business hums.

Perhaps because Kingston is a small city with a student population out of all proportion to the city's size, the campus set has a higher profile here than in places like Toronto, Winnipeg or Montreal. So a little rowdyism, at least in the minds of some citizens, becomes a lot of rowdyism; a small parade becomes a big parade; a small demonstration becomes a riot.

But what is a fact is that our varsity students add much to the character of this city and we would be poorer if we did not have them.

We are referring to many fine projects that the students of Queen's embarked upon with great success during their recent orientation week...

...This is a commendable record. It is a far cry from the activities of the not-too-distant past when all orientation meant on most university campuses was noise, hijinks, dislocation of traffic, hazing and a steady round of dances. We hope the new tradition will survive and grow.

An early favorite: the sidewalk cafe, closest thing to the old coffee shop in the new John Deutsch University Centre.

On a Golden Note...

(From an article by Garry Lewarne in The Queen's Journal, Sept. 16)

"Good things that have happened to Engineering Orientation concern mostly the scavenger hunt. In previous years, Engineering frosh ripped out toilets from restaurants and stole trucks to complete their list. This year, the Orientation Committee bought the toilet bowls, painted them gold, and hid them. Trucks were taken off the list. Also, the scavenger hunt was held in the afternoon instead of at night. This has made a huge difference, according to Kim Sturgess, Sc. '77. The only items stolen this year were numerous parking tickets from cars. However, the Engineers collected those and paid them off at City Hall. Consequently, the $151 for the tickets was the lowest scavenger hunt damage expense in years."

Renovated houses offer new student homes to 42

Queen's housing plan, Project V, is alive and well. That well-known frame triplex at the corner of Union and Alfred streets was completely renovated this summer and was ready for 13 new student tenants about mid-September. Two other houses near campus — a brick duplex at the corner of Union and University Ave. and a brick house at 168 University — were ready by October 1 with seven more apartments for 29 students.

Originally, the architectural conception of Project V was an imaginative one which would have included many of the existing homes in the block bounded by Union, University, Earl and Alfred, and would have filled in with new construction designed to suit the character of the neighbourhood. Since current high interest rates prohibit major construction projects, the renovation of older buildings became the only practical alternative. Last spring the Board of Trustees authorized alterations to the three older structures. Most of the conversion work has been done by the staff of Queen's Physical Plant.

In the Union St. triplex, each 'house' has become one self-contained apartment. Two have four bedrooms (and rent for $400 a month) and the other has five ($475). Each includes kitchen facilities, new floor covering and curtains, an up-to-date oil furnace and new electrical wiring throughout.

Over the years, many alumni have lived in this old frame triplex at the corner of Union and Alfred streets. It was renovated inside and out by the University this summer as part of the Queen's V Project, and some of its new tenants, above, moved in about mid-September.

MARTY MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP

Maximum Value $4,000

Established by the Queen's University Alumnae Association in memory of Dr. Aletta Marty

Any woman graduate of Queen's University may hold the scholarship, which is awarded annually for a year of study and research. A committee chosen by the Alumnae Association makes the award. The scholarship may be awarded to the same person for a second year. The committee reserves the right not to make the award in any given year.

Conditions of Award

The criteria for awarding the Marty Memorial Scholarships have been broadened to reflect the changing patterns of learning. In addition to graduate research programs, other worthwhile projects submitted by women graduates of Queen's will be considered for the honour and the award. An endeavour which contributes to the advancement of knowledge, contributes to society, or allows creative expression, will be accepted for consideration by the committee. All applicants for the scholarship must demonstrate to the committee's satisfaction the following:

- (1) adequate background and the necessary experience for the project;
- (2) feasibility of the project;
- (3) description of work leading to the program;
- (4) evidence of preparation;
- (5) as complete an outline as possible of the plan and method of pursuing the program;
- (6) where applicable, evidence that co-operation is obtainable from individuals or institutions involved.

The acceptance of the scholarship obligates the recipient to pursue the project during the term of the award. The successful candidate must send to the Chairman an interim report and a final report. Normally, the first instalment of the scholarship is payable at the beginning of the program, and the final instalment is paid on receipt of the interim report.

Applications

Application forms may be obtained from the Registrar, Queen's University, Kingston, Ont. K7L 3N6. They must be returned to the Registrar by March 1, 1977, with a detailed statement of the proposed project, as outlined above, and transcripts of work done at universities other than Queen's.

Three professors elected Royal Society Fellows

Three Queen's professors, all of them authors, have been elected to Fellowship in the Royal Society of Canada for excellence in their fields of work: Dr. Donald Akenson, History Department; Dr. David Easton, the Sir Edward Peacock Professor of Political Science; and Dr. David Smith, head of the Department of Economics.

They are among 55 distinguished Canadian humanists and scientists invited this year to join the 850-member organization. The Society, founded in 1882, is a national academy that recognizes achievements in the humanities, social sciences and the sciences by election to fellowship, awarding of medals, prizes and scholarships.

World's microbiologists congregate at Queen's

More than 230 microbiologists from five continents met at Queen's early in September for the ninth annual meeting of the Society for Invertebrate Pathology.

About 80% of all animal species on earth are invertebrates (spineless creatures), the majority being insects and marine life such as shrimps, crayfish and clams. "Disease States in Invertebrates" was the theme of the four-day colloquium. Delegates considered (a) the possibility of higher forms of life being infected by viruses of invertebrates and (b) the use of insect diseases to control harmful insects.

Weekend University

Queen's University at Kingston
Donald Gordon Centre

Dr. Peter Faulkner of Queen's Department of Microbiology and Immunology was one of three organizing co-chairmen.

Tapestry honours Deutsch

Toronto artist Helen Frances Gregor has been commissioned to create a memorial tapestry which will reflect the spirit and scope of Dr. John J. Deutsch's important place in Canadian history. The tapestry will hang in the central meeting place of the new university centre, which has been named for the former Principal.

Four Canadian corporations of which Dr. Deutsch was a director — Alcan Aluminum, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, F.P. Publications and INCO — are funding the work.

Mrs. Gregor, a graduate of the Royal College of Art, is head of textiles at the Ontario College of Art. Her husband Tibor worked closely with Dr. Deutsch on two conferences for the Economic Council of Canada. The artist describes her forthcoming tapestry as a textural expression of Dr. Deutsch's extended involvement in the industrial, economic and academic life of the nation.

Expected to measure 30 ft. wide by 10 ft. high when it is hung in the John Deutsch University Centre, the handwoven tapestry will be a combination of pure wool and coloured anodized aluminum bars, interlaced with academic hoods from the 17 universities which conferred honorary degrees on Dr. Deutsch.

The Weekend University at the Donald Gordon Centre for Continuing Education offers a unique approach to life-long learning and enjoyment among old friends, new acquaintances and scholars from Queen's faculty. Arrive on Friday evening for complimentary cocktail reception, dinner and opening session. Leave on Sunday after lunch. All-inclusive fee covers Friday evening reception, all gourmet meals, lodging and seminars. Bar available. Single: $100 per weekend. Couple: $175. Senior citizens and students: 15% discount

NOVEMBER 12-14 (Seminar 76-9)

CANADA'S RESOURCES: MINERAL, LAND, AIR AND WATER

What are they? How precious? Spend a weekend with experts discussing these vital questions. The seminar is organized by noted geographer Dr. G.K. Rutherford and will feature other Queen's and government experts from the fields of geology, geography, chemical engineering, biology and the environment.

NOVEMBER 19-21 (Seminar 76-10)

"COME, COME, YE SONS OF ART": MUSIC, LITERATURE AND ART IN LATE 17th CENTURY ENGLAND

Enjoy a cultural weekend of music (Purcell and others), plus the art and literature of the period. The seminar is under the direction of Dr. Rudolph Schnitzler, Queen's Music Department, and will include Professors Charles Pullen (literature) and J. Douglas Stewart (art). A concert by Queen's Chamber Singers in historic Kingston City Hall is included.

Write to: Dr. H.O. Helmers, Donald Gordon Centre, Queen's University, Kingston, Ont. K7L 3N6, or phone (613) 547-5529

FOLLOWED BY PUZZLED STARES. Keith Crawford, Arts '78, keeps in shape for Queen's cross-country skiing team on a pair of roller-skis imported from Norway by coach Jake Edwards. Besides schussing down University Ave., Keith often slaloms among the cars on a campus parking lot.

Two new Associate Deans

The School of Graduate Studies and Research has two new Associate Deans: Prof. C.M.D. Crowder (Graduate Studies) and Prof. J.C. Beal (Research Services). Each holds a half-time administrative appointment so that he may continue substantial teaching and research duties within his department. The appointments are for three years each (renewable) and were made on the advice of advisory search committees.

Professor Crowder came to Queen's in 1966 to teach Medieval History. Professor Beal has been with Queen's Department of Electrical Engineering since 1967. Together they succeed Prof. John Matthews, who had combined the two posts on a full-time basis, 1975-76, before returning to his work as senior editor of the Disraeli Project.

Peter Dorn: Judges like the look of his books

Peter Dorn, the University's graphic designer, submitted five books and won awards for three of them in the third annual Design Canada contest. From hundreds of recent Canadian publications, a panel of five judges selected a total of 20 books to receive the federally sponsored Look of Books awards.

The Dorn-Queen's winners were a booklet called Faculty of Medicine, an Agnes Etherington Art Centre exhibition catalogue, From Women's Eyes, and a book by John Barker, Strange Contrarieties, published by McGill-Queen's Press.

Books were judged for design excellence, relevance of design to the manuscript, and quality of paper and production in relation to the cost per book. Mr. Dorn has three other Look of Books awards — two from 1975 and one from 1974. He designs the covers of the Queen's Review and is currently designing Queen's! Queen's! Queen's!, Herb Hamilton's unofficial history of the last 40 years at the University.

Canada's competition laws: should they be amended?

About 80 leaders from business, industry, labour, universities, the legal profession and consumer groups met in closed session at the Donald Gordon Centre in September to exchange views on amending Canada's competition laws.

Queen's Faculty of Law sponsored the two-day conference, Chancellor Michener delivered the opening address, and the two keynote speakers were Lawrence Skeoch and Bruce D. McDonald, both experts on competition law and formerly faculty members at Queen's.

The conference focused on revisions to the Combines Investigation Act as proposed in the Skeoch-McDonald report entitled Dynamic Changes and Accountability in a Canadian Market Economy. Central issues considered were mergers, monopolies, competitive price policies, export and specialization agreements, governmental intervention in the economy, and the establishment of a National Market Board. The meeting's broader implications were that by amending existing laws, government can promote competition, prevent 'cornering the market' and thereby keep consumer prices lower.

LOST TRAILS

If you know where these graduates are now, will you please let the Alumni Office know?

Letters

Dear Ms Editor,
The report in the recent Alumni Review that "effective July 1, 1977, a new Chief Librarian will succeed Donald A. Redmond" is misleading.

Mr. Redmond, who has carried the heavy responsibilities of Chief Librarian since 1966, asked the Principal that his appointment in that position be reviewed and that there be a comprehensive examination of the administration and performance of the library.

Principal Watts therefore appointed a special committee chaired by me to advise him on the appointment (or reappointment) of a Chief Librarian, effective July 1977, and on the present direction and future development and organization of the Queen's University Library System.

H. MORRIS LOVE,
Vice-Principal (Services).
Queen's University

Dear Sirs:
The Alumni Review must be in error as to the dates of the first Iron Ring Ceremony. As far as Queen's Camp Three is concerned, I received the ring when I graduated in 1928, and am inclined to believe that the '27 graduates also went through the ceremony. The rings were certainly wrought iron, not cast iron, and I think we were told that the iron was from old Crimean War cannon.

Unfortunately mine rusted through while in India during World War II, and I had to hammer out another of chrome-moly aircraft tubing, which I still wear.

My real reason for writing, rather than nit-picking, is to find out whether there is any possibility of someone supplying me with a copy of the ritual, since sometime in the past nearly 50 years, mine has been lost.

At the Branches

Vancouver: to Alice, then Maureen's

The Vancouver Branch had a late summer rendezvous, family style, on Sept. 19 at Alice Provincial Park. Following an afternoon of swimming and boating, some families picnicked at the park and others accepted an invitation to barbecue at the home of Maureen McDougall, near Squamish. Organizer was Branch President John Parker, Arts '34.

Orillia grads meet the Principal

Although Orillia has no official branch at present, a number of alumni accepted an invitation to meet Principal Watts when he visited town to address the Canadian Club. Dr. C.W. Baugh, Med. '53, and Mrs. Baugh (Elspeth Wallace), Arts '49, hosted the reception at their home on the evening of Sept. 13. Murray Gill of Kingston, Director of Alumni Affairs, was also present.

Eating on East Mountain

The Hamilton alumni and alumnae joined up on Oct. 6 to eat a path along Woodside on Hamilton's East Mountain. Three Queen's couples hosted a progressive pot luck supper which began with punch at the home of Lloyd Williams, Sc. '49, and Nancy (Welton), Arts '50; continued with dinner and salad at the home of Gary Elliott, Sc. '54, and Judy (Ryerson), Arts, Phys Ed '55; and finished with dessert and coffee at the Loucks', Pete, Sc. '57, and Libby (McCutcheon), Arts '57. The fee was a dish for the pot luck supper, plus $1.00 per person.

Guelph hears Disraeli detective

Queen's grads were guests of the Humanities Association of Canada when John Matthews, Professor of English at Queen's, lectured at the University of Guelph on Oct. 26. Dr. Matthews recently discovered hundreds of previously unpublished letters by and to Benjamin Disraeli and is now one of the senior editors of Queen's interdisciplinary Disraeli Project.

After his lecture on the letters' discovery and their preparation for publication, the Guelph alumni held an informal wine and cheese party at the home of lawyer Alex Moon, Arts '48, and his wife Marg (Cream), also Arts '48.

Ottawa Memorial to Mary Elliott

The Alumnae Branch in Ottawa has initiated a fund at the University in memory of Mary E. Elliott, B.A. '49 (Biology). Miss Elliott, a former Branch president and a government mycologist for 28 years, was tragically murdered in September. At the time, she was immediate past president of the Canadian Botanical Society and Curator of the National Mycological Herbarium at the Central Experimental Farm. Details of the memorial fund will be published later.

The memorial was first announced when the Ottawa Alumnae met at the Chateau Laurier Hotel on Nov. 9. The occasion was Principal Watts' address to the Women's Canadian Club of Ottawa.

Toronto takes a new tack

Toronto alumnae and alumni gathered for tea and sherry on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 7, at the home of Gordon and Roz Stollery (Roslyn Kaye), Arts '70. The new executive explained how the Branch hopes to provide the University with alumni opinions on such academic and administrative matters as admissions policies, financial constraint and the status of women.

Toronto is continuing its stimulating program of speakers' luncheons, having heard Ontario Attorney General Roy McMurtry on Oct. 15 and anticipating a visit by Principal Watts on Nov. 19 (Hotel Toronto).

The speaker scheduled for Friday, Dec. 10, is Karl Jaffary, lawyer and former Toronto alderman.

Torontonians will recall that during his term of office (1969-74) he was leader of "the reform movement" in city politics. He is expected to comment on Toronto's civic elections, to be held just prior to his luncheon date.

On Monday, Nov. 22, there is a meeting for all grads and former students who would like to help Queen's with time and/or advice. For details on any events or policies, please call Kathy Owen at 445-0908.

Campus Garage Sale

Grant Hall Saturday, 25 September 9 am - 3 pm

Sponsored by Queen's Alumni - Kingston Branch

Here is a chance to clear your attic and support a worthwhile cause.

Donations accepted at Grant Hall, University Street entrance, September 22-24 from 4:30-8:30 pm. Or call for pickup at 547-5706.

-kitchen utensils, small furniture and decorative items-appreciated; i.e. lamps, records, chairs, tables, brooms, pots and pans, etc.

Then come out on the 25th for the sale that will make a home away from home.

As the poster suggests, the Kingston Branch found a way to combine service and profit through a 'garage sale' in Grant Hall this fall. It was a way for alumni and university staff to offer practical help to students, who have been badly hit both by inflation and a scarcity of summer jobs. Furniture and household items were priced to suit student budgets, and $800 was raised for alumni-sponsored activities.

They're a travelling road show called Queen's Liaison

It seems appropriate that two young Queen's alumni constitute the University's principal first contact with Ontario and Quebec secondary schools. As the Liaison team, Alice Thompson, Arts '69, and Jim Henderson, Arts '76, between them meet with students at 250 schools in Ontario and several more in Quebec. Their travels put them in personal contact with approximately 12,000 people, including students, parents and guidance teachers.

They not only convey the most recent information available on all aspects of Queen's; they report to the University the concerns and trends developing in the secondary schools. When they aren't on the road (as they are from late September to late January), the Liaison Officers meet about 1,500 student visitors to the campus and brief them on the best way to spend a day or two at the University.

On the travel side, they have the assistance of Padre A.M. Laverty, one of

MEMORIAL GIFTS TO QUEEN'S

How they are made

How they are used

Memorial gifts to the University in any amount for a variety of purposes are welcomed. However, to avoid — as far as possible — conflict with other ongoing campaigns at the University, solicitation is normally limited to the friends and associates of the persons being memorialized. Approval by the Principal is required prior to initiating a Queen's University memorial fund.

OPTIONS

- 1) Options in the form of scholarships, graduate fellowships, loan funds, bursaries, professorships, lectureships, equipment and furnishings, books and art, are available as means of commemorating a deceased person or an event. The donor may be an individual, a family, a class year, an association or other group.
- 2) In the establishment of separate endowment accounts, normally the minimum amount of capital which the University will accept is $1,000. On the basis of past experience, income from this amount might be expected over the long term to produce $70 to $80 annually.

SPECIAL OPTION

For modest gifts to the library, it is possible to identify individual books in perpetuity by affixing to them a special bookplate indicating the name of the person in whose memory the gift was made.

RESTRICTED GIFTS

Queen's has a tradition of accepting gifts for specific restricted purposes. However, experience has shown that unforeseen events can outmode a donor's intentions. It is therefore strongly recommended that authority be given to the University's Board of Trustees to adjust the use of gift funds as circumstances change, but to retain, as far as possible, the original intentions of the donor.

EXAMPLES OF MEMORIAL GIFTS

There are a number of ways of establishing and financing memorials:

- (a) For example, if one wished to establish a scholarship or graduate fellowship valued at, say, $3,500 per year, one should have in mind a gift to Queen's of around $50,000, to be permanently capitalized at that level so that only the income need be used each year.
- (b) A second method would be for the donor to agree to provide (or arrange for his estate to produce) each year a specified amount for a particular purpose. For example, a donor, without providing capital funds to the University, might agree to establish an annual lectureship in the $1,500 - $3,000 range, named for the donor or anyone whose memory he or she wishes to perpetuate.
- (c) A third commonly used option is for the donor to agree to make a lump-sum one-time investment in equipment and furnishings for a particular purpose — e.g., to furnish entirely a student lounge or dining room on the understanding that appropriate steps would be taken to memorialize a person or event in some tangible way.
- (d) A donor may make a substantial gift to a fund established to erect a new university building — a library addition, for example.

It's kind of nice to stand out.

Which is what Carrington Canadian does. But for many more good reasons than merely the look of the bottle. Carrington is distilled in small batches, aged and mellowed in seasoned oak casks; it's light in look and smooth in taste. Carrington, it's special, and, in our opinion, like no other whisky in the world.
